—The woman's prayer meeting will be held at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, which is a half-hour earlier than the usual time.

—Ninety per cent of all the people need to take a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season to prevent that run-down condition of the system which invites disease.

—Liberty street needs the attention of the street cleaning department very badly. There is plenty of material along that thoroughfare that would puncture the tires of bicycles.

—G. Q. Dolliver's property, corner of Watchung and Fairview avenues, has been greatly beautified and enhanced in value by the laying of a blue stone sidewalk on both avenues.

—The newly erected trolley poles along West Fourth street are being disfigured by chalk in the hands of boys. The boys should take warning and cease disfiguring the poles as it is a direct violation of the law.

—A. B. Clemens, formerly of Plainfield, and now educational secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of New Jersey, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. P. Ludwig Conde will render violin solos.

—A concert by the Cecilia Club, directed by Prof. E J. Fitzhugh, and assisted by Prof. P. Ludwig Conde, will be given in the Y. M.C. A. hall on Thursday evening, May 21st. The entertainment will be the seventh in the Y. M. C. A. Star course.

—On Sunday, May 31st, the Children of Mary of the St. Joseph's R. C. church will give a reception to the new candidates. Various countries will be represented by members of the society who will give recitations appropriate to each country. There will also be the crowning of the statue of the Blessed Virgin.

BASKING RIDGE.

Amzi Leonard brought suit against Albert Appleton to recover $200 for damages alleged to have been done by Appleton's horses grazing on his property. Appleton, who is a horse dealer, resides one mile from Basking Ridge, and allowed his horses to run into a field owned by Leonard. The case was tried Monday. The jury was out until 1 o'clock yesterday morning, when it came in with a verdict, awarding the complainant $20 damages. Appleton will probably carry the case to a higher court.

NEW MARKET.

The next meeting of the Father Light Missionary Society will be held on Saturday, May 30th, at the residence of Miss Emma Nelson.

Miss Bertha Shepherd has returned home from a visit with friends in Elizbeth.

THE OTHER ONE.

Sweet little maid with winsome eyes
That laugh all day through the tangled hair,
Gazing with baby looks so wise
Over the arm of the oaken chair,
Dearer than you is none to me,
Dearer than you there can be none;
Since in your laughing face I see
Eyes that tell of another one.

Here where the firelight softly glows,
Sheltered and safe and snug and warm,
What to you is the wind that blows,
Driving the sleet of the winter storm?
Round your head the ruddy light
Glints on the gold from your tresses spun,
But deep is the drifting snow to-night
Over the head of the other one.

Hold me close as you sagely stand,
Watching the dying embers shine;
Then shall I feel another hand
That nestled once in this hand of mine;
Poor little hand, so cold and chill,
Shut from the light of stars and sun,
Clasping the withered roses still
That hide the face of the sleeping one.

Laugh, little maid, while laugh you may,
Sorrow comes to us all, I know;
Better perhaps for her to stay
Under the drifting robe of snow.
Sing while you may your baby songs,
Sing till your baby days are done;
But oh, the ache of the heart that longs
Night and day for the other one!
—Harry Thurston Peck, in Bookman.

ROMANCE OF RED BUD.

How Deputy Sheriff Billy Hunt Got His Wife.

IT was a bright, sunny afternoon, but the inhabitants of Little Dutch did not waste a thought on the weather. Sunny afternoons are too common a spring feature in southern Kansas to excite even passing comment. Besides, the residents were assembled at the Rose of Kansas for a special and important purpose. The introduction of a meteorological topic would have been so foreign as to be an impertinence, and in consequence loaded with danger.

"As I was a sayin' when interrupted by the gentleman a representin' of the double-O-bar' brand, Little Dutch has got to pull itself together if it expects to retain its standing among the moonicipalities of the once bleedin' Kansas," said the speaker. "It's goin' to be a funny thing in current history if these spike bucks from Winfield, or Arkansas City, or any other town, is a-goin' to come down yere with a whoop an' a yell an' run off our hosses an' we do nothin but stick our noses in the mud an' let on we liked it. If we want to, gentlemen, we can raise stock for the whole southern tier of counties. Jest let the notion go abroad once that all us folks settled at Little Dutch for was to raise hosses for other folks to steal, an' you can string all your money on the proposition that they will be dead willin' to let us do it."

"W'at for is all this war medicine bein' made?" inquired Bill Siddons, foreman of the "double-O-bar" outfit, who had entered the gathering while Burt Francis, a prominent and public-spirited citizen of Little Dutch, was giving his views.

"It's like this, Bill," explained Col. Tom North, who from years of sitting behind the deal box had acquired the repose of manner and gravity necessary to a presiding officer; "it's like this: Some unmitigating an' felonious cuss has run off two bronchos, the same then an' there bein' the property of John Stanhope Wells, more familiar known as 'English Jack——'"

"An' the mauraudin' hoss thief didn't even have the decency to pull the stakes," interjected Mr. Wells who, notwithstanding his name, "English Jack," was a native of Oregon county, Missouri. "He cut the lariats, the hasty-minded villain, an' sp'iled two as good ropes as ever you saw."

"An' the boys got together to discuss ways an' means," pursued Col. Tom North, having suspended his explanation to give Mr. Wells an opportunity to air his complaint, "the majority as law abidin' citizens, strivin' to promote the material interests of Little Dutch an' as a sort of a much-needed rebuke to hoss thiefs appears to be in favor of hangin' the critter. Bill Hunt, the under sheriff of Cowley county, has the inhuman monster close herded at his house over at Red Bud, an' the general sense of this meetin' seems to be that we rides over this arternoon an' hangs the cuss for the benefit of his morals."

"I'm agin hangin' him as bein' too drastic," said Mr. Wells. "As the owner of them two cayuses which was stoled, I'm willin' to say that the crime carried its own punishment. Though," he added as an afterthought, "he shouldn't ort to have cut them lariats. This feller that run off the critters is not what you all might call a red-handed desperado, neither. I see him projectin' around yere the day before he run off the bronchos, an' he's a slim, spindlin' critter, with a complexion like a drug store clerk. I 'lowed mebbe he's been readin' books an' started out to be a bad man jist for the fun they is in it. He didn't p'int out like no hoss thief, neither. Bill Hunt finds him as late as six o'clock this mornin' a sleepin'. He goes into camp an' builds a fire all as comfortable an' the same as if he was in a fust-class hotel, instead of ridin' for the nation, the way professional hoss thiefs does."

"That ain't the putt, none whatever," said Burt Francis. "I'm nachally a humane man myself. I argued agin' the stranglin' of the nigger over at Wellington, an' I don't take stock much in hangin' a white man. It's a poor use to make of even a hoss thief. But it's the principle of the thing, an' the howlin' necessity of elevatin' Little Dutch to the position among border towns she is entitled to hold. This corporation received a distinct setback an' has carried a bad black eye ev'ry sence Jim Marshall gits away with the jack pot on a two-ace flush. It was not so much the hand—that would surprise anyone, but it was the lettin' of him go around alive a tellin' folks what marks we all is. Little Dutch has got to win back her reputation if we hangs ev'ry hoss thief 'twixt here an' the Canadian."

This seemed to accord with the general notion. Civil pride is a vast moving power. Mr. Thurston, who presided over the bar, set out the bottle, and the sixteen men who comprehended the greater part of Little Dutch's able male population accepted Mr. Siddon's invitation to irrigate before starting out on their eight-mile ride to Red Bud.

As Tom Thurston locked up the Rose of Kansas and prepared to mount his horse he inquired:

"Suppose Billy don't give up the hoss thief. He's jist been made under sheriff an' he may not think it's law."

"He'll give him up all right," replied the optimistic Francis. "I never yit hear of a law agin' hangin' a hoss thief."

"But you don't know Bill Hunt," said Thurston, swinging into his saddle.

"I'd be more than glad to help you out, gents," said Under Sheriff Hunt, "but you see the boy surrenders to me, an' I'm some sort responsible to the state of Kansas for his well bein'. Wait until I lands him in Winfield. No doubt Scott, which is my superior in office, will turn the boy over to you all. He's just the man to let a band of Little Dutch folks come an' tend to his business for him. He's got a reputation for that, and you'll find him dead easy."

"The hoss thief isn't at Winfield, Billy," said Francis; "he's yere, an' they ain't no need of you all gittin' gay an' sarcastic neither. We is a band of plain, law-abidin' citizens a doin' of our duty to our corporation. So be decent, Billy, and turn out the boy. We don't want to proceed to any extreme measures, Billy, or take any steps which you might subsequently regret, but we've come for the hoss thief sure." A restive horse pitched against another and two Winchesters rattled. It was a nerve-straining minute or two.

"If you-all git him it'll be through smoke," replied Under Sheriff Hunt, "an' I'm figurin' there won't be many fools left to attend the fun'rals which is likely to prevail as a fashion around yere for the next few days."

"Let 'em come in, Bill, why don't you?" broke in a silvery voice on the war talk. "Let 'em come in. I didn't 'low to hold a reception, gentlemen," continued the bright-faced, vivacious young woman looking out from the doorway over Hunt's shoulder. "I didn't 'low when I came over from Joplin way to visit Cousin Billy that I'd hold a reception the very fust day."

If Hunt was surprised he never betrayed his astonishment, nor did he wink an eye when his joyous young relative proceeded: "I turned that pore little boy loose a half hour ago, Cousin Bill, when I fust see these visitors a-comin'. The boy said some of 'em might feel constrained in his presence, as they was a matter of a couple of hosses outstandin' between him an' them, an' they might feel as if they orter settle with him."

Every hat in the party came off when the young woman first appeared. Said Col. Tom North, as he resettled his sombrero:

"I don't aim to be critical, Bill, but it looks like you all had better give your young wimmen relatives a hint or two on your duties as to the safe keepin' of hoss thiefs. Us Little Dutch people would never have let him git away, Billy," and the delegation rode home.

It was between deals a few months later that Burt Francis remarked to Tom North, who was putting the cards back in the box: "I hear Bill Hunt has married that cousin of his'n we met up with that time we rides over to lynch the boy that stole 'English Jack's' hosses."

"Yes," said North, setting the deal box before him, "I hears of it. I've seen the girl two or three times. Do you know, Burt, she favors that hoss thief mightily. I saw the kid a-loafin' around yere the day before he runs off the bronchos, and he looks enough like that girl to be her twin. An', Burt, I rides 'round Billy Hunt's house that day an' they wa'n't nary moccasin nor hoof track leadin' from it. An' that dress the young woman had on was Bill's sister's, which she was up in Winfield visitin' when we was thar. I recognized it at once. An' I'm keepin' up quite a lot of thinkin', Burt. Eight lose, queen win; place yer bets, gents."

Shall we whip

a poorly nourished horse when he is thoroughly tired? He may go faster for a few rods, but his condition is soon the worse for it. Better stop and feed him. Food gives force. If you are thin, without appetite; pale, because of thin blood; easily exhausted; why further weaken the body by using tonics? Begin on a more permanent basis. Take something which will build up the tissues and supply force to the muscular, digestive and nervous systems of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, meets every demand. The cod-liver oil is a food. It produces force without the whip. Every gain is a substantial one. The hypophosphites give strength to the nervous system. An improved appetite, richer blood and better flesh come to stay.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

F. A. DUNHAM,

Civil Engineer and Surveyor

109 Park ave. Sewers, pavements and road improvements. Publisher of city map and atlas. Telephone 87—F

He looked at me in a startled way, with a face showing white in the shadow; and from me to the one solitary figure seated like a pillar a score of paces in front, with no one between us and it. "There need be but two of us," I muttered, loosening my sword. "Shall it be you or Marie? The others must leap their horses out of the road in the confusion, cross the river at the Arembal ford, if they are not overtaken, and make for Caylus."

He hesitated. I do not know whether it had anything to do with his hesitation that at that moment the cathedral bell in the town below us began to ring slowly for vespers. Yes, he hesitated. He—a Caylus. Turning to him again, I repeated my question impatiently: "Which shall it be? A moment and we shall be moving on and it will be to late.

He laid his hand hurridly on my bridle and began a rambling answer Rambling as it was I gathered his meaning. It was enough for me! I cut him short with one word of fiery indignation and turned to Marie and spoke quickly.

"Will you, then?" I said.

But Marie shook his head in perplexity, and answering little, said the same.

So it happened the second time.

Strange! Yet strange as it seemed, I was not greatly surprised. Under other circumstances I should have been beside myself with anger at the defection. Now I felt as if I had half expected it, and without further words of reproach I dropped my head and gave it up. I passed again into the stupor of endurance. The vidame was too strong for me. It was useless to fight against him. We were under the spell. When the troop moved forward, I went with them, silent and apathetic.

We passed through the gate of Cahors, and no doubt the scene was worthy of note; but I had only a listless eye for it—much such an eye as a man about to be broken on the wheel must have for that curious instrument, supposing him never to have seen it before. The whole population had come out to line the streets through which we rode, and stood gazing, with scarcely veiled looks of apprehension, at the procession of troopers and the stern face of the new governor.

We dismounted passively in the courtyard of the castle, and were for going in together, when Bure intervened. "M. de Pavannes," he said, pushing rather rudely between us, "will sup alone to-night. For you, gentlemen, this way, if you please."

I went without remonstrance. What was the use? I was conscious that the vidame from the top of the stairs leading to the grand entrance was watching us with a wolfish glare in his eyes. I went quietly. But I heard Croisette urging something with passionate energy.

We were led through a low doorway to a room on the ground floor; a place very like a cell. Here we took our meal in silence. When it was over I flung myself on one of the beds prepared for us, shrinking from my companions rather in misery than in resentment.

No explanation had passed between us. Still I knew that the other two from time to time eyed me doubtfully. I feigned therefore to be asleep, but I heard Bure enter to bid us good night—and see that we had not escaped. And I was conscious, too, of the question Croisette put to him: "Does M. de Pavannes lie alone to-night, Bure?"

"Not entirely," the captain aswered, with gloomy meaning. Indeed, he seemed in bad spirits himself, or tired. "The vidame is anxious for his soul's welfare, and sends a priest to him."

They sprang to their feet at that. But the light and its bearer, who so far recovered himself as to chuckle at his master's pious thought, had disappeared. They were left to pace the room, and reproach themselves and curse the vidame in an agony of late repentance. Not even Marie could find a loophole of escape from here. The door was double-locked; the windows so barred that a cat could scarcely pass through them; the walls were of solid masonry.

Meanwhile I lay and feigned to sleep, and lay feigning through long, long hours; though my heart like theirs throbbed in response to the dull hammering that presently began without, and not far from us, and lasted until daybreak. From our windows, set low and facing a wall, we could see nothing. But we could guess what the noise meant, the dull, earthy thuds when posts were set in the ground, the brisk, wooden clattering when one plank was laid to another. We could not see the progress of the work, or hear the voices of the workmen, or catch the glare of their lights. But we knew what they were doing. They were raising the scaffold.

CHAPTER XII.

JOY IN THE MORNING.

I was too weary with riding to go entirely without sleep. And moreover it is anxiety and the tremor of excitement which makes the pillow sleepless, not, Heaven be thanked, sorrow. God made man to lie awake and hope; but never to lie awake and grieve. An hour or two before daybreak I fell asleep, utterly worn out. When I awoke, the sun was high, and shining slantwise on our window. The room was gay with the morning freshness, and I lay awhile, my cheek on my hand, drinking in the cheerful influence as I had done many and many a day in our room at Caylus. It was the touch of Marie's hand, laid timidly on my arm, which roused me with a shock to consciousness. The truth broke upon me. I remembered where we were, and what was before us. "Will you get up, Anne?" Croisette said. "The vidame has sent for us."

I got to my feet, and buckled on my sword. Croisette was leaning against the wall, pale and downcast. Bure filled the open doorway, his feathered cap in his hand, a queer smile on his face. "You are a good sleeper, young gentleman," he said. "You should have a good conscience."

"Better than yours, no doubt!" I retorted, "or your master's."

He shrugged his shoulders, and, bidding us by a sign to follow him, led the way through several gloomy passages. At the end of these, a flight of stone steps leading upwards seemed to promise something better; and true enough, the door at the top being opened, the murmur of a crowd reached our ears, with a burst of sunlight and warmth. We were in a lofty room, with walls in some places painted, and elsewhere hung with tapestry; well lighted by three old pointed windows reaching to the rush-covered floor. The room was large, set here and there with stands of arms, and had a dais with a raised carved chair at one end. The ceiling was of blue, with gold stars set about it. Seeing this, I remembered the place. I had been in it once, years ago, when I had attended the vicomte on a state visit to the governor. Ah! that the vicomte were here now!

I advanced to the middle window, which was open. Then I started back, for outside was the scaffold built level with the floor, and rush-covered like it! Two or three people were lounging on it. My eyes sought Louis among the group, but in vain. He was not there; and while I looked for him I heard a noise behind me, and he came in, guarded by four soldiers with pikes.

His face was pale and grave, but perfectly composed. There was a wistful look in his eyes indeed, as if he were thinking of something or some one far away—Kit's face on the sunny hills of Quercy, where he had ridden with her, perhaps; a look which seemed to say that the doings here were nothing to him, and the parting was yonder where she was. But his bearing was calm and collected, his step firm and fearless. When he saw us, indeed his face lightened a moment and he greeted us cheerfully, even acknowledged Bure's salutation with dignity and good temper. Croisette sprang towards him impulsively, and cried his name—Croisette ever the first to speak. But before Louis could grasp his hand, the door at the bottom of the hall swung open, and the vidame came hurriedly in.

He was alone. He glanced around, his forbidding face, which was somewhat flushed as if by haste, wearing a scowl. Then he saw us, and, nodding haughtily, strode up the floor, his spurs clinking heavily on the boards. He gave us no greeting, but by a short word dismissed Bure and the soldiers to the lower end of the room. And then he stood and looked at us four, but principally at his rival; and looked, and looked with eyes of smoldering hate. And there was a silence, a long silence, while the murmur of the crowd came almost cheerfully through the window, and the sparrows under the eaves chirped and twittered, and the heart that throbbed least painfully was, I do believe, Louis de Pavannes'!

At last Bezers broke the silence.

"M. de Pavannes!" he began, speaking hoarsely, yet concealing all passion under a cynical smile and a mock politeness, "M. de Pavannes, I hold the king's commission to put to death all the Huguenots within my province of Quercy. Have you anything to say, I beg, why I should not begin with you? Or do you wish to return to the church?"

Louis shrugged his shoulders as in contempt, and held his peace. I saw his captor's great hands twitch convulsively at this, but still the vidame mastered himself, and when he spoke again he spoke slowly. "Very well," he continued, taking no heed of us, the silent witnesses of this strange struggle between the two men, but eyeing Louis only. "You have wronged me more than any man alive. Alive or dead! or dead! You have thwarted me, M. de Pavannes, and taken from me the woman I loved. Six days ago I might have killed you. I had it in my power. I had but to leave you to the rabble, remember, and you would have been rotting at Montfaucon to-day, M. de Pavannes."

"That is true," said Louis, quietly. "Why so many words?"

But the vidame went on as if he had not heard. "I did not leave you to them," he resumed, "and yet I hate you—more than I ever hated any man yet, and I am not apt to forgive. But now the time has come, sir, for my revenge! The oath I swore to your mistress a fortnight ago I will keep to the letter. I—Silence, babe!" he thundered, turning suddenly, "or I will keep my word with you, too!"

Croisette had muttered something, and this had drawn on him the glare of Bezers' eyes. But the threat was effectual. Croisette was silent. The two were left henceforth to one another.

Yet the vidame seemed to be put out by the interruption. Muttering a string of oaths, he strode back again. The cool cynicism with which he was wont to veil his anger and impose on other men, while it heightened the effect of his ruthless deeds, in part fell from him. He showed himself as he was—masterful, and violent, hating, with all the strength of a turbulent nature which had never known a check. I quailed before him myself. I confess it.

"Listen!" he continued harshly, coming back and taking his place in front of us at last, his manner more violent than before the interruption. "I might have left you to die in that hell yonder! And I did not leave you. I had but to hold my hand and you would have been torn to pieces! The wolf, however, does not hunt with the rats, and a Bezers wants no help in his vengeance from king or canaille! When I hunt my enemy down I will hunt him alone, do you hear? And as there is a Heaven above me"—he paused a moment—"if I ever meet you face to face again, M. de Pavannes, I will kill you where you stand!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Monte Scott is trainingon the Milburn course.

Fred Bonny, of Mercer avenue, is riding a new Keating.

William Hoag, of Park avenue, has bought a new Central.

Thomas Brantingham, of South Plainfield, has a new Keating.

Corra Ryno, of The Daily Press staff, has purchased a new Hartford wheel.

Frank Randolph visited friends in New Brunswick on his wheel Tuesday evening.

Fred Barker, of North avenue, has accepted a position at the Columbia Cycle Academy.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, has secured a Cleveland Swell Special through an intimate friend.

The cycling division of the Westfield Y. M. C. A. will hold their first run this evening. Their destination will be Plainfield.

Frederick Richt, the winner of the Irvington-Milburn race last year, is in training for the coming contest. He generally starts out at daylight.

Twelve brand-new '96 Cleveland Swell Specials were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday for the rental department.

L. D. Cabanne, the St. Louis racing man, is to begin legal proceedings against the Racing Board of the L. A. W., to compel them to reinstate him.

Chief Consul Robert Gentle has announced the appointment of local consuls for the L. A. W. in New Jersey. Charles Lister has that honor in this city.

Training privileges have been secured by the Riverside Wheelmen for the Crescent Oval, and they will do all their preparatory work at that place this season.

Miss Wittnauer and friend, of New York, rode out to Plainfield on their wheels yesterday morning, returning in the afternoon after a short visit with friends here.

Several of the skilled mechanics of the Jersey Wheel Company are working nights in order to finish two Jersey wheels for the team who race in Philadelphia, Saturday.

The High School relay team was practicing yesterday afternoon and G. P. Smith, F. W. Cornwall, Henry Eggerding and Fred Squires ran the mile in 4 minutes and 35 seconds.

Union county road riders will have a chance to capture the ten-mile championship of this section on June 6th. The race will be held near Rahway, and a big field of starters is anticipated.

Fred J. Titus, the well-known bicycle rider, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon and spent several hours at the Crescent Oval. Should he be reinstated by the L. A. W., he may select this city as his training head quarters.

The Punnett Companion was given a good test yesterday afternoon when William Sweeney, weighing 85 pounds, and Raymond A. McGee, weighing 185 pounds, rode to Metuchen and back. The great difference in weight was not apparent.

Mosher and Barnett, two of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, visited the Crescent Oval on a tandem the first of the week and rode an unpaced mile in 2:10. This is low mark for the track in an unpaced mile by tandem or single wheel.

As nature would not come to the aid of Captain Hand, who is putting the Crescent Oval in order, by furnishing rain, the street sprinklers were utilized on the track for the first time Tuesday evening. The delay in putting the track in condition was caused by the lack of water, and as that obstacle has been overcome the track will be in excellent shape in a few days. It was fairly good last Saturday, but, by the first of next week, it will be in perfect order and ready for the numerous riders that expect to train there this year.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

The Jersey Wheel Company is displaying a new stock of Eagle wheels.

The Greenwich Wheelmen will run to this city May 30th to attend the Crescent Wheelmen's meet.

Entries for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day race meet close on the evening of May 23d, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Titus rode here from Elizabeth on their tandem yesterday afternoon and spent sometime here.

It is now necessary for anyone riding on the Crescent Oval to have track privileges, which may be obtained from George B. Cobb, chairman of the Crescent Wheelmen's racing board. Those that enter the races on the 30th will receive the privilege gratuitously after May 12th.

Bert Ripley and Waller, of the Atalanta Wheelmen, of Newark, spent yesterday afternoon at the Crescent Oval examining it with a view to riding or training on it. Ripley is at present about the fastest amateur rider in New Jersey. He will ride at the Clinton meet on the 30th.

You will find at the salesrooms of the Jersey Wheel Company, on North avenue, a full and complete line of bicycle suits for women, also a line of supplies for the fair sex. This department is in charge of Miss VanCleef, who will be pleased at any time to see women cyclists who are in search of articles which will make the sport of wheeling more enjoyable to them.

Fred. Allart, the mileage king of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club, expects to complete 20,000 miles before June 1st, on which date the year's riding will conclude. At 10 p. m., Monday night, Allart started on a ride to Tarrytown, and shortly after sunrise he appeared on the Coney Island Cycle Path and paced several of the candidates for honors in the Irvington-Milburn road race. After covering 136 miles, Allart, at 1 p. m., concluded that he had had enough for the day.

The phonograph will be utilized in the Martin road race on Decoration Day, for registering the riders at the turn and finish. Both at the turn and finish the numbers of the riders will be shouted into the phonograph and recorded. This will prevent the mixups that usually mar all road races, and in case of dispute will tell the story better than a dozen human voices. It will answer the same purpose as the camera, when the finish is so close that the judges are unable to distinguish the winner.

Those who have frequented the Crescent Oval since it was constructed, will remember "Gus" Burgland, who acted as trainer for Charley Brown, of Elizabeth, two years ago, when Brown did such fast riding, and was club trainer for the Harlem Wheelmen last year. Burgland has now resigned his position with the Gilbert and Chester Cycle Company, and will act as trainer for A. B. Barnett and H. B. Mosher, of the Jersey Wheel Company's team. "Gus" is one of the best known trainers in this district, and one of the most experienced.

All the crack road racers in this vicinity are now in training for the Irvington-Millburn handicap which will be decided on Decoration Day. Interest in the great event is growing daily and the number of starters will in all probability be as large as last year, when over a hundred lined up. Brooklyn will be represented in the race, as the Kings County Wheelmen will enter thirty men, and other clubs will also nominate candidates for prizes. Richt of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club, last year's winner, will be among the starters. Simpson Standevan, of Paterson, who finished second to Richt, will take another chance this year. He and Richt have both been in training for some days and each will be ready for a hard race when the day comes. Richt is doing his preliminary work over Long Island roads. Monte Scott, of the Crescent Wheelmen, is also in strict training for the cyclists' derby. He won the time prize last year, crossing the twenty-five-mile line in 1:22:22. Few people, comparatively, are aware that Scott defeated Zimmerman, the famous champion, in 1891, at Worcester, in both a scratch and handicap event. Due to his fast work last year it is understood that the handicapper will place him at scratch and as it has been practically demonstrated that a man on scratch has no earthly show of winning out of the large field of competitors, he will confine his training entirely for the time prize.

The Y. M. C. A. Cyclers will have their first run to Metuchen on Saturday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock from the Y. M. C. A. building. A general invitation is extended to all.

The Jersey wheel made its first appearace on the track last Monday night at Chicago, and its rider, Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, made a very pleasing beginning by finishing first in the one-mile open race for professionals. The races were held on the indoor board track at Tattersall's. The track is ten laps to the mile and highly banked, resembling a large funnel. Eaton rode in the first heat in the one-mile open, and finished first in 2:25 1-5. The referee disqualified him for touching the black line, which is sixteen inches from the bottom of the banking, with his tires. The aundience howled winh disapproval and demanded that the little rider with the blue suit be given the race. Eaton showed to the referee's satisfaction that it was impossible when riding fast not to touch the line occasionally, and was allowed to start in the final. He won the final heat in 2:21 1-5. Eaton started in the two-mile handicap for professionals from scratch, and by three laps had nearly overhauled the limit men. At this point his pedal struck the floor and he was thrown. Altogether the results of the night's races were very satisfactory to the Jersey Wheel Company and their rider.

IN FAVOR OF DRS. HEDGES

THEY WIN THE DAMAGE SUIT INSTITUTED BY JOHN BENNER.

The Trial Occupied Four Days and the Jury Was Out All Night.—Benner Will Appeal to the Supreme Court.

To be sued for $10,000 damages, threatened with conviction for malpractice, exposed to the uncertainty of a jury's verdict during a trial lasting five days, that is what Dr. Ellis W. Hedges and his brother, Benj. VanD. Hedges, have undergone this week. This morning they stand forth vindicated. The jury found a verdict in their favor.

The trial was begun last Monday. John Benner claimed his left leg was made crooked by the failure of the two doctors to properly set it.

Beyond his own testimony, the principal evidence in substantiation of this charge was offered by Dr. Cooper, of Westfield. The complainant swore that he had called the attention of the physicians to the fact that he thought that his leg was crooked, but at the time they had convinced him that he was mistaken. Afterwards he called Dr. Cooper, who made an examination on September 2d. On the witness stand Dr. Cooper testified that at the time there was a union of bone and the leg was then crooked. The Drs. Hedges were still treating Mr. Benner. After they had stopped treating him, Dr. Westcott stated, the bone was in the same shape it was when he saw it on September 2d and that it continued in that condition. The general sense of Dr. Cooper's evidence was that the Drs Hedges displayed a lack of ordinary skill and care in the treatment of the case. In support of his allegation of neglect, Mr. Benner stated that Dr. Ellis W. Hedges had told his wife, after they had been treating him for some time, that she could dress the wound just as well as he could. Dr. Mattison also testified for Mr. Benner.

The defense showed that owing to the great laceration of the muscles caused by the violent wrenching of the broken fragments of bone at the time of the accident, the fracture became a compound fracture, an abcess, running down to the bone, having formed on the side of the leg. Their treatment of Mr. Benner was given with the utmost minutia. Expert surgeons, probably the most eminent in this country, namely: Dr. Stephen Smith, professor, author of works on fractures, Bellevue Hospital Surgeon, etc., and Dr. McCosh, professor of surgery in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, Attending Surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, as well as Drs. Mravlag and Green, of Elizabeth, Dr. Norton, of New York, and Drs. Probasco, Murray and Tomlinson, of Plainfield, testified without contradiction from the surgeons on the other side of the case, that the treatment of the Drs. Hedges was the correct treatment from beginning to end; that they had not made one false step and had not omitted any care, and that Mr. Benner's crooked limb was due to his own fault and not to the fault of the doctors.

Mr. Benner admitted that he had no surgeon at all after he left the Doctors Hedges, and that although he had been told by them to wear a leather support, he wore it a week only and then cast it aside, and from that time on merely had bandages on the limb.

Much expert medical testimony was adduced at the trial: Dr. Probasco saw the case in consultation with the defendants. He testified that the leg was straight when he saw it, at that time there was abscess leading down to the broken fragments of bone, and that the treatment was entirely proper.

Dr. Norton, house surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, of New York city, saw Mr. Benner some time after Dr. Probasco's visit. He testified that the leg was straight, that pus was discharging from a bone abscess and that he moved the bones freely on one another, showing that there was no union of bones.

Dr. Stephen Smith, of New York, author of several works on surgery and for forty years Professor of Surgery in Bellevue Medical College, testified that the treatment of Mr. Benner by the Doctors Hedges had been in accordance with the best practice from beginning to end. He examined the plaintiff's leg and testified that from the conditions present union of the bones could not have taken place longer than four months ago, which was four months after he stopped going to Dr. Hedges, and that the crook in the limb was due to walking about on the leg without proper support after leaving the doctor's care.

Dr. McCook, Surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city,

ASSURED OF QUIETUDE.

Theodore Kurzhals Will Not Proceed Against the Salvation Army Noise.

Through the intervention and influence of a prominent Plainfielder, the movement to call the attention of the Grand Jury to the excessive noise of the Salvation Army has been stopped. Theodore Kurzhals, who was the principal complainant, has been assured by F. C. Harder, one of the strongest supporters of the Army in this city, and who has great influence with the officers and soldiers, that he will not be troubled in the future with noise of the organization. Mr. Kurzhals therefore dropped all proceedings against them. James E. Martine is entitled to the credit of having acted as the successful arbitrator of the affair. Mr. Martine is not especially interested in the army, but their methods and motives are such as appeal to the sympathy of a man of his character and disposition and he felt that he could do the Army a good turn by soliciting one of their principal supportes to urge them to be more moderate in the amount of noise they made, and in this has been successful.

HITCHED TO AN ICE WAGON.

Thus a Borough Hose Cart is Taken to a Burning House.

A small fire broke out yesterday afternoon at 4:20 in the house 190 Grove street, occupied by Wm. Freize and family, with the result of burning a quantity of clothes which were hanging on a rack just off the second floor. Mr. Dieke, who lives near by, sent in the alarm from Box 152, and the fire bell was rung for fully ten minutes until a team of horses belonging to the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company came along attached to an ice wagon. The hose carriage was fastened to the ice wagon and taken to the fire, but before they reached the place kind neighbors had extinguished the fire with water.

How the fire broke out is a mystery. Mr. Freize says that he hung a coil of wire and a flour bag near the clothes, and the wire was hot at the time. The family thought they detected smoke, but thought nothing of it until the fire broke out. The damage was slight and there was no insurance. The Ice Company's team brought the hose carriage back to the house.

A MAY DANCE.

Old Glory Council Give a Pleasant Event in Red Men's Hall.

A very enjoyable affair which took place last night was the second dance of the season of Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, which was held in Red Men's Hall. The attendance was good notwithstanding the warm weather. An enjoyable feature was the excellent music rendered by Prof. Guttman's orchestra and to its in-inspiring strains the dancers enjoyed themselves until about two o'clock this morning. A repast was enjoyed as the clock was striking the hour of midnight. The committee who had charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. Walter Walker, chairman; Miss Lizzie Dunlap, Mrs. Pangborn, W. H. Scribner and Mrs. T. B. Snyder. Walter Walker was floor manager, Theo. Voorhees dispensed refreshments and Mr. Tilton had charge of the wardrobe.

An Insurance Claim Paid.

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., met last evening and a warrant for $2 000 in favor of the widow of the late E. B. Lamb, a former member of the order. The Recorder was instructed to secure a dispensation to hold a special meeting for the purpose of acting on the invitation extended to Memorial Lodge of Newark to attend the meeting of Central Lodge Thursday evening, June 11th, when six candidates will be initiated. Wm. Newcorn, T. Smith and Charles Randolph were appointed to prepare a collation and entertainment. The grand lodge officers and a delegation from Benards Lodge, No. 67, will also be present.

—There will be a meeting of Miantonomoh Tribe No. 118, I. O. R. M., this evening.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

EIGHT YEARS OF LIFE.

ANNIVERSARY OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS OF WARREN CHAPEL.

An Address Delivered by Dr. Brett, Vice-President of the State Society, Who Spoke of the Work of the Convention.

Eight years have made a great difference in the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel, and last night the chapel was well filled with the members and their friends who came to attend the eighth anniversary exercises.

The platform was prettily decorated with large sprays of dogwood and potted plants which were arranged in tasteful array around the pulpit. The congregational singing was led by a chorus choir of young women, who also sang several selections alone.

The usual devotional services opened the meeting and after a vocal solo by Miss Lillian Zeisz and a piano solo by Miss Cortright, Rev. Dr. Brett, the speaker of the evening, was introduced. Dr. Brett is State Vice-President of the Christian Endeavor Society and, although past middle-age, is an enthusiastic Christian Endeavorer. He spoke about the growth of the society and the different reasons some people had for leaving it. He referred to the Plainfield '96 State Convention, the committee for the arranging of which he is chairman. Some of his remarks were very witty and the humorous way in which he told his many illustrations held the attention of even the youngest of his audience throughout his address. In reference to the coming covention, he said that all should join the Christian Endeavor Society before October when a great wave would sweep irresistibly over the city, and those who were not Christian Endeavorers would not be "in it," any more than he was when everybody else was riding a bicycle and he had to walk.

He referred to the night as the anniversary of the ascension of Jesus Christ, and talked on the promise and command He gave His disciples just before he ascended. The promise was "You shall be endowed with power from on high," and the command "You are my witnesses." A witness, he said, must see and tell. Everyone who has seen the Lord Jesus must be a competent witness. You say you have never seen Him. There is a verse that says "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." On the day of your conversion, you shall see Him with the eye of faith. You can be deceived in the eye but not in the soul. Of what use is a witness if he can't tell what he has seen? If you have seen your Savior and know Him, you ought to go out and tell the world of it. Don't get up in meeting and say what you don't mean. Don't play the hyprocrite. Why should we get up and speak for Him? It is because it was God's command. He is our friend and we should always be willing to speak a good word for a friend. We should stand up for Christ because He stood up for us, we owe it to Him. He closed with several apt illustrations, his point being that every body should do his or her share of the work and not lag, and that only in that way was the glorious success, that we wish, possible.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed the society had accomplished considerable work and was in a flourishing condition. The average attendance at the meetings had been twenty-five. A neat balance remains in the treasury. A social time followed when refreshments were served.

The committee in charge consisted Henry Seader, chairman; and the Misses Anna Searing, Louisa Kohler, Mamie Wilson and Miss Cora Dunlap. The present officers of the society are president, John Herman; vice-president, Fred Bach; secretary, Miss Hattie Squires: treasurer, Miss Dolly Bolsterle.

Stole a Bicycle.

The bicycle thief has again been at work, as he finds Plainfield a great field for his labors. The habit of leaving the bicycles alone, especially at night, proved quite disastrous in the case of George Gould, last evening. He left his wheel in front of the Eldridge Bicycle Company's place of business on Park avenue at about 10 o'clock, and when he came out of the store, the wheel was gone. The wheel was a '95 Keating. No trace has been found of the stolen wheel.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. JOY AND GRIEF IN SONG.

BEAUTIFUL RENDITION OF THE SWAN AND SKYLARK.

The Last Concert of the Season Given Before a Cultured and Appreciative Audience in Music Hall Last Night.

The concluding concert given by the Choral Society last night drew a throng of listeners to Music Hall, who were well repaid by the interesting and impressive representations given. A visitor at these concerts is impressed with the good understanding that exists between the singers and the audience. There is an atmosphere of sympathy and intimacy as if the singers were saying "We are doing our best, honest and truly," and the audience was saying in response, "We appreciate your efforts and are enjoying it thoroughly." Mr. Fitzhugh, the musical director, labored with the commendable earnestness that always marks his work, and the soloists were of high character.

"The Swan and Skylark," given for the first part, is a grouping of a Grecian poet's melancholy strain, the swan's death chant written by Keats, the skylark's rapturous song by Shelley, and the blending in the human heart of "the dirge note and the song of festival," by Mrs. Hemans.

The contrast between the swan's despairing death note and the joyous uprising of the soaring skylark gives great range for vocal effects and for this reason, no doubt, this selection is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. The Grecian poet's tale was sung by Heinrich Meyn, a fine baritone, who has a strong, well trained voice. The swan's death chant was sung by W. H. Reiger, whose rich tenor voice of rare quality was full of melancholy farewell. The skylark's song was given by Mrs. Eleanor Meredith Mechling, and her pure clear soprano was admirably fitted for the "free triumphant song," without tears or heart-break. The blending of the two voices, where "Joy and Death" mingled their accents, was an exquisite bit of music, and the effective touches given by the Choral Society in its concise, true and intelligent expression of feeling, combined with the inimitable harmony of the orchestra from the New York Philharmonic Society, added their force to an already forceful rendition.

"The Transfiguration" for the second part was prepared by Frederick H. Cowen for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September of last year, and its first presentation in America was made last night in Music Hall. As the aim of the Choral Society has always been the noblest choral music, it is only natural that religious music should inspire their best efforts and be accompanied with the most satisfactory results.

The Transfiguration rendered last night was full of divine melody, and the glad note running through it was the skylark's song of victory, and triumph and cure for heart-break because the Elder Brother was transfigured with the light of God. The Scripture text given as a recitative by Miss Mary Louise Clary was full of power. Miss Clary's contralto voice has an unusual tone, the lower register of notes having a rare quality of depth and clearness. Throughout the whole rendition there was a well sustained devoutness of mood and a conscientious desire to make tones and words express the divine and holy meaning of the Transfiguration. Who could but think of the skylark soaring "Higher still and higher" when the quartette and chorus sang rapturously

"Lord speak, for we, Thy servants hear,
And hearing, rise on wings of love
Where flows the Eternal Fount of joy?"

The final chorus sung in the society's best manner with great force and earnestneas was a fitting ending to the grand recitatives from the Epistles and the Apocalypse given in varied tones by the richly-gifted soloists.

A fly-leaf in the programmes announces the intention of the Choral Society to continue their work another year and present Rossini's "Stabat Mater" for the first concert of the season, if the patronage of the public is sufficient to encourage and justify the expense. "Stabat Mater" is an inspiring drama versed in rhythmic Latin words, musical in themselves. It was given successfully last year and many have expressed a desire to hear it again.

—Work was started yesterday on the extension to the street railway car house. It will be 65 feet long, 20 feet wide and 4½ feet deep.

RUN DOWN IN THE ROAD.

Ex-Judge Freeman, of Metuchen, Accidentally Injures an Old Man.

A serious accident occurred on Park avenue, near Pumptown, last Tuesday afternoon, in which Mr. Egan, an old man of about eighty years of age, was knocked down by a passing carriage and dangerously injured. Mr. Egan lives on Park avenue, near Metuchen, and was walking over to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, of Pumptown, at the time mentioned, and ex-Judge Manning Freeman, of Metuchen, and Fred J. Bettman, of the borough, were speeding their horses on the level stretch of road. Mr. Egan stepped to the side of the roadway to avoid the approaching carriages, but just at that time another carriage appeared coming in the opposite direction. Ex-Judge Freeman's carriage was forced out into the gutter and his front wheel struck Mr. Egan. The force of the blow threw the old man for some distance and he struck on his head on the hard stone roadbed. He was carried to his daughter's home and a physician was called. No bones were broken, but Mr. Egan was badly bruised and stunned by the shock, the suddenness of which was very great. It is thought that he will recover, although still confined to his bed.

THEIR FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker Given an Unexpected Visitation by Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker, of 304 East Front street, celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage yesterday. For some time past their most intimate friends have been quietly planning together and last evening a party of them, headed by Mr. and Mrs. John Poole, who were the originators of the affair, marched into the Stryker homestead in a body and the surprise was complete.

All joined in having a good time and with singing and dancing the hours were whiled away until midnight in a most delightful manner, when refreshments were served.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morrison, Mrs. Amie Lorton, Mrs. Amie Limbarger, Mr. and Mrs. John Poole, Mr. and Mrs. John Stryker, Amos Moffett, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Palmer, Leslie Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Seals, William Mosher, Judge Mosher and wife, and Miss Lulu Stryker. The couple received a large number of presents.

MAYOR BEN IN BANDAGES.

Mr. Hegeman Took an Unlucky Fall From His Bicycle.

The old saying "More haste and less speed" was verified a few days ago in a painful manner. Borough Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., left his home in the morning on his wheel for the purpose of catching his train. He was a little late and his bike was pushed faster than under ordinary circumstances. In his left hand he carried a small satchel which together with the speed, was the cause of the trouble. When turning from Prospect place into Grove street his knee caught between the handle bar and satchel. Mr. Hegeman was helpless to act and was consequently thrown from his wheel with much force. The result was that his right knee was severe sprained.

Mr. Hegeman succeeded in riding his wheel back home when Dr. Davis was called. The doctor found there was a slight inflammation in the knee, and concluded it would be better for Mr. Hegeman to remain quiet for a few days. Proper treatment was given and the injury is improving nicely.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Miss Agnes Perkins Becomes Mrs. Lewis G. Peterson.

The marriage of Miss Agnes Perkins, daughter of Mrs. Edna Perkins and Lewis Grant Peterson, of this city, was celebrated last evening at eight o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, 507 East Sixth street. Rev. Mr. Grobes, pastor of the A. M. E. church, officiated in the presence of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Westfield and Plainfield.

The bride was gowned in white as was also the bridemaid, Miss Harris. The best man was Mr. Perkins, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a pleasant reception followed, during which congratulations were extended. The happy couple received many handsome presents. They will reside temporarily at 507 East Sixth street.

A Picnic Arranged.

The Junior Epworth League of Monroe Avenue chapel held a meeting yesterday afternoon at Epworth House and it was decided to give a picnic in Brown's woods on Clinton avenue tomorrow. John Burrows has kindly consented to give the Juniors the use of the oluer people will join the party in the afternoon.

TOPIC OF HOME MISSIONS

ELIZABETH DISTRICT MEETING HELD IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Encouraging Reports Made From the Various Lines of Work Which Are Indulged in.—Committees and Officers.

Home missions was the chief topic of interest at Vincent chapel yesterday when the Elizabeth district meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society was held. Delegates were present from all the neighboring towns and the meeting was a very helpful as well as an enjoyable one. Sessions were held in the morning and afternoon. Miss Helen J. Carlton, as president of the Elizabeth district, presided over the meeting as Mrs. Noah Pike, secretary of the Auxiliary of the First M. E. church, of this city, acted as recording secretary of the meeting.

The morning session opened with devotional exercises, after which Rev. Charles R. Barnes, D. D., made a short address, welcoming the delegates to this city and to the church. The president, Miss Carlton, responded with a few appropriate remarks. The delegates were then introduced and the following committee appointed: Enrollment, Mrs. Charles E. Horne; resolutions, Miss Effa Ham; and home missions, Miss Chandler. The secretaries of the different auxiliaries and mission bands made their reports. Mrs. Isabella Miller made a decennial report from the Cranford Auxiliary to which Rev. H. C. Johnson, late of Cranford, but now pastor of the Grace M. E. church, replied with some well-chosen remarks. Mrs. Noah Pike read the report from the Auxiliary of the First M. E. church, of this city. Miss Gertrude Sharpe made the report from the mission circle of the same church. The report for the Grace M. E. church Auxiliary was made by Mrs. A. A. Taft and the report for the Queen Esther's band was read by Miss Della Voehl. Reports were also made by the auxiliaries from the Park and St. James churches of Elizabeth. The delegates from Westfield were not present and no report was made. After a very interesting talk by Miss Ham on Alaska and the work that is being done there, the morning session closed with prayer and the doxology.

The ladies of the First and Grace M. E. churches had a dainty luncheon all prepared and the out-of-town delegates were bountifully supplied. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. John Valiant, Mrs. Garriet Q. Packer, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, Mrs. A. Most and Mrs A. A. Taft.

Devotional exercises, led by Mrs. R. M. Moore, opened the afternoon session. The minutes of the morning session were read and Mrs. Sarah True Drake gave a helpful talk on "Pledges," and spoke particularly about the furnishing of the headquarters at New York. After the committee had reported Mrs. Anna Kent told something of the industrial home for girls in New Mexico. Sometime ago the Plainfield Auxiliary obtained the naming of the dining room by donarton of $100. The local auxiliary then agreed to furnish a sideboard for the dining room. Miss Van Marter spoke very interestingly on "The Needs and Uses of the General Fund," and remarked particularly on the advantage of sending in the dues quarterly instead of yearly. A collection was then taken and an informal discussion followed on the question "Shall luncheons be abolished and basket luncheons be substituted?" and it was decided in the affirmative. The election of of officers closed the meeting and resulted in the re-election of the old officers. They are Miss Helen J. Carlton, president; Miss Ham, mite boxes; Mrs. Isabella A. Miller, corresponding secretary.

Special Sale at Weinberger's.

A special three days sale of clothing is advertised in another column to begin at Weinberger's Clothing House on West Front street. Since establishing himself in Plainfield Mr. Weinberger has been giving the people of this city the benefit of very cheap prices for all kinds of clothing, but he announces that the present sale is at cheaper prices than he has heretofore offered. The sale commences tomorrow.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

CONVENTION PLANS

Arrangements Completed for Admission Tickets at St. Louis.

DESIGNED TO BE KEPT AS SOUVENIRS

Railroads Will Make a Rate of One Fare for the Round Trip for the Prohibition, Republican and Democratic Conventions.

St. Louis, May 15.—Col. Timothy E. Byrnes, sergeant-at-arms of the republican national convention, who has been here several days arranging for the printing of tickets and badges, has let the contracts for that work to local firms. The colors of the tickets were decided upon, different ones being selected for the different days of the convention. Five colors were chosen, provision being made for that many days. Should the convention run into the next week, additional tickets can be printed Saturday night and distributed on Monday morning. The tickets will have one coupon each. Provision has been made for three sessions daily, but the coupons for them will be attached to separate sets of tickets. The coupon is torn off by the doorkeeper and the ticket returned to the owner, who is expected to preserve it as a souvenir of the convention. The engraving on the tickets will represent a bird's-eye view of St. Louis, with the Eads bridge in the foreground, and pictures of Gen. Grant's log cabin at Old Orchard and the Auditorium, in which the convention is to be held. As many tickets only are to be issued as there are seats.

COLORED REPUBLICANS MEET.

Discuss Methods To Be Pursued at St. Louis To Secure Proper Treatment.

New York, May 15.—Responding to a previous call a number of colored men met last evening for the purpose of conferring together as to the best methods to be pursued at St. Louis "so that the 'Lily Whites' of the south may not crowd out the colored delegates in districts where colored republicans are in a majority." A resolution was passed petitioning the negroes to unite in the south, "as the 'Lily Whites' are their worst enemies, as the 'Lilies' are made up of 'Plebs' and dissatisfied office seekers of the democratic party." G. Winston Edwards of Virginia made a speech, during which he said that the republican party should come back to first principles—human rights. The colored man was the first at the revolution, he said, and was the first to shed his blood for the union in the late rebellion. "The country," he continued, "does not want any Hayes in the white house. It would have been better for Tilden to have been seated than that the rights of the negro should have been surrendered by Hayes."

REDUCED FARES.

Railroads Will Cut Rates for the National Conventions and Y. P. C. U. Meeting.

Chicago, May 15.—The board of managers of the Joint Traffic association has authorized reduced rates for the national convention of the prohibition party, to be held at Pittsburg May 27, for which a rate of one fare for the round trip will be made. Tickets will be sold May 24, 25 and 26, good going only on date of sale and limited to continuous passage in both directions. The same rate and conditions will be made for the national conventions of both republican and democratic parties. If any of the conventions extend beyond the final return limit of the tickets, the roads will make them good for the return trip on the day following the adjournment of the convention. A one-fare rate has also been made for the meeting of the Young People's Christian union of the United Presbyterian church, which is to be held at Omaha in August.

North Carolina Republicans.

Raleigh, N. C., May 15.—The republican state convention, which convened here yesterday, will probably not finish its labors until late to-night, so numerous were the contested seats. Senator Pritchard will head the delegates-at-large to the national convention. The greatest interest is, of course, in the nomination of a candidate for governor. Five names—those of Oliver B. Dockery, Daniel L. Russell, James E. Boyd, James Moody and V. S. Lusk—will be placed before the convention. Lusk is permanent chairman of the convention. The offices of lieutenant governor, treasurer and secretary of state are to be left open to be filled by the populists when they hold their state convention, or, if that convention declines to fill them, bolting populists who are now affiliating with republicans will do so.

McKinley and Sound Money.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—The republican state convention yesterday instructed its delegates for McKinley and adopted a platform demanding a "sound money policy which shall maintain at an equality of purchasing power every dollar of American money. Every American dollar must be worth 100 cents."

Wyoming for McKinley.

Sheridan, Wyo., May 15.—The Wyoming republican convention in session here to elect six delegates to represent the state at St. Louis is overwhelmingly for McKinley, and the delegation will be instructed for him. The platform will declare for protection and bimetalism.

Golf Club Incorporated.

Albany, May 15.—The Interlaken Golf and Country club of Interlaken Park has been incorporated. The objects are to maintain in Saratoga a club for social and recreative purposes, the establishment of grounds for the playing of games, particularly golf, and the maintenance of a club house

DELAWARE PROHIBITIONISTS.

Favor the Gold Standard and a Non-Partisan Tariff Commission.

Dover, Del., May 15.—Delaware prohibitionists in state convention here yesterday named delegates to the national convention at Pittsburg and adopted a platform in which they advocate the entire elimination of the tariff question from partisan politics, and its reference to a non-partisan commission, "thus freeing the whole subject from political bargaining and commercial distrust. With all progressive nations we believe that gold should be the standard of value for our monetary system; but we also believe silver and national bank notes should be used as a medium of exchange, and recognized as equal in value to gold in payment of all obligations, national as well as private debts included." The platform also makes the usual declaration of prohibition principles; protests against money obtained from liquor licenses being used for school purposes, and believes in equal right of suffrage.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

Mid-Year Meeting of New York State Association at Lyons.

Lyons, N. Y., May 15.—The mid-year convention of the Women's State Suffrage association convened in this village last evening. The attendance was large and included such distinguished women as Mrs. Mary Seymour Howell of Albany, Rev. Mrs. Wright of Brooklyn, Mrs. Lillie Devereaux Blake, Mrs. Harriet A. Keyser of New York and Mrs. Jean Brooks Greenleaf of Rochester. The convention was held in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, and was presided over by President Jean Brooks Greenleaf. The principal speakers were Mrs. Howell and Mrs. Blake. Mrs. Howell took her text from Tennyson: "Live pure, speak true, right wrong, follow the king; else, wherefore born." She spoke in eulogistic terms of Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and declared that Lucy Stone was immortal, while the Massachusetts minister who referred to her as a "crowing hen" was buried in oblivion. Mrs. Howell said that thousands of her sex were governed by the lash because they did not break away. "The coward," she said, "asks, is it safe; expediency asks is it politic; vanity asks is it popular; conscience asks is it right." Mrs. Howell closed by saying that while the state had statues of liberty in the image of women, no woman had liberty. Two business meetings will be held to-day, after which the convention will adjourn.

PROBABLY MRS. BLANCHARD.

Another Theory Regarding the Identity of "Mrs. Everett," the Suicide Mystery.

Worcester, Mass., May 15.—"Mrs. Everett," the woman who committed suicide in the Colonnade hotel in New York, is believed to be Alice M. Heald, who married George Blanchard in Concord, this state. They separated. He came to Worcester, and she went to Boston and is supposed to have lived at No. 30 Holyoke street as Mrs. Blanchard. She was always known as Kitty Heald, and after her marriage as Kitty Blanchard, which may explain the initials "K. B." found on her clothing. Her father was in the dry goods business in Lexington some years ago. He was afterwards taken to the Worcester lunatic asylum, where he died. This may also explain the note left by "Mrs. Everett," in which she mentioned hereditary insanity.

Foul Play Suspected.

Greenport, N. Y., May 15.—The body of a man believed to be a member of the firm of McMahon Brothers, wine dealers, New York city, was found on the shore of Long Island sound, near this place, last night. A hole, apparently made by a bullet, was found near the right eye, but a physician who examined the wounds at the coroner's inquest gave it as his opinion that they were made by a sea worm. Notwithstanding this, many persons here believe that the man was murdered. The body was buried after the inquest closed.

Lighthouse Tender for Mexico.

Philadelphia, May 15.—The Donato Guerra, the steel steam lighthouse tender that is being built for the Mexican government by the Neafie & Levy Ship and Engine Building company, was successfully launched late yesterday afternoon. The christening was performed by Miss Ricart of this city. The Mexican minister, Matias Romero, and wife and other Mexican officials were present.

ON ACCOUNT OF AGE

Bishops Bowman and Foster Retired by Methodist Conference.

DECLARED TO BE NON-EFFECTIVE

Some Believe the Action in Reducing the Number of Bishops To Be Elected Is To Get Rid of the Question of a Colored Bishop.

Cleveland, May 15.—The retirement by the Methodist Episcopal conference of Bishops Bowman and Foster on the grounds that they were too old to stand the strain of their duties was accomplished amid considerable excitement. As soon as the report of the committee recommending their retirement was read Bishop Foster advanced to speak. The entire audience arose and received him with great applause. In the impressive silence which followed Bishop Foster said he simply had a request to make. He knew the question was one of great delicacy, and he begged to be permitted to retire. Cries of "No! no!" came from all parts of the hall, and Bishop Foster extended his arms, saying: "Please! please!" He spoke for only a few moments, and the conference, by a rising vote, granted his request. Bishop Bowman said he would make the same request, as he had learned for the first time in his life that he was not effective. A call was made for a few remarks from him, but he declined to say anything, and the two white-haired bishops left the hall.

Vexed Colored Question.

The action of the conference in reducing the number of bishops to be elected is looked upon in some quarters as a means of getting rid of the vexed question of a colored bishop. They may secure one or two minor conference offices, but the greater portion of their satisfaction will probably have to be vested in that portion of the committee report which was adopted providing that "the time had now arrived when the conference may with propriety elect a bishop from among the 1,750 colored preachers within its jurisdiction." Whether they will be satisfied with the shadow, instead of the substance of their desire, remains for the future to disclose.

MAY INSIST ON RELIEF.

Possible Message to Congress on the Condition of the Treasury.

Washington, May 15.—The opinion is expressed by some of President Cleveland's friends that possibly he will send a message to congress just on the eve of adjournment, after both houses have adopted a resolution to that effect, insisting that they shall afford some relief to the treasury before going to their homes.

Bright Outlook for Fruit Crop.

Springfield, Mass., May 15.—The New England Homestead has made a special investigation of the present fruit outlook. By almost universal agreement the general prospect for all kinds of fruit east of the Rocky Mountains is fully equal to the very best for years. Aside from isolated sections in the older middle and New England states the winter was not severe enough to damage fruit buds, nor yet open enough to induce premature growth.

Exports of Merchandise.

Washington, May 15.—The chief of the bureau of statistics reports that the total values of the exports of merchandise from the United States during April, 1896, and during the ten months ended April 30, 1896, as compared with the corresponding periods of the preceding year, were as follows: April, 1896, $70,944,343; 1895, $65,255,641; ten months ended April 30, 1896, $749,036,125, 1895, $688,303,156.

Accused of Murdering His Mother.

Middletown, Conn., May 15.—Clarence Murphy was arrested last evening for the murder of his mother, Mrs. Ellen Murphy, at Durham, last Saturday night, and locked up in jail in this city, awaiting a preliminary trial at Durham. Coroner Davis found that Mrs. Murphy came to her death indirectly by alcoholism, and directly by the wounds on the head. Clarence's story at the inquest was very badly mixed.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? UNITED STATES Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896. Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

TO MARCH ON HAVANA

Gomez Said To Have Ordered a Concentration of Rebel Forces.

HOT FIGHTING EXPECTED THIS MONTH

The Question of Denouncing the Treaties Between Spain and the United States To Come Up Shortly in the Cortes at Madrid.

Havana, May 15.—It is said that Gen. Gomez, the commander-in-chief of the insurgents, has ordered a concentration of the rebel forces. On Saturday last he encamped with Jose Maceo, Rabi, Carillo, Serafino Sanchez and other leaders on the Campana ranch, near San Juan de las Yeres. The combined forces are said to have then numbered about 10,000 men. It is believed that they have started to march into the province of Havana, and possibly onto the capital, and that they have been joined by other forces on the way, the whole body now numbering over 20,000 men. It is expected that they will reach the vicinity of Havana about the end of the month, when hot fighting is likely to take place.

OUR TREATIES WITH SPAIN.

The Question of Denouncing Them To Be Considered by Spanish Cortes.

London, May 15.—A dispatch to the Central News from Madrid says that a question denouncing the treaties between Spain and the United States will shortly be introduced in the cortes.

Weyler Says He Is an Energetic Enemy.

Havana, May 15.—Capt.-Gen. Weyler has issued instructions in reference to his recent edict calling upon all peasants to seek refuge in the towns. Gen. Weyler is reported as saying that the concentration of peasants in the towns is not obligatory, but merely for the benefit of the inhabitants themselves. He also says that he is willing to employ in the army all who shall surrender voluntarily. He will be an energetic enemy, he says, but generous to those who have repented.

FOR MARRYING A SECOND TIME.

Rev. S.R. Fuller Suspended from the Episcopal Priesthood for Two Years.

Boston, May 15.—Rev. Samuel R. Fuller of Malden, who was charged with having violated the canons of the Episcopal church regarding marriage, has been publicly suspended from the priesthood for two years by Bishop Lawrence. He was informed that if, at the end of two years, he had returned to the performance of any ministerial duty without having proven his first wife guilty of adultry, he would return at his own peril. About fifty people, including a number of Presbyters were present, and immediately after Bishop Lawrence had read his decision, Mr. Fuller read an elaborate protest. It is understood that the committee who found Mr. Fuller guilty recommended his expulsion, but the bishop decided to deal with him as above. The specific charge was that of violating the law prohibiting the marriage of either party to a divorce while the other party is yet living, except in the case of the innocent party when a cause of divorce is adultery.

NEW YORK LIQUOR TAX.

The State's Share of Receipts from Fifty-eight Counties Over $1,000,000.

Albany, May 15.—All the counties of the state excepting Otsego and Livingston have made returns to the excise department of the state's share of the tax collected under the new liquor tax law. This share to date amounts to $1,182,123, while the total amount of money collected by the fifty-eight counties is $3,546,370.

Sultan Fears Assassination.

Berlin, May 15.—The Vossische Zeitung publishes a dispatch from Constantinople which says, that owing to the sultan's fear that he will be assassinated, as was the shah of Persia, 200 Armenians have been arrested in the city during the last few days. It is credibly stated that the prisoners have been cruelly tortured.

Want to Borrow $3,400,000.

Baltimore, May 15.—The receivers of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company have applied to the United States court for authority to issue $3,400,000 six per cent. car trust certificates, the proceeds to be used in paying for the new equipment to be purchased by the company. The application will be granted.

Erie Railroad Earnings.

Albany, May 15.—The first report of the reorganized Erie Railroad company has been made to the state railroad commission. It shows gross earnings of $6,187,291; operating expenses of $4,510,929; other income, $6,718; fixed charges, $1,741,291; deficit for the quarter, $58,189.

Postmasters Confirmed.

Washington, May 15.—The senate has confirmed the following postmaster nominations: New York—Julia E. Bronson, Clinton; Annie Larrabee, Oyster Bay; J. S. Colwell, Friendship; John Laubenthal, Alleghany; New Jersey—Jacob H. Fank, Hackensack.

Two of the Crew Drowned.

Gloucester, Mass., May 15.—Word from Bay Bulls, N. F., reports the fishing schooner John E. McKenzie arriving there with the loss of two of her crew, who were drowned April 29 by the capsizing of a dory while attending trawls.

Jackson Verdict To Be Appealed.

Newport, Ky., May 15.—Attorney for Scott Jackson, convicted yesterday afternoon of the murder of Pearl Bryan and sentenced to death, will carry the fight to the supreme court.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE

Subjects Being Discussed in Both Branches of Congress To-day.

DUPONT CONTEST CASE INTERRUPTED

A. P. A. Attacked and Defended in the Senate—River and Harbor Bill the Principal Business Before the House.

Washington, May 15.—Although yesterday and to-day were set apart for the consideration of the Delaware contest case, the senate has permitted other matters to greatly engross this time. A bill to restrict immigration by the application of the illiteracy test was the occasion for the delivery of two speeches, one against and one for the bill. Senator Gibson, dem., Md., spoke in opposition and Senator Nelson, rep., Minn., in advocacy. Senator Gibson attributed the instigation of the bill to the American Protective association, which he characterized as a secret, oath-bound, red-lettered, left-handed, dark-lanterned organization. The real purpose of the bill was, he asserted, hostility to the Catholic church. Senator Nelson defended the bill on account of the necessity of restricting immigration, and denied that the A. P. A. or hostility to the Catholic church had anything to do with it. No action was taken on the bill, it having been taken up for the sole purpose of having those two speeches delivered. The increase of bounties on sugar, recently proposed in the German reichstag, was also noticed by Senator Caffery, dem., La., in some remarks on a bill providing for an increase of United States duties in that and all similar cases. The bill was referred to the committee on finance, Senator Caffery arguing that its passage was necessary in order to prevent the destruction of the sugar industry in the United States.

House of Representatives.

The principal business before the house to-day is the river and harbor bill, returned from the senate, the amendments made by that body being disagreed to. Considerable time was spent in committee of the whole considering private pension bills. Fifty-three were acted upon favorably and reported to the house for passage, among the beneficiaries being the widows of Col. Orlando M. Poe, Gen. John Newton, Brig.-Gen. Charles D. Jameson and Brig.-Gen. and ex-senator G. E. Spencer, and Robert Smalls, the famous colored pilot and ex-congressman. The contested case of Henry P. Cheatham, rep., against Fred A. Woodward, dem., from the second district of North Carolina was disposed of by the adoption of a resolution reported from elections committee No 2, declaring Woodward entitled to the seat.

SENATORS IN CAUCUS.

Republican Members Discussing To-day the Question of Adjournment.

Washington, May 15.—The republicans of the senate went into caucus at noon to-day for the purpose of considering the question of adjournment and to determine what bills shall be passed before that time arrives. The general impression prevails that final adjournment can be had in the first week in June without trouble or inconvenience. It is said some plain talk will be engaged in, and an endeavor made to show the advocates of the repeal of the free alcohol clause how impossible it is to take up this amendment to the tariff act without coupling with it other amendments along republican lines. It is claimed that the free silver senators will not do anything to precipitate a financial discussion, and that if Mr. Sherman and those who are with him will agree to let the repeal go by the board there will be no stumbling block to adjournment as soon as the river and harbor bill becomes a law.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS.

Oregon on Her Trial Trip Develops a Speed of 16 78-100 Knots.

Santa Barbara, Cal., May 15.—The Oregon on her trial trip yesterday made 16 78-100ths knots per hour. This, it is believed, breaks all records for vessels of her class.

Mr. Jaffray May Recover.

New York, May 15.—Reginald H. Jaffray, who had his right leg cut off by a train yesterday on the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, is a son of Howard Jaffray and grandson of E. S. Jaffray, founder of the famous dry goods house. He is 23 years old. He was married three weeks ago to Miss Azuber L. Barney, and had just returned home from his wedding trip. Although weak from shock and loss of blood, the doctors said this morning that he would probably recover.

Public Lands at $1.25 an Acre.

Washington, May 15.—The secretary of the interior has instructed the commissioner of the general land office to continue to sell the desert public lands within the limits of railroad grants at $1.25 per acre. A decision of the United States supreme court cast some doubt on the authority of the secretary to fix that valuation, and the commissioner of the general land office requested directions.

Outlook for Mackerel Fishing Good.

Gloucester, Mass., May 15.—The outlook at present for mackerel is the best in many years, and the fish are reported being taken from the Jersey coast to Nova Scotia, which is the earliest taken at the latter place on record.

Stove Platers on Strike.

Buffalo, May 15.—Forty-five stove platers employed by the Jewett Stove works are on strike for an increase of wages. Should the molders and other craftsmen employed by the company go out the strike would be a large one.

COMING EVENTS.

May 19—Annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A.
May 21—Cecilia Club concert at Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The borough ordinance regarding the use of bells and lanterns on bicycles goes into effect today.

The Daily Press has been designated by the Board of Freeholders as one of the official papers of the county.

It is a sad reflection on the borough government when the hose cart has to be tugged to a conflagration by a lumbering ice wagon, as was the case yesterday.

It is understood that Charles A. Reed will appear for Policemen Vanderweg and Flynn at the Common Council meeting next Monday night, when the charges of insubordination will be aired.

The following advertisement in a Boston paper tells a brief but eloquent story of the rise, decline and fall of cycling enthusiasm in one instance: "With my hand in a sling and my leg in a splint, I will sell my bicycle, three days in use, cheap."

We congratulate Hon. James J Bergen upon his selection as delegate to the National Democratic Convention from the Third District. Somerset stands little show for honors in the district, either from the Republican or Democratic side. Monmouth and Middlesex are abominably greedy.—Unionist-Gazette.

Senator Smith will dine the New Jersey delegation to the Democratic National Convention at the Manhattan Club in New York tomorrow evening. A conference as to the plan of action which New Jersey will take at the convention will mark the event, and no doubt Senator Smith will be selected to head the delegation.

Mr. William Watchung, who gives his address as Plainfield, severely criticises Mr. Thomas C. Platt, in a letter to the New York Tribune this morning, for his opposition and attack on the Republican Napoleon, McKinley. The true identity of "Mr. Watchung" is as shady as the thoroughfare from whose name he takes his cognomen.

Governor Griggs has promised that he will dispose of all the bills left in his hands by the One Hundred and Twentieth Legislature by next Tuesday. Among the bills still awaiting action are two introduced by Assemblyman Codington. They are the anti cigarette bill, prescribing a $20 fine for any person selling, giving or manufacturing cigarettes in the State, and the bill authorizing the incorporation of political county committees.

Drs. E. W. and B. VanD. Hedges have won a great victory. They were attacked in a way to threaten not only heavy damages but loss of future usefulness. They met the attack fearlessly and uncompromisingly and the whole State knows today that they are two of the most capable and careful surgeons within the borders of New Jersey. It was a great compliment to Craig A. Marsh when he was given sole charge of this important and, to the doctors, momentous case, and the result shows that the doctors' confidence in him was not misplaced.

All signs in New Jersey point to a Democratic canvass of old-fashioned vigor, conducted with the inspiration of hope, and managed in person by the most accomplished master of the art of practical politics that the party organization in the State has evolved in twenty years. The Democrats of New Jersey are for honest money and the gold standard. They will fight under that flag, and will win or be beaten with their colors flying. Their representatives in Chicago will consent to no dangerous or doubtful utterance on the part of the National Convention. At the same time they will make a tremendous and probably successful attack upon the Republican intrenchments within the State. It is a critical year for the Democracy. The Chairman of the Democratic State Committee for the campaign of 1896 is the senior Senator for New Jersey, the Hon. James Smith, of Newark. His leadership means business. It is quite characteristic of Senator Smith that he should not be content at this juncture with merely representing sound money sentiment in the Senate Chamber at Washington, but should come down into the field of active political management, where his services are at present most needed, and where his abilities are consummate.—New York Sun.

Miss Lulu Stetson, of Philadelphia, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Sturtevant, of Orchard place, has gone to Brooklyn for a short stay with friends.

Miss Bertha Frederica Warman, of Grove street, was among the nineteen young women who were graduated last evening from the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses. The graduating exercises were held in the hospital, Madison avenue and Sixty-seventh street, New York, and were followed by a reception.

A brilliant reception and luncheon was given yesterday afternoon in the club house of the Essex County Country Club, in Hutton Park, West Orange, by the Philitscipoma Club, of Newark, the largest of the woman's clubs in that city. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was to have been present as the guest of honor, but could not attend. Her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, the State secretary of the general federation, represented her and delivered an address on the "General Federation."

testified that in the middle of last August he wrote a card of admission for Mr. Benner to come to the Presbyterian Hospital and have an operation of resection done on the then ununited bones. Dr. McCook also testified that the surgical treatment throughout had been above criticism, and from the large amount of provisional callus now thrown out about the seat of fracture, there could not have been union more than three months ago. He testified also as to the high character and surgical ability of the Doctors Hedges.

Dr. Mravlag and Dr. Green, of Elizabeth, and Dr. Murray and Dr. Tomlinson, of this city, also testified that the defendants had done throughout everything that care and skill could do for Mr. Benner.

After the Doctors had testified how they treated the limb, and the numerous experts had declared such treatment to be the very best known to modern surgery, Mr. Benner's experts did not go on the stand to deny it.

The summing up of the counsel occurred yesterday afternoon and occupied three hours, an hour and a half being allowed each side. Mr. Marsh made one of the strongest pleas of his life, as did W. R. Codington, while the summing of Mr. Swackhammer was highly dramatic. He used many devices and comparisons in drawing on the sympathies of the jury, and it is said there were many tears shed during his speech.

Judge Van Syckle charged the jury shortly after three o'clock, and after this it was thought the jury would return in a few minutes with a verdict for the Doctor Hedges. But they stayed out all night and this morning at 9 o'clock they filed into court and announced "no cause for action."

Mr. Swackhamer told a Press reporter this morning that the case would be appealed to the Supreme Court as soon as the proper papers could be made out. He stated that new evidence had been secured.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Williams, of Warrenville, is visiting Mrs. Kersting of this city.

Miss Getti, of New York, is the guest of Miss Sadie Hand, of East Fifth street.

Postmaster Hetfield is ill at his home on Park avenue. Mrs. Hetfield is also quite ill.

Mrs. E. W. Thornton, of Cranford, is visiting Mrs. H. B. Thatcher, of East Front street.

Miss Jennie Frentz, of Scotch Plains, spent yesterday with her sister, Mrs. Frank Putnam, of Elm place.

L. A. Carroll, of Clark, Colmay & Company, one of the largest shoe dealers in Boston, was in town yesterday.

Miss Ouida Hetfield, the little daughter of ex-Councilmman Walter L. Hetfield, of East Second street, has a severe attack of measles.

J. B. Anderson, of Somerville, county superintendent of public schools, was in North Plainfield today looking after the interests of the school.

Mrs. Wm. J. Ford left home Wednesday for New York to visit her little grandson, who had arrived that day at the home of L. K. Clarke. Mr. Clarke and family formerly resided on Madison avenue, this city.

At the National Electric Light Association's electrical exposition that is being held in New York at present, Willard M. Miner, of East Sixth street, is in charge of the exhibit of the Bimetallic Electric Transmission Company and also of the exhibit of John A. Robling Sons Company.

To Give a Supper.

The members of Franklin Council, No. 41, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, decided at their meeting last night to give a supper Thursday evening, May 28th. The matter is in charge of the good and welfare committee, who will also provide an entertainment for the members. The visiting of other councils was brought up and discussed. It is likely several trips will be made during the summer.

—The New York Coaching Club will pass through this city tomorrow morning on a trip from New York to Philadelphia. They change horses here at the corner of Fifth street and Park avenue. The horses arrived this afternoon.

—An exciting runaway of a horse and milk wagon belonging to Poole Voorhees was witnessed on Pearl street this morning. The wagon was upset and the milk and cans were strewn along the street. The horse was caught.

—Tomorrow "only," Saturday May 16th, VanEmburgh & Son will sell 375 pair of children's fine derby ribbed hose, double heel and toe, best combed Egyptian cotton, absolutely fast black, sizes from 7 to 9 inch at the slaughter price of 17c pair, never a pair been sold less than 25c.

—The property owners along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue, in the borough, are to be given a public hearing this evening at the Council meeting. The ordinance which provides for the closing of Sycamore avenue will also be considered.

His Work Appreciated.

The Duluth, Minn., News-Tribune, under date of Monday, April 13th, has the following to say about a former Plainfielder: "Secretary Charles B. Brown, of the Minneapolis Young Men's Christian Association, delivered brief addresses on the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the Pilgrim Congregational and First M. E. churches yesterday morning. In the afternoon, in the auditorium of the association, a large audience of men assembled to hear Mr. Brown's address on "True Manhood." Secretary Brown's remarks were excellent, and commanded the closest attention of all present. In the evening Mr. Brown again spoke, this time before the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, presenting the work of the association at length. Secretary Brown's earnest words and active work on behalf of the Duluth association, cannot fail to be productive of much good for the Y. M. C. A. of this city."

One minute is the standard time, and One Minute Cough Cure is the standard preparation for every form of cough or cold. It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. For sale by L. W. Randolph 143 West Front Street.

—Traffic is suspended on Washington avenue, between Front street and Prospect place, while the bridge which spans Green brook is being repaired.

—Gov. Griggs will go to New Brunswick today to witness the exhibition drill of the Rutgers College Battalion, which will be held at 4 o'clock on Nelson field.

—J. T. Vail has had the contract for building all the drain culverts under the street railway tracks for the street railway company, and is now finishing them for the city.

—Some small boys threw a quantity of rocks from the Central Railroad embankment to the sidewalk of Plainfield avenue. The practice is a dangerous one for pedestrians.

—There is a board walk at the corner of Watchung and Jackson avenues that needs repair, and the borough officials should look after it before someone is injured.

—The children of St. Joseph's parish enjoyed a pleasant afternoon yesterday at the strawberry and ice cream festival, held in Saenger and Turner hall for the benefit of the church.

—The Board of Freeholders has fixed 5 cents as the single passenger fare for the New Jersey and Staten Island ferry, which will run between Elizabethport and Staten Island.

—Geo. Stagaard, the East Front street shoe dealer, has heard nothing thus far regarding the shoes stolen from his place the night of the circus, and has about given up all hopes.

—The Art Critic, of New York, in its last issue spoke very flatteringly of the excellent work of the artist, A. Z. Baker, who is now the guest of his cousin, Albert P. Simmonds, of Watchung avenue.

—The third anniversary of the East Third Street Christian Endeavor Society will be held next week. The committee in charge met last evening and formed plans for the event, which will be an interesting one.

—A delegation from Plainfield Post, commanded by Captain Mimms, will meet all sympathizers with the new American movement, at Somerset Hall, Somerville, this evening, for the purpose of organizing a Volunteer Post in that town.

—A man from New York, who is visiting in this city, has become so attached to Plainfield's fire department that he is going to photograph the fire headquarters building and apparatus next week. He wants the picture as a souvenir of his visit to Plainfield.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. Street Railway Work Progressing.

Superintendent Harry Yarnell has his men working on Fifth street today making a few necessary alterations to the street railway tracks. The Fourth street and the Dunellen lines will be cleared as soon as possible. These tracks will be used while the work of narrowing the gauge of the other tracks is being carried out.

On the Somerset street line it will only be necessary to narrow on one side, but on the other line both outside tracks will have to be moved. It will also be necessary to change the trolley wires. This will be done by shifting the span. The work will probably be started next week. In the borough it is likely that a distance of 500 feet will be opened at one time.

—Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., meet tonight and work the long form of the third rank on the one candidate.

—Tomorrow "only," Saturday May 16th, VanEmburgh & Son will sell 375 pair of children's fine derby ribbed hose, double heel and toe, best combed Egyptian cotton absolutely fast black, sizes from 7 to 9 inch, at the slaughter price of 17c pair, never a pair been sold less than 25c.

Terrible Weather.

Western Boy—You folks here don't know anything about cold weather.

Eastern Boy—We don't, eh? It's worse than the North Pole here sometimes. Talk about cold! Phew! Why, one day this winter it was so cold that I stayed in at recess.—Good News.

A Valuable Reason.

"I have a reason for supporting this franchise ordinance," said Alderman Grabbit, briskly.

But he got no further.

"Haven't you cashed it in yet?" broke in a rude, coarse person, who was given to mean insinuations.—Chicago Record.

A Danger Foreseen.

Editing Under Difficulties.

Little Sister—Most of the articles in your paper this month is awful poor.

Little Brother (editor Amateur Monthly)—I know it; but the boys that wrote 'em sent stamps for their return and I needed the stamps.—Good News.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

Both Were a Trifle Scared.

At a recent gathering of notable men, the after-dinner chat turned upon personal experiences, and a distinguished jurist related this:

After graduation, he migrated to a western town; months of idleness, with no prospect of improvement, induced him to seek a new home. Without money to pay his fare, he boarded a train for Nashville, intending to seek employment as a reporter on one of the daily newspapers. When the conductor called for his ticket he said:

"I am on the staff of the ——, of Nashville; I suppose you will pass me?"

The conductor looked at him sharply.

"The editor of that paper is in the smoker; come with me; if he identifies you, all right."

He followed the conductor into the smoker; the situation was explained; Mr. Editor said:

"Oh, yes, I recognize him as one of the staff; it is all right."

Before leaving the train the lawyer again sought the editor:

"Why did you say you recognized me? I'm not on your paper."

"I am not the editor, either. I'm traveling on his pass, and was scared to death lest you should give me away."—Fashions.

The Coming Heroine.

Mr. Jinks—I wish you wouldn't allow our daughter to read those sentimental novels.

Mrs. Jinks—She isn't reading a sentimental novel. The heroine doesn't marry for love.

"Well, the modern society novel, in which the heroine marries for money, is just as bad."

"She isn't reading a society novel."

"Then what is it?"

"It's an advanced novel."

"What's that?"

"The heroine marries for a political pull."—N. Y. Weekly.

A Pleasant Revelation.

Stranger—Zum Donnerwetter, now you have cut my chin a second time. If you can't shave better than that you will lose all your customers pretty quick.

Barber's Apprentice—Not at all! I am not allowed to shave the regular customers yet. I only shave strangers! —Fliegende Blaetter.

Already Settled.

Pastor—What are they going to name your new twin brothers, Willy?

Willy—Thunder and Lightning.

Pastor—Why, Willy, you must be mistaken!

Willy—Well, anyhow, that's what pop called 'em, when the nurse brought 'em in!—Puck.

Keeping Them Out.

Witherby—When we get our new house, I want to have a room by myself—a room that no one else will think of entering.

Mrs. Witherby—That's easily arranged, my dear; I'll let you select the wall paper for it, yourself.—Puck.

Came Natural.

Jess—When you were introduced to Lord Forgivuz, did you addressed him as "my lord?"

Bess—Certainly; that expression popped out directly I set eyes on him. —N. Y. World.

The Sweet Young Thing.

She—I had the greatest time I ever had in my life.

He—Did you break the record?

She—I don't know; but papa says I came very near breaking him.—Detroit Free Press.

Proof Positive.

"That's the girl" (pointing to a young lady and her escort).

"But why do you think they are engaged?"

"Because he has stopped taking her to the theater and goes to church instead."—Life.

SUSAN WAS AWAY.

And Wolves Carried Off the Cow and Calf.

Hermit Miles' Story of a Night with Wolves on His Clearing While Susan Was Away in Attendance on Sally Ann Parks.

"THE only time me an' Susan got the wust of it, down on our clearin'," said Cuthbert Miles, the basket-weaving octogenarian hermit of Indian River, "was the time the wolves come an' run our cow an' calf away one night. Sad, that was! Sad, I tell ye! Fer cows was cows in them days, an'—. But, Lord! what be I a-sayin'? 'Twa'n't Susan that got the wust of it, 'cause Susan wa'n't home that night. She was down to Parks' clearin', five mile, Parks havin' come up a tearin' that day, an' ast her if she wouldn't go back with him, his Sally Ann bein' sick, an' Susan jest went, warnin' me to keep an eye on things an' not to let anything git away. So 'twas me, an' not me an' Susan that got the wust of it that night. Why, there ain't no more doubt than there is that I'm a twistin' this willer twig this minute that if Susan had a ben home nobody'd got the wust of it but the wolves! 'Stoundin', woman! 'Stoundin'!

"Yes, sir. Cows was cows in those days in the wildernest. The nighest neighbor we had was the Parks', five mile, an' the next was Benson's, seven mile, with nothin' but woods an' b'ar an' wolves an' painters betwixt us. That cow of our'n was one Benson had got way down on the West Branch, an' he had led her more'n forty miles through the woods to git her to his clearin', which was a big un an' old un for them days. Benson havin' ben there five years when me an' Susan come down from York state, chopped a hole in the woods, and put up our log cabin. That was our weddin' trip, too, mind ye! That cow that Benson fetched up from the West Branch made three cows for him, an' that was an amazin' drove fer one man to hev. He was a reg'lar cattle king.

"Benson was a good man, an' you better b'lieve that there was a rej'icin' time on that little clearin' of our'n when I made a dicker with him in the way o' choppin' now an' then fer him, and he turned the cow over to me, an' I led her home. Not only the cow, but a new calf at her side! Now mabbee we wa'n't rich! A cow an' a calf, a log cabin ye could see through most anywhere, an' a three-acre clearin'! Rich? I should say so! Richer, I bet you, than many a one is nowadays ez has farms they can't walk around in a day, an' cattle on a thousan' hills! 'Cause we was happy, me an' Susan was, down there in the wildernest! We didn'te hev no pastur', an' we didn't hev no feed nor fodder fer our cow 'cept browse cut from the trees, but we kep' her goin' fust rate on that.

"Now, if I'd a tol' Susan I was goin to git the cow an' calf from Benson, she'd a up an' said:

"'Nothin' 'cept news from home could be better news than that, Moses!' She allúz called me Moses, 'cause Cuthbert wa'n't no sort of a name to be in the wildernest with. 'Nothin' 'cept news from home could be better news than that, Moses, but 'fore you fetch 'em over, you jest shake up a barn o' some kind to put 'em in. There's too many b'ars an' wolves an' painters lookin' fer setch meat as that to hev it layin' right open 'fore their eyes!'

"Susan'd, a said that, or sumpin' like it, sure's yer born, 'cause she was so astoundin', but I wanted to s'prise her with the cow an' the calf, an' I was so anxious to git 'em that I never thought nothin' 'bout no barn, nor no b'ars, nor no wolves, nor no painters. I was just thinkin' 'bout Susan, 'an how glad she'd be. An' she was, too! She cried, an' hugged me, an' said:

"'Now if I jist had only a little news from home I don't think Heaven could be much nicer'n this here clearin'!'

"Susan wa'n't homesick, mind ye! But her mother was old and poorly,

"I CLUBBED THE GUN AND I FIT,"

an' natur'ly Susan had a lonsin'. But, glad as she was, she was put out 'cause we didn't hev no place to keep the cow an' the calf safe, an' it happened jest then that my time was so all-fired took up that it'd be a couple o' weeks 'fore I could go to throwin' up sumpin' to keep 'em in wat'd be b'ar an' wolf an' painter proof, though it wa'n't much of a job. I could a-done it on a Sunday, but Susan wouldn't hear to that.

"'It ain't no less Sunday,' she says, 'cause it's 'way back here in the wildernest,' she says.

"So what do you think we took to doin'? Fust I made a three-cornered pen by throwin' up logs two or three rods from the cabin. This was to keep the cow from wanderin'. Then me and Susan 'd set up nights watchin' the cow an' the calf, with my ol' flint lock gun layin' handy, so ez to tumble the fust thing that came nosin' around that live stock of our'n. Susan 'd set up part o' the night an' I'd set up t'other part so's we'd both ketch some sleep. We'd ben watchin' in this way for a week an' more, an' never a wunst had a b'ar or a wolf or a painter give even ez much ez a sign that they had their eye on our cow an' calf. An' do you know why? 'Cause Susan was there! Nothin' else, sir. They knowed that ez long ez Susan was in that cabin there wa'n't no more use o' their tryin' to git our cow an' calf than there would a ben o' their tryin' to lug off a drove o' wild elephants! That's what I believe, an' there ain't no doubt of it. 'Cause see what happened the minute Susan wa'n't there? The las' words she said to me when she went to Parks' that day was:

"'Now keep yer eye peeled, Moses, an' don't let nothin' git away!'

"'Don't you worry, Susan!' I says. 'Don't you worry!'

"I browsed the cow down that night, smoked a pipe or two in the cabin door, watched the sun go down 'hind the hills on one side o' the clearin', seen the moon come up from 'hind the hills on t'other side, an' felt lonesome, I tell ye! By an' by I went in, shut up me cabin, got ol' flint-lock, sot down by the little hole we called the winder, an' watched, an' watched, an' thought o' Susan. It must a ben som'ers long to'ard mornin', fer the moon had got way past our clearin' an' we was in the shadders, but, anyhow, I dropped asleep. Yes, sir! Actu'lly slep' on the post o' duty! I was waked by a snappin' an' a snarlin' an' a battin' an' a bellerin'. The wolves was arter our cow an' calf! I don't know how I ever got out there, but I was there in less than no time. I let go with ol' flint-lock, an' one wolf was gone. Then I clubbed the gun an' I fit with hands an' feet. I clubbed an' I choked an' I clutched, but the cow broke over the logs, and, the calf follerin' her, away they went fer the woods, all that was left o' the pack follerin' 'em, howling like demons! Like a wild man I follered. I follered, thinkin' o' Susan a nussin' of a sick neighbor, an' me a lettin' wolves come an' run her cow an' calf away! I'm 'shamed to say it, but by an' by, howin' there wasn't no use o' chasin' any longer, I sat down in the woods an' bellered like a baby. Yes, I actu'lly did! When I got back to the clearin' it was broad daylight. It was some comfort to me to see seven dead wolves stretched round that cow pen, an' it was a leetle consolin' to feel that if the cow had only stayed in her pen I'd a saved her, if there'd ben twict as many wolves!

RAISING HER FINGER SHE COUNTED EVERY ONE OF THEM.

"When I got into the cabin I begun to feel kind o' weak, an' then I see fer the first that I was blood pooty much all over me, an' that my hands an' arms an' chist was tore considerable, an' that my clothes was slit an' ripped an' tattered most amazin'. But I took a good pull at Susan's jug o' elderberry wine she'd fetched all the way from York state, an' went to the creek an' washed. Then I felt more nat'ral like, an' sot down in the cabin, waitin' for Susan, an' 'shamed to see her, fer lettin' her cow an' calf be run away by wolves.

"'Long in the forenoon I see her comin' out o' the woods, jist on the edge of our clearin', on the side o' the cabin, 'way from the cow pen, so she couldn't see that it was empty till she turned round the cabin. I tried to git up an' go meet her, but my feet wouldn't let me, somehow. I see her turn the cabin, an' s'pected to see her jist flop right down an' carry on terrible the minute she sot her eyes on that empty pen. But I didn't know Susan yet. She gave a little start and a gulp or two, an' then actu'lly stood still an', raisin' her finger, counted ev'ry one o' them wolves over. Then she hurried into the cabin. I had got up by this time.

"'Susan,' I says, 'they'm gone!'

"'Can't be helped, Moses,' says she, kissin' of me. 'You ain't gone, an' there's seven less wolves in the woods.'

"Then she just sot to work a bandagin' of me up, an' all I could do was to say to myself: 'Astoundin'! Most astoundin'!'

"Arter Susan had me all done up, an' was hustlin' round settin' things to rights, suddently she says, an' her eyes was twinklin':

"'Ye had a hard night, Moses. But think o' poor Joe Parks! You was only fightin' wolves, but think o' what poor Joe went through, an' he stood it like a man!'

"'What in under the blue canopy has happened to Joe?' I says.

"'There's twins on his clearin'!' says Susan, an' ye orter heerd her laugh!"—N. Y. Sun.

Will Live Together.

"Mamma," said an inquisitive little girl, "will rich and poor folks live together when they go to Heaven?"

"Yes, my dear, they will all be alike there."

"Then, ma, why don't rich and poor Christians associate together here?"

The mother did not answer.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

SOMETHING NEW.

How Some People Follow Every New Fad.

But the Majority Prefer That Experiments Should Be Tried Upon Somebody Else.

Some persons are always so anxious for something new that it is astonishing they still continue to eat plain bread and butter. They have always thrived well on beef, eggs, and potatoes; but somebody writes an article for a scientific journal, and attempts to show that these foods are neither as cheap nor as nutritious as some other kind of food. Therefore, some persons drop this standard diet and take up whatever some young scientist directs. We cannot understand this. When anything has been thoroughly tried and tested, and found in every way satisfactory, why do some people persist in running after some new-fangled notion? Take cod-liver oil for instance. It has been used for two hundred years with most marvellous success, and in a large variety of complaints. Its success has been no greater in the past than it is to-day. More skillful methods of preparing it, and emulsifying it (for it is generally acknowledged that it should always be given in the form of an emulsion), gives assurance that its future use is bound to be even far greater than ever.

And yet some people talk about a "substitute for cod-liver oil"! Substitute? Why, it is almost laughable. It certainly would be so, were the question not such a serious one. There can be no substitute for cod-liver oil, for there is nothing at all like it known to medical science. When Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites has been used for over twenty years, and when thousands have testified to its curative properties, is it not strange that any one would think of trying an experiment with some new preparation of cod-liver oil? When you know you are safe in taking Scott's Emulsion, is it not too risky business to try something new? Do you think Scott's Emulsion could have stood these twenty years, and have a larger sale to-day than ever before, unless it had true, genuine merit. Where do you suppose these substitutes, which do not contain a particle of oil, will be twenty years from now? And where will all the fancy preparations, as the various wines of cod-liver oil, be at that time? It is perfectly safe to predict that before they are half as old as Scott's Emulsion is, they will be forgotten. Do not allow yourselves to be experimented upon; be satisfied with the best; and take advantage of twenty years of ever increasing prosperity.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor

He paused, and the murmur of the crowd without came to my ears; but mingled with and heightened by some confusion in my thoughts. I struggled feebly with this, seeing a rush of color to Croisette's face, a lightening in his eyes, as if a veil had been raised from before them. Some confusion—for I thought I grasped the vidame's meaning; yet there he was still glowering on his victim with the same grim visage, still speaking in the same rough tone. "Listen, M. de Pavannes," he continued, rising to his full height and waving his hand with a certain majesty towards the window—no one had spoken. "The doors are open! Your mistress is at Caylus. The road is clear, go to her; go to her, and tell her that I have saved your life, and that I give it to you not out of love, but out of hate! If you had flinched I would have killed you, for so you would have suffered most, M. de Pavannes. As it is, take your life—a gift! and suffer as I should if I were saved and spared by my enemy!"

Slowly the full sense of his words came home to me. Slowly; not in its full completeness, indeed, until I heard Louvre in broken phrases, phrases half proud and half humble, thanking him for his generosity. Even then I almost lost the true and wondrous meaning of the thing when I heard his answer. For he cut Pavannes short with bitter, caustic gibes, spurned his proffered gratitude with insults and replied to his acknowledgments with threats.

"Go! go!" he continued to cry violently. "Have I brought you so far safely that you will cheat me of my vengeance at the last, and provoke me to kill you? Away! and take these blind puppies with you! Reckon me as much your enemy now as ever! And if I meet you, be sure you will meet a foe! Begone, M. de Pavannes, begone!"

"But, M. de Bezers," Louis persisted, "hear me. It takes two to—"

"Begone! begone! before we do one another a mischief!" cried the vidame, furiously. "Every word you say in that strain is an injury to me. It robs me of my vengeance. Go! in God's name!"

And we went on; for there was no change, no promise of softening in his malignant aspect as he spoke; nor any as he stood and watched us draw off slowly from him. We went one by one, each lingering after the other, striving, out of a natural desire to thank him, to break through that stern reserve.

"I might have left you to die in that hell yonder."

But grim and unrelenting, a picture of scorn to the last, he saw us go.

My latest memory of that strange man—still fresh after a lapse of two and fifty years—is of a huge form towering in the gloom below the state canopy, the sunlight which poured in through the windows and flooded us, falling short of him; of a pair of fierce cross eyes, that seemed to glow as they covered us; of a lip that curled as in the enjoyment of some cruel jest. And so I—and I think each of us four—saw the last of Raoul de Mar, Vidame de Bezers, in this life.

He was a man whom we cannot judge by to-day's standard; for he was such an one in his vices and his virtues as the present day does not know; one who in his time did immense evil—and if his friends be believed, little good. But the evil is forgotten; the good lives. And if all that good save one act were buried with him, that one act alone, the act of a French gentleman, would be told of him—ay! and will be told—as long as the kingdom of France, and the gracious memory of the late king, shall endure.

I see again by the simple process of shutting my eyes, the little party of five—for Jean, our servant, had rejoined us—who on that summer day rode over the hills to Caylus, threading the mazes of the holm-oaks, and galloping down the rides, and hallooing the hare from her form, but never pursuing her; arousing the nestling farmhouses from their sleepy stillness by joyous shout and laugh, and sniffing, as we climbed the hill-side again, the scent of the ferns that died crushed under our horses' hoofs—died only that they might add one little pleasure more to the happiness God had given us. Rare and sweet indeed are those few days in life, when it seems that all creation lives only that we may have pleasure in it, and thank God for it. It is well that we should make the most of them, as we surely did of that day.

It was nightfall when we reached the edge of the uplands, and looked down on Caylus. The last rays of the sun lingered with us, but the valley below was dark! so dark that even the rock about which our homes clustered would have been invisible save for the half-dozen lights that were beginning to twinkle into being on its summit. A silence fell upon us as we slowly wended our way down the well-known path.

All day we had ridden in great joy; if thoughtless, yet innocent; if selfish, yet thankful; and always blithely, with a great exultation and relief at heart, a great rejoicing for our own sakes and for Kit's.

Now with the nightfall and the darkness, now when we were near our home, and on the eve of giving joy to another, we grew silent. There arose other thoughts—thoughts of all that had happened since we had last ascended that track; and so our minds turned naturally back to him to whom we owed our happiness—to the giant left behind in his pride and power and his loneliness. The others could think of him with full hearts, yet without shame. But I reddened, reflecting how it would have been with us if I had had my way; if I had resorted in my shortsightedness to one last violent, cowardly deed, and killed him, as I had twice wished to do.

Pavannes would then have been lost—almost certainly. Only the vidame with his powerful troop—we never knew whether he had gathered them for that purpose or merely with an eye to his government—could have saved him. And few men however powerful—perhaps Bezers only of all men in Paris—would have dared to snatch him from the mob when once it had sighted him. I dwell on this now that my grandchildren may take warning by it, though never will they see such days as I have seen.

And so we clattered up the steep street of Caylus with a pleasant melancholy upon us, and passed, not without a more serious thought, the gloomy, frowning portals, all barred and shuttered, of the House of the Wolf, and under the very window, sombre and vacant, from which Bezers had incited the rabble in their attack on Pavannes' courier. We had gone by day, and we came back by night. But we had gone trembling, and we came back in joy.

We did not need to ring the great bell. Jean's cry: "Ho! Gate there! Open for my lords!" had scarcely passed his lips before we were admitted. And ere we could mount the ramp, one person outran those who came forth to see what the matter was; one outran Mme. Claude, outran old Gil, outran the hurrying servants and the welcome of the house. I saw a slender figure all in white break away from the little crowd and dart towards us, disclosing as it reached me a face that seemed still whiter than its robes, and yet a face that seemed all eyes—eyes that asked the question the lips could not frame.

I stood aside with a low bow, my hat in my hand; and said simply—it was the great effect of my life: "Voila, monsieur!"

And then I saw the sun rise in a woman's face.

The vidame de Bezers died as he had lived. He was still governor of Cahors when Henry the Great attacked it on the night of the 17th of June, 1580. Taken by surprise and wounded in the first confusion of the assault, he still defended himself and his charge with desperate courage, fighting from street to street, and house to house for five nights and as many days. While he lived Henry's destiny and the fate of France trembled in the balance. But he fell at length, his brain pierced by the ball of an arquebuse, and died an hour before sunset on the 22d of June. The garrison immediately surrendered.

Marie and I were present in this action on the side of the king of Navarre, and at the request of that prince hastened to pay such honors to the body of the vidame as were due to his renown and might serve to evince our gratitude. A year later his remains were removed from Cahors, and laid where they now rest in his own Abbey Church of Bezers, under a monument which very briefly tells of his stormy life and his valor. No matter. He has small need of a monument whose name lives in the history of his country, and whose epitaph is written in the lives of men.

NOTE.—The character and conduct of Vidame de Bezers, as they appear in the above memoir, find a parallel in an account given by De Thou of one of the most remarkable incidents in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. "Amid such examples," he writes, "of the ferocity of the city, a thing happened worthy to be related, and which may perhaps weigh in some degree against these atrocities. There was a deadly hatred, which up to this time the intervention of their friends and neighbors had failed to appease, between two men—Vezins, the lieutenant of Honoratus of Savoy, Marshal Villars, a man notable among the nobility of the province for his valor, but obnoxious to many owing to his brutal disposition (ferina natura), and Regnier, a young man of like rank and vigor, but of milder character. When Regnier, then, in the middle of that great uproar, death meeting his eye everywhere, was making up his mind to the worst, his door was suddenly burst open and Vezins, with two other men, stood before him, sword in hand. Upon this Regnier, assured of death, knelt down and asked mercy of Heaven; but Vezins, in a harsh voice, bid him rise from his prayers and mount a palfrey already standing ready in the street for him. So he led Regnier—uncertain for the time whither he was being taken—out of the city and put him on his honor to go with him without trying to escape. And together, without pausing on their journey, the two traveled all the way to Guienne. During this time Vezins honored Regnier with very little conversation; but so far cared for him that food was prepared for him at the inns by his servants; and so they came to Quercy and the castle of Regnier. There Vezins turned to him and said: 'You know how I have for a long time back sought to avenge myself on you, and how easily I might now have done it to the full, had I been willing to use this opportunity. But shame would not suffer it; and, besides, your courage seemed worthy to be set against mine on even terms. Take, therefore, the life which you owe to my kindness.'" With much more which the curious will find in the second (folio) volume of De Thou.

THE END.

An Eminent Demon.

Asmodeus was an eminent demon—more powerful than Astaroth, Cedon, Uriel, Belzebuth, Aborym, Azazel, Dagon, Magog, Magon, Isaacharum, Accaron, Orphaxat and Beherit, who are not insignificant demons in any literature. Asmodeus had women for his accomplices; that was why he was so powerful. Demonologists recognize him by his legs, one of which is like a rooster's and the other of which has claws. His portrait, drawn by Collin de Plancy, was authorized by the archbishop of Paris. This does not necessarily prove anything, but Paul Lucas published, in 1719, in three volumes, the relation of his meeting with Asmodeus on the Nile. This is surprising, because Asmodeus was tried by the bishop of Poitiers in 1647 and thrown with chains into a cavern. But St. Augustine has explained how demons may be chained or unchained. They gain or lose the liberty to harm men. Colbert issued an edict against Asmodeus.—N. Y. Times.

NATURAL FAT.

Getting Fat is Only a Question of Eating Proper Food.

Thin people who want to get fat should eat proper food and digest it.

That is the only natural way.

The trouble with most thin people is that they suffer from indigestion.

They don't digest their food. They don't get enough nourishment. They are slowly being starved. They are poisoned by the products of fermented and putrid food.

Shaker Digestive Cordial, a gentle, natural, vegetable digestive, attacks the food in your stomach just like the digestive juices, and turns it into healthful nourishment. It helps your stomach naturally. It makes thin dyspeptics fat. It makes poisonous blood pure. It tones up and cures the stomach.

Nothing will cure indigestion like Shaker Digestive Cordial, because nothing else goes so naturally about it.

This is why it has been so successful in relieving nausea, vomiting, dizziness, weakness, bad taste, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, etc., by curing the disorder which causes the symptoms.

A few doses will prove its value, but you won't get fat on one bottle.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Write for book on Food and Fat to The Shakers, 30 Reade st., New York.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits; 75c. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, Park and North avenues. 2 12 y

CYCLING COMMENT.

Fred Deitz, of Richmond street, is riding a Sagamore.

A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, has a new Pierce wheel.

Ohio goes on record as the second State to compel railroads to carry bicycles free.

Upwards of 5,000 men in the United States Army use the bicycle either in service or for recreation.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received nine new wheels yesterday, including a '96 Crescent tandem.

D. W. Rogors, the sea-food dealer, of West Second street, has purchased a wheel for the use of his clerks, to expediate the soliciting of orders.

The new L. A. W. racing rules have been issued in pamphlet form. The book may be had by sending a two-cent stamp to any member of the Racing Board.

John Butcher, Michael Owens, Lawrence Doyle, John Carty and John Madden, of this city, spent yesterday at New Brunswick, going there on their wheels.

Monte Scott, formerly of the Crescent Wheelmen, visited here Saturday night. Scott is located near Milburn at present, where he is training hard for the Irvington-Milburn race.

Barnett and Carpenter, of the Jersey Wheel team, left last night for Philadelphia where they will ride in a ten-mile road race tomorrow. They will return to this city to continue their training, however.

Fred Titus's eligibility to race in the Irvington-Millburn road race is still being debated. If the committee in charge of the race accepts Titus's entry the Racing Board will probably not interfere, as Chairman Gideon intends to keep hands off road races.

The Woodbridge race track opens on Saturday afternoon, and a number of trotting matches will be held there. All the Plainfield horses will enter the events there and try to bring most of the laurels back to Plainfield. A number of wheelmen of this city are preparing to ride over.

Chief Consul Gentle of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W. is making a strong effort to increase the membership of his division to 5,000. A high grade bicycle, which is offered to the member who secures the greatest number of new members this year is having a stimulating effect, for 135 names were added to the membership lists last week.

Newark is the latest city to establish bicycle "cops." Last week a number of policemen were detailed to ride bicycles about the asphalted streets of the city, which are the haunts of the hump-back scorchers. The bicycle policemen will have the difficult task of estimating the speed of wheelmen, and the less exacting duty of enforcing Newark's lamp and bell ordinance, which is already generally observed. The scorching discouragers wear the usual police uniform, with leggings.

Carroll Jack, the well-known crack, who last year rode in Class A, will this season be found in the ranks of the professionals. He has requested Chairman Gideon to transfer him to the "pro" class, and the request will be granted. Jack is now established at the Point Breeze track, where he is training constantly for the coming events. The Sharpless and Watts triplet has been secured to assist in pacing the men at the track, among whom are, in addition to Jack, "Billy" Wenzel, Jay Eaton and a number of others. Many out-of-town fast riders are expected at the track in a few days, including Barnett, Mosher, Carter and Newhouse. They will remain here in training until they get into shape for the season's campaign, writes the Philadelphia correspondent of the American Wheelman.

More than 40,000 riders now pay dues to the L. A. W., for benefits few in number, and of far less importance. One of the inducements, and, in fact, the principal one for joining the League, is the bettering of the public highways and the benefits to be derived therefrom. As yet not a single instance is known where the League, without the aid of the unattached wheelmen, and extra gifts from their own members, have furnished funds from their treasury to build a cycle path. The money annually spent by divisions for other purposes for which at least three-quarters of the memberships care nothing, would be more than sufficient to make a good beginning, and in a short time perfect a system of cycle paths alike useful to the members and a credit to the wheelmen of the metropolitan district.

The cycling division of the Westfield Y. M. C. A. held its first run of the season last night, when twelve of the members came to this city on their bicycles. Secretary John C. Whiting was one of the party and entertained them here for part of the evening. They looked in at the local Y. M. C. A. building and enjoyed the plunge bath.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

WHIST.

The next game for the State Challenge Trophy will be played Saturday evening of this week at the Orange Whist Club. The Jersey City Club will send the four strongest players from its whist contingent to try conclusions with the Orange players for the cup. The game should be very interesting, as the Jersey City men have improved the quality of their game. Herring, of the Orange Whist Club is now one of the strongest players in this State. He deserves great credit for the improvement he has made. He is a consistent long suit player, but departs from this method when his hand warrants a departure, and in so doing shows his ability to treat a hand according to its formation. He handles his trumps with good judgment, and does not lead them without a good reason in evidence.

AROUND THE BASES.

The new ball field of the Y. M. C. A. in the rear of West Front street near Washington avenue will be formally opened for the season tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 p. m. with a game betwen Cranford and Plainfield. The batting order of the Crescents will be as follows: McKelvey, 2b; Dennis, c; Major, ss; McLaughlin, 1b; Cory, 3b; Sansom, lf; Johnson, p; Simmons, cf; Townley, rf; Pierson, extra. The game scheduled for the afternoon of Decoration Day with the Woodbridge A. C. has been transferred to Woodbridge owing to the fact that the Crescent Wheelmen are to hold a bicycle meet on the Crescent Oval on that day. The morning game will be played on the home grounds as scheduled.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

George P. Smith, of this city, president of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association, will act as assistant clerk of the course at the New York Interscholastic meet at Berkley Oval tomorrow afternoon.

Three of the High School athletic team will contest in the Decoration Day games of the New Jersey Athletic Club. Lindley Hillman is entered in the one mile bicycle race and George P. Smith and Wilbur F. Cornwell in the pole vault. There will also be the High School team in the interscholastic relay race.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Receipts and Expenditures and Work Accomplished During the Past Fiscal Year.

New York, May 15.—The annual meeting of the American Bible society was held at the Bible house yesterday afternoon. The report for the fiscal year showed that the receipts from all sources were $437,223.05; that the total disbursments for general purposes amounted to $503,300.52, and that drafts of the society amounting to $16,998.22 are still outstanding. The appropriations for the foreign work for the coming year amount to $182,756.18. The society is having the whole or portions of the Bible translated into the Muskokee and Choctaw tongues, and is also having revised the Scriptures in the Siamese, Zulu, Portuguese, Armenian and Chinese languages. Bibles are still being made for the blind. Scriptures of all styles printed by and for the society amounted to 1,955,080 volumes. The manager says: "For the first time in the society's history we can announce that the number of volumes circulated abroad for the past year exceeds the number circulated in the United States. Work in the field of Asia Minor has been hampered, books destroyed and agents maltreated and murdered. From China good results are reported. In Korea arrangements have been made for the publication of a new translation of the Bible."

WILL PAY THE TROOPERS.

British South Africa Company Recognizes the Value of Their Services.

London, May 15.—The meeting of the troopers recently held at Buluwayo to censure Earl Gray, administrator of the British South Africa company, for refusing to promise that the company would compensate the troopers for the time they were employed in the defense of the town against the rebellious Matabeles, has had the effect of opening the company's eyes to the value of the services rendered by the troopers. A dispatch from Buluwayo to the Central News says it has been officially announced that the company will fully compensate the troopers. This has had the effect of removing the disquiet among the people of the town, arising from the threat of the troopers to no longer support the company against the Matabeles.

YALE-HARVARD DEBATE.

The Subject To Be Considered To-night in Cambridge.

Boston, Mass., May 15.—In the second Yale-Harvard debate, to be held in Cambridge this evening, the question, "Resolved, That there should be a large and immediate increase in the sea-going navy of the United States," will be discussed, Harvard taking the affirmative. After the debate there will be a dinner to the debaters at the Colonial club. Among those present will be William Lyon Phelps, who will reply to the toast of "Yale;" Dean Briggs, who will answer that of "Harvard;" Fletcher Dolyns, '98, who will speak upon "Relation of Freshmen to 'Varsity Debaters;" Profs. Hart, Hollis and Taussig, and Messrs. Hayes and Youngman of Harvard.

A COMPLICATED AFFAIR.

An Action to be Commenced to Recover an Elston Marsh Legacy.

An action will shortly be commenced which will involve a quantity of Plainfield property into a complicated legal muddle. It is a portion of the Elston Marsh estate located on East Front street, opposite Farragut avenue. Several years ago the property, which consisted of four building lots, was bought by Wallace V. Miller from the estate, and he afterwards sold one lot to William F. Trust and three lots to F. W. Bird. The former sold his lot to Mrs. John Beerbower, and it was finally bought by T. A. Rogers and Alex. Sargeant. Mr. Bird still retains his possessions. Guarantee deeds were given with each sale.

After all these years it is now found that the property was part of a legacy left by Mr. Marsh and could not be legally sold by the estate. The beneficaries of the legacy have employed Lawyer Thomas McCarter, of Newark, who will commence proceedings to have the property revert to them, and a search is now being conducted before instituting the action. Inasmuch as guarantee deeds were given by each of the owners when they disposed of the property, the suit will of necessity involve each one in the suit and make them liable to whom they sold. But the liability in the course of legal events will eventually revert to the estate. The rear end of the property, which fronts on West Second street, is that which the Board of Education had in view for the erection of a new school building in the East end.

A House-Warming.

The Christian Endeavorers at Mt. Pleasant will give a house-warming in their new chapel on May 21st and 22nd in the form of a Festival of Holidays. The management has been placed in the hands of Howard J. Runyon. The fair will be arranged in the form of booths representing the different holidays at which will be for sale useful articles and refreshments. Mrs. De Forest, Mrs. R. C. Potter and Mrs. Runyon will be in charge of the New Year's Day booth and will constitute the reception committee. They will extend a hearty welcome to all who call upon them and will serve iced tea and cakes. The entertainment at this booth will be full of fun. The entertainment will consist of a phonograph exhibition and recitations by a young lady elocutionist. Admission ten cents.

Stole the Gate to Get the Silver Plate.

The gate to the fence in front of P. Wemberton's house, 824 East Front street, on which was a silver plate inscribed with his name, has been stolen, it is supposed, for the purpose of getting the silver plate. Roundsman Mattox was put on the case by Chief Grant, but has been unable to find the thieves. He acertained, however, that the gate, minus the plate, had been seen at the corner of East Front street and Terrill road, but it is not there now.

Rescued the Pet Dog.

Michael Weber, of East Third street, had an exciting experience yesterday at the Elm street bridge which spans the brook. He has a very valuable dog and in some manner the canine fell into the brook, but strange enough the dog could not swim, and to save his life Mr. Weber was obliged to jump into the brook and rescue his pet dog. He received a severe drenching, but felt well repaid.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

REPORT FINALLY MADE.

BOROUGH COUNCIL TAKE ACTION ON WATCHUNG AVENUE EXTENSION.

The Finance Committee Will Ascertain the Best Terms in Which $30,000 Can Be Borrowed to Do the Work.

President Lounsbury occupied the chair at the meeting of the Borough Council last evening, in the absence of Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and Councilmen Woolston, Valiant and McLaughlin answered to the roll call.

W. E. Honeyman, secretary of the Board of Health, advised the Council by letter that it was the desire of the Board that another dumping ground be secured, as the one now in use on the Stein property was objected to. The matter was referred to the streets and public health committee.

Another petition from H. R. Munger asked the Council to place a new crosswalk on Washington avenue at the intersection of Willow avenue. This petition was placed in the hands of the proper committee.

The next petition, from Frank Jones, T. W. Morrison and other residents of the upper part of Somerset street, caused considerable discussion. They asked that the Council refuse to grant a license allowing the establishment of a merry-go-round in that locality. Mr. Valiant moved that the same be not granted if applied for in that locality. He stated that it was very undesirable, as it brought together a class of people who were disorderly.

Mr. McLaughlin offered an amendment, providing that it was the sense of the Council that no license be granted in the borough this season for such a purpose.

Mr. Woolston and Mr. Lounsbury thought the amendment was too sweeping, as someone might want to locate one on Johnston's drive where it would not be objectionable.

Mr. Valiant stated further that he understood that if a license was granted the residents intended to take steps to stop the same, and he also said that if a merry-go-round was running in front of his house he would very quickly secure an injunction to stop it. He was in favor of one being established on Washington Rock, if the owners desired a license.

Mr. Woolston offered a motion, which was carried, that the matter be left entirely with the Mayor.

Mrs. Eleanor Roome, W. R. Curtis, Harold Serrell and a number of other property owners protested against the vacating of Sycamore avenue, which was petitioned for previously by W. J. Roome.

Later, Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that Friday evening, June 5th, be set as the time to hear any objections to the vacating of Sycamore avenue. The resolution prevailed.

Mr. Woolston offered a motion, which was carried, that Mr. Munger's petition for a crosswalk be referred with power to the street committee. Mr. Woolston also handed back the petition of Summit avenue residents asking for water, and moved that the same be returned to them and that they be insructed to communicate with the Plainfield Water Supply Company. The motion was adopted.

At this time the report of the Watchung avenue commissioners was read, also the assessessment for damages to the property along the proposed extension, as published in The Daily Press under date of May 2d.

An opportunity was then given those present to make any objection they desired, but as there were no objections Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that the committee's report be confirmed. The resolution was not adopted at this time, but Mr. Valiant's motion that it lay on the table was given precedence.

Mr. McLaughlin then moved that the Council go into executive session, as all the members were not acquainted with the figures in the commissioners report. His motion was adopted and for forty minutes the Council discussed the report. The discussion was a lively one and was led by Messrs. Lounsbury, McLaughlin and Counsel Charles A. Reed. After the executive session the committee's report was confirmed. Mr. McLaughlin then offered a resolution which prevailed that the Auditing and Finance committee ascertain the best terms on which a sum of about $30,000 could be raised on certificates of indebtedness, redeemable after one year from date thereof and payable in five years, to be issued for payment on the cost of opening Watchung avenue, and report at the next meeting. Another resolution, which was adopted, was offered by Mr. Woolston. It provides that the Streets and Public Health committee secure specifications for the opening of Watchung avenue, so that the Council can intelligently advertise for bids for the construction of the same. The business being concluded the meeting then adjourned.

STOOD ON A SNAKE'S HEAD.

Four-Year-Old Hattie Demler's Wonderful Presence of Mind.

The remarkable presence of mind of little Hattie Demler, the four-year-old daughter of George Demler, Jr., of Washingtonville, on Thursday afternoon, doubtless saved her from the bite of a copper head snake, which measured three feet in length. The tot was playing about the yard when she stepped on the head of the reptile. The little girl seemed to realize her danger and she did not move. The snake waved its body above her head in a most threatening way, but Hattie tremously kept her foot on its head and screamed for help. George Mobus, who was working nearby, heard her and came to the rescue. He killed the copper head and the tot was saved from a dangerous injection of poison.

CHAPTER ONE'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Charter Epworth League Society Seven Years Old Tomorrow.

Seven years ago the first Epworth League was established in the First M. E. church of this city, through the instrumentality of Rev. Jesse L. Hurlbut, D. D., and it was called Chapter 1. Tomorrow evening Chapter 1 will celebrate its seventh anniversary at the First M. E. church with appropriate exercises.

The speaker of the evening will be Rev. W. H. Morgan, of Mendham, and his subject will be "Consecrated Indi viduality in the World's Work." Rev. Mr. Morgan, although of middle age, has only comparatively recently entered the ministry. He was formerly an expert in a large western factory, commanding a large salary, but he felt that his duty lay in another path and soon after became a minister.

ENTERTAINED AT EUCHRE.

Pleasant Social Event Given at Washington Park Thursday Night.

A delightful euchre party was given by Miss Edith Smock at her home on Washington avenue Thursday evening. The first part of the evening passed very enjoyably in an exciting game of euchre, at which Miss Marion Henderson and Willis West secured first prizes. The booby prize was won by Miss Corneila Faber. Dancing followed in which dainty refreshments made a pleasing interruption. Among those present were the Misses Ada Smock, Alice Barlow, Corneila Farber, Marion Henderson and Sarah Long and the Messrs. William Farber, Willis West, Edmund Rushmore, Allen Laing and Henry C. Wells.

High Praise for Craig A. Marsh.

Dr. Stephen Smith, of New York, in a letter congratulating the Drs. Hedges on their vindication by court and jury, after referring to the weight which the testimony of both defendants so manifestly had with the Judge and jurors, especially commended the admirable manner in which the legal plan of battle had been arranged and carried out by their counsel, Craig A. Marsh. Coming from this source this is high praise indeed, and the Drs. Hedges have over and over again said the same thing.

Medicinal Qualities of Mountain Water.

Mr. Leveridge, of this city, a celebrated chemist, has discovered that the water which will supply Mountain Park Inn has strong lithia properties and is very healthful, being the equal of the Geneva lithia water. This is an important discovery, as pure wholesome water is essential, especially at such a popular resort as this one gives promise of being.

Sheriff's Sale.

The following Sheriff sales will take place May 20th: Thickstun against Lyons, etc., Plainfield; decrees, $438, $1,070, $1,558. Sold to R. M. Stelle. $1,739. Byrd against Van-Ness, Plainfield; decree, $2,595. Vail, etc., against Odam, etc., Plainfield; decree, 1,070.

Granted 107 Patents.

Walter Scott, of this city, has been granted 107 patents since 1875. This is a record equalled by but a few men in this country. Thomas A. Edison has been granted 711 during the same period.

Cleared of a Serious Charge.

James McDermott was discharged this morning at the city court. He was accused of a serious crime and tried last Saturday. Judge DeMeza gave his decision this morning.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every fami ly should be provided with For sale by T. DEATH OF DR. PAGE.

Plainfield's Well Known Woman Physician Succumbs to the Inevitable.

Death came very quietly and peacefully to Miss Rebecca P. Page, M. D., this morning at about 7 o'clock, and she passed away after a life filled with good and kindly deeds, at the home of A. D. Mallinson, 206 Watchung avenue, where she has been boarding for some time. She was about 65 years of age. Dr. Page was one of the few successful woman physicians, and has resided in this city for about twenty years. She was well known here and universally respected.

The cause of her death was general debility. She was only confined to her bed for a week, but failed very rapidly. Mrs. Mallinson cared for her and greatly assisted in making her last moments on earth as comfortable as possible. Miss Page was a sincere Christian, and her life was one of piety and gentleness. She attended, when possible, the meetings at the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue. She had no living relatives in this city.

The funeral will be from Friends' meetinghouse on Watchung avenue Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Rebecca Porter Page was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Page, of New Brunswick. She was graduated from the New York Medical College for women in the class of 1869. For several years after she was a valued member of the house staff of the hospital connected with that institution, and afterwards practiced successfully in Hartford, Conn., until she came to this city.

A HAPPY SURPRISE.

The Young Friends of Miss Sadie Holmes Give Her a Party.

Miss Sadie Holmes, of Grandview avenue, was given a complete surprise last evening. The affair was arranged by Miss May Shepperd and William F. Dunn. Miss Holmes, who is a member of the Grace P. E. church choir, attended rehearsal as usual and on her return home about 9 o'clock, she found that her friends were waiting for her and had taken possession of the house. The surprise was so complete that the hostess was unable to say a word. Dancing was the principal feature which all enjoyed exceedingly. About midnight excellent refreshments.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Love, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Garretson, Miss Fenner, Miss May Shepperd, Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss Mabelle Force, Miss Libby Joseph, Miss Cora Young, Miss Lucy Crosson, Miss Ross, William Crawford, William F. Dunn, Edgar Shepperd, Lewis Hummer, Henry Piker, Fred. Ross, Samuel Fenner and Charles Dolliver.

UNION'S EXPENSES INCREASE.

Freeholders Hope, However, to Lower the Tax Rate.

The Committee on Appropriations of the Union County Board of Freeholders met yesterday afternoon at the Court House in Elizabeth and prepared the annual financial budget for the year. It will be submitted to the board next Thursday.

It will cost considerably more to run the county this year than last as several appropriations will have to be increased. The appropriation for the support of the county's insane patients will have to be raised about $3,000. that for the support of the courts $4,000, while there are $32,000 worth of county bonds that will fall due this year and will have to be cancelled, against $19,000 last year. This will make an increase of $13,000 on this item alone.

Notwithstanding the increased cost of running the county, the Elizabeth Freeholders hope the tax rate will be lowered a few points.

A Parlor for the Ladies.

Plainfield's business men already have a high reputation for enterprise, and one of her leading business men, Garret Q. Packer, has introduced a new convenience for his patrons, which is not to be found outside of the large stores of New York and Newark. It is a ladies' parlor, and is located in the basement of Packer's and Gavett's large store in the Jackson building. It is handsomely furnished, and contains all the modern conveniences. The parlor was opened Thursday, and a large number of Plainfield ladies visited it and were greatly pleased.

Arranging for a Seashore Trip.

E. C. Morse, G. W. Moore, W. W. Coriell, W. C. Smith and John Goodwin, the committee from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., to arrange for an excursion to Asbury Park, June 18th, at the time of the State encampment, met last evening and organized by electing E. C. Morse, chairman, and G. W. Moore, secretary. The committee will now push forward the plans for the trip which promises to be very successful.

CITY NURSE'S DUTIES.

THE WORK OF THE PAST REVIEWED AND THE FUTURE PLANNED.

Dr. Simpson Has Fitted Up a Dispensary for the Use of the Nurse—He Plans for Fresh Air Trips for the Poor.

The Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters met yesterday in the Relief rooms, which were filled to their ut most capacity. Rev. Mr. Schenck opened the meeting with the reading of the Scriptures and prayer. Several reports were then made. The treasurer, Mrs. F. Harder, announced a balance in the treasury of $337.54. The report read by Miss Tracy, chairman of the nurse committee, was most encouraging. On Dec. 14th, 1895, Miss Caroline Rendall entered upon her duties as city nurse. Miss Rendall is a graduate of the training school for nurses at the "Woman's Hospital" in Saginaw, Mich., and has also taken a further course at the New York Cancer Hospital. She entered upon her duties with enthusiasm and interest, and has filled the position of city nurse in a most satisfactory manner. Physicians and patients, as well as the visitors from the Circles, speak highly of her work. As the nurse has proved so valuable it has been found that in some cases the poor are glad to pay a small sum for her services, and in such cases it was decided to charge a fee of twenty cents an hour. Twenty-one dollars has been received from these pay cases. The physicians feel that a nominal fee of this kind will save the self respect of the poor. The nurse committee meet regularly each week. Each Circle follows up the cases of the nurse for one month, which have been most effectually treated.

The dispensary, which is now open, has been planned and fitted up by Dr. Simpson, who has given much thought, time and money to the scheme. Dr. Simpson has named it the "King's Daughters' Dispensary;" and has asked the services of the nurse for one hour each day to prepare and dispense the medicines. In connection with the dispensary the nurse has been given a closet of her own, where supplies, useful to her in her work, will be kept.

This report was followed by one from the nurse herself. During the past five months Mr. Rendall has nursed under nine physicians, and has had fifty cases in thirty-seven different families, consisting of Hungarians, English, Irish, Americans, Germans and Danish. Miss Rendall said that she felt the duty of the district nurse was to teach her art to the poor and distressed, to teach them to live more hygenic and sanitary lives, how to care for their sick, and to thoroughly appreciate the services of their physicians and friends, the King's Daughters.

The election of officers then took place which resulted as follows: Chairman, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney; vice-chairman, Mrs. W. W. Howland; recording secretary, Miss Haviland; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter McGee; treasurer, Miss Mary E. Tracy.

Dr. Simpson then gave an address, speaking of the value of organization, district nursing and the need of a dispensary. He also referred to a plan which he hopes to carry out, that of taking sick babies and children to the mountains during the summer. Mr. Johnston will grant the use of land for the purpose on Watchung moutains, which is most beautifully situated amid a large grove of trees, grass plot and spring of delicious water. A shelter will be built to take the children to in case of storm. The nurse will assist in the care of the children.

The reports of the work done by ench circle, which were most interesting, followed the address, after which Rev. Mr. Schenck spoke a few words upon "Impressions." First, the rapidity with which the business was done; second, that the cross was rightly chosen as their badge, for the King's Daughters followed the verse, "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister;" third, the practical char-aracter of the King's Daughters work.

A collection of $7.23 was taken up.

Entertained at Euchre.

A delightful evening was spent at the home of Miss Janie Churchill, of Dunellen, last evening, by the members of the Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield. Euchre occupied the attention of the young people for the first part of the evening. Miss Mattie Barrett and Thomas Barrett won the first prizes, while Miss Janie Churchill and Robert Carpenter took the second prizes. Conversation, dancing and singing made the rest of the evening pass only too quickly, while refreshments were served toward the close.

EATON'S FAST WORK.

He Wins Several Events and Breaks Another World's Record.

Jay Eaton and the Jersey wheel seem to make a winning combination, judging from the way in which the crack rider of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team is winning at the big indoor meet at Chicago. On Thursday evening he continued his fast work, starting from scratch in the three-mile handicap and finishing first after a most sensational finish. He also rode in the one-mile open, but failed to get a place.

On Friday evening he won two more races, and succeeded in breaking another world's record. It was the mile unpaced on a ten lap track, and he rode the distance in 2:16, one second faster than his world's competitition record for the same distance.

The Chicago newspapers are making quite a hero of Eaton, and he has been a great favorite with the large audiences that crowd Tattersall's big building in Chicago. His riding is something remarkable, and, of course, reflects great credit on the Jersey wheel that he is riding on for the first time. From present prospects the Jersey wheel is going to make a big reputation on the track.

RECKLESS YOUNGSTERS.

Boys Who Throw Stones Without Regard to the Result.

The small boys who frequent the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Watchung avenue, have been in the habit of throwing small stones about the neighborhood in a most promiscuous manner.

Last Wednesday afternoon William L. McClure, of Crescent avenue, had a narrow escape from a very very serious accident caused by one of these missiles. Mr. McClure was playing on the courts when a stone struck him in the face just below the eye. A cut resulted, but had the stone struck his eye, the result would have been very serious.

Author of "Chimmie Fadden" in Town.

Edward E. Townsend, the writer of the delightfully entertaining sketches of "Chimmie Fadden," which have brightened the columns of the New York Sun for the last two years, and which have been served up to the theatre-goers of New York during the past season in dramatic form, was a pleasant caller at the editorial rooms of The Daily Press this afternoon.

Equal Suffragists to Meet.

The Union County Equal Suffrage Association will hold a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building in this city next Tuesday morning, and in the afternoon a meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Assocation will be held at the same place, at which time reports will be made by the delegates to the recent National convention.

Getting Ready for Practical Work.

Councilman Frost will start in next week with a number of street laborers under his control and will attempt to put a section of the Plainfield streets in repair. Mr. Frost spent yesterday afternoon inspecting the streets and getting points on the work.

To Go Before the Grand Jury.

John Towers, the individual who is held in custody at White Plains, N. Y., and who has been identified as the man who stole the horse and buggy from Uncle Dan Roberts last winter, will probably be indicted by the present Grand Jury, and extradited to this State for trial.

Good Record for Colored People.

Yesterday, for the first time in over a year, a colored man was arrested in this city for vagrancy and begging. This morning he came up before City Judge DeMeza and gave his name as Wm. Freeman. He was sent to the county jail for thirty days.

Banquet for Y. M. C. A. Members.

A banquet will be given to all members of committees of the Y. M. C. A. at the Y. M. C. A. building on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. The annual meeting for the election of officers will be held at 8 o'clock on the same evening.

A Seasonable Suggestion.

Now comes the season when the swain his sparking arts is tuning, and even the mosquito follows suit in spooning, good proofs of which you'll find in view at Collier's 103 Park avenue.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

MANY WERE KILLED

Northern Texas Swept by a Deadly Cyclone Last Evening.

WHOLE FAMILIES WIPED OUT

Buildings Torn into Fragments and Hurled Through the Air—The Greatest Destruction and Loss of Life at Sherman—Scores of Injured.

Denison, Tex., May 16.—The city of Sherman was visited by the worst cyclone in the history of northern Texas about 5 o'clock last evening. The path of the destroyer was 150 yards wide. It struck the city at the west end of Post Oak creek and swept in a westerly direction for several blocks and then spread and spent its force. The track of the cyclone is a gruesome sight, the devastation being complete, houses, trees, fences, in fact everything in its pathway was destroyed. The loss of life will probably reach one hundred, with as many more bruised and wounded. The city hall and the storeroom formerly occupied by S. G. Holmes have been turned into temporary hospitals, and already two score bruised, mangled and mutilated bodies have been recovered.

Dead Bodies Strew Its Path.

The unidentified dead are being taken to the court house. Grays Hill and Fairview both were badly damaged and the cyclone passed directly west of the North Texas female college, barely missing it. B. B. Sayles, a delivery man, drove down Houston avenue directly after the cyclone. He stated that he saw the bodies of men, women and children lying along the avenue, and many wounded. The devastation in spots where the cyclone was the worst is complete. Trees were stripped of their foliage in some places while in others they were uprooted. Houses, once the pride of the city, are in some instances entirely gone and in others only a pile of rubbish marks the place where they stood. Captain Ely's fine residence was blown to pieces. His wife and two children were at home, but fortunately escaped without serious injury. Not a thing remains to mark the spot where only a few hours before stood the magnificent residence of Captain Burgess. His family was absent from the house at the time.

Fifty Bodies Recovered.

The cyclone was accompanied by an almost deafening roar, and the air was filled with mud and sand. The roaring did not last more than two or three minutes. Fifty dead bodies had been brought into the public buildings up to this morning, and searching parties are out for more. The dead have been found in trees, under leveled houses, and in Post Oak creek. Whole families have been wiped out. An iron bridge over Post Oak creek was twisted into scrap iron.

Nine Victims at Gribble Springs.

Denton, Tex., May 16.—A cyclone struck the town of Gribble Springs, eight miles north of Denton, yesterday afternoon. Four persons were killed and five others so badly wounded that they cannot live. The property damage is great.

One Man Killed at Justin.

Justin, Tex., May 16.—A cyclone struck the town of Justin yesterday, blowing down twelve houses, killing one man, named W. S. Evans of Keller, Tex., and badly injuring seventeen others. The cyclone also did much damage north of here.

Powderly Wins His Suit.

Philadelphia, May 16.—A verdict has just been rendered in the common pleas court against James B. Sovereign, general master workman, and the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, for $4,225.73 in favor of Terrence V. Powderly, ex-master workman, who claimed that amount for balance due him for services as master workman of the order. The suit has been pending since Sovereign succeeded Powderly as head of the order.

Big Failure in Shoe Trade.

Amesbury, Mass., May 16.—The Newburyport creditors of the firm of Adams & Pettingill, shoe manufacturers here, who assigned last week, have filed a petition in insolvency against the firm. It is now thought the liabilities of the firm will reach $140,000. No statement of assets has yet been made.

Death of an Old Banker.

Watertown, N. Y., May 16.—Wooster Sherman, the oldest banker in this city, well known throughout the state, is dead, aged 87. He was born in Newport, R. I., and was admitted to the bar in 1839. He was the father of nine children, one of whom, Frederick D. Sherman, is bank examiner in Brooklyn.

Charges of Election Corruption.

Beaver, Pa., May 16.—Much excitement has been created throughout Beaver county by the announcement that a meeting of the members of the Beaver county bar has been called for to-day to investigate charges of corruption in connection with the nomination and election of judge J. W. Wilson.

Highwaymen Heavily Punished.

Paterson, N. J., May 16.—Hugh Jenner and Michael Hogan, highwaymen, who held up several people in this city and Passaic last month, has been sentenced to twenty-five years each in state prison.

Police Captain Kilijlea Not Guilty.

New York, May 16.—Police Captain Kilijlea, who was accused of accepting a bribe of $100, was acquitted by the jury last night and was immediately discharged from custody.

SWIFT OCEAN VOYAGE.

St. Paul Nearly Establishes a New Record Between Southampton and New York.

New York, May 16.—The American line steamer St. Paul, which arrived here last night, broke her own record from Southampton to this port, and imperilled the one made by the proud New York, of the same line, on September 14, 1894. The time of the St. Paul's trip was six days, nine hours and five minutes for 3,112.2 knots—an average of 20.34 knots per hour. The best previous record was that of the New York, which steamer made the passage in six days, seven hours and fourteen minutes, over the shorter course of 3,047 knots, her average speed being 20.15 knots per hour. The best day's run made by the New York was 515 knots and now the St. Paul beats that by making 522 knots up to noon yesterday. The remarkable part of the St. Paul's performance was that she was obliged to run at reduced speed on account of fog for a portion of the last three days. The total time she ran at reduced speed was twelve hours and fourteen minutes. Had the weather been clear there is little doubt that the best previous record would have been eclipsed. Had she come over the shorter route she would have held the record between Southampton and New York.

Louisville, May 16.—Hamburg's Nightingale dropped dead on the course of the Louisville Fair and Driving association while being jogged yesterday. Her value was over $10,000.

German Sugar Bill Passed.

Berlin, May 16.—The reichstag, by a vote of 144 to 124, has adopted the sugar bill, with various modifications and a resolution in favor of the early removal of export bounties.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Street, Lynn, Mass.

General Debility.

That complete collapse of the entire system, when the organs improperly perform their functions, and as a natural result a cessation of nourishment to the body ensues, a continual loss of flesh is experienced, and death from starvation is the end. This trouble is in every instance averted by the use of that greatest concentrated food product

Bovinine

Retained by the weakest stomach, readily assimilated, new flesh and nerve tissue is created, the blood is enriched, the vital organs resume their natural functions and a return to health is the result. In this connection, Dr. M. W. Van Denburg of Fort Edward, N. Y., says, "I have used Bovinine in cases of extreme debility where no other food would be tolerated and with very satisfactory results." Physicians everywhere tell the same story.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

PAY ENOUGH

Low-priced things are not always cheap. Low prices are sometimes dearly bought. There's such a thing as "extravagant economy"—that means saving on the price at the cost of the quality. We sell good, pure drugs just as low as it is possible to sell them. We won't sell the other kind at any price.

UNITED STATES Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896. Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

RACE FOR PRESIDENT

Warner Miller Says He Has Made No Deal with Mr. Hanna.

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR VICE-PRESIDENT

He Also Declares That He Is Not in the Scheme To Defeat McKinley and That the Ohio Man Is His Second Choice.

New York, May 16.—Warner Miller gave out the following statement last evening: "I returned from my trip to the Adirondacks this morning, and find that some of Gov. Morton's friends are excited over the fact that some papers have mentioned myself as a candidate for vice-president on the ticket with McKinley, and also that the old discarded story, that I had visited Mr. Hanna and made arrangements with him, has been revived. Ordinarily I would give no attention to a matter of this kind, but under the circumstances I think I may as well end them both at once. To all my friends who have asked my views in regard to being a candidate for vice-president, I have replied that I was not a candidate and would not be under any possible conditions that might arise. I have not seen Mr. Hanna since June, and I have had no communication direct or indirect with him; in short, Mr. Hanna has not attempted to buy my support for Major McKinley by offering me any postion or other consideration whatever.

Not in the Plot Against McKinley.

"I announced myself as supporting Gov. Morton before many of his officious friends did so; I have also been instructed by the state convention to support Gov. Morton's candidacy; I have done so and shall continue to do so, but I want the republicans of the state of New York, whom I have the honor, in part, to represent at St. Louis, to understand that I am not taking any part in any canvass which has for its sole object the proposition, 'anything to beat McKinley.' I have looked upon all the candidates heretofore mentioned as in every way competent and worthy to fill the exalted position of president of the United States, and the nomination of any one of them would receive my most cordial endorsement and support, but from my correspondence and connection with the republicans in the interior of the state I believe that a vast majority of them, after and second to Gov. Morton's candidacy, prefer the nomination of McKinley.

McKinley His Second Choice.

"I shall attempt to carry out the wishes of the republicans of the state of New York, and if the occasion shall ever arise in the convention my second choice will be Major McKinley. I have known Major McKinley for nearly twenty years. I know him to be an honest, straightforward, conscientious and able man; he has had large experience in public affairs and would no doubt fill the exalted position of president of the United States with credit to himself and honor to his party. As I stated a few days ago in an interview, I have no doubt that the St. Louis convention will adopt a sound money platform without any equivocations or straddles in it, and whoever will be the candidate for president, whether Morton, Allison, Reed or McKinley, he will stand unhesitatingly upon the platform adopted, representing the sentiments and wishes of the republican party of the United States. I am a business man myself and deeply interested in the question of the currency and tariff and shall never give my support at St. Louis to any platform which is not right upon these two questions, nor my support to any candidate regarding whose fidelity to these principles I have the slightest doubt.

"WARNER MILLER."

McKinley Visits Mr. Hanna.

Cleveland, May 16.—Major William McKinley has arrived in this city from his home in Canton and is at the home of Hon. M. A. Hanna. He expressed surprise when informed that a committee from the A. P. A. convention at Washington had arrived at Canton for the purpose of interviewing him. He said that he had not heard of the proposed visit. This evening he will lecture before the general conference of the M. E. church on "George Washington."

Favorable to Indiana Democrats.

Indianapolis, May 16.—The supreme court of Indiana has sustained the apportionment act of 1885, and coming elections must be held under it. This is a decided advantage to the democrats of the state.

Big Loss for Westville, Conn.

New Haven, Conn., May 16.—The works of the Diamond Match company are to be transferred to Chicago on July 1. The concern employs 125 hands here. The old match factory has been in Westville nearly half a century. The wages paid by the company constituted the main revenue of the village.

Changes in Brooklyn Team.

Pittsburg, May 16.—Tommy Daly, second baseman of the Brooklyn club, was in town yesterday He was on his way home owing to an injured wrist. He says that Daub and Jones will be farmed out to Hartford. Stein has gone to Mount Clemens to recuperate. Gumbert joined the team last night.

Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington, May 16.—The senate has confirmed the nomination of John H. Brickenstein of Pennsylvania to be an examiner-in-chief in the patent office.

Hamlin Leaves for Boston.

Washington, May 16.—Assistant Secretary Hamlin has gone to Boston. He will be absent several days.

The matter with Hanna is that he is too much of a boss.

The Press congratulates Editor Pearsall, of the Westfield Standard; he has been elected for the fourth time as a delegate of the New York Press Club to the International League of Press Clubs.

A Paterson man attempted to kiss a damsel of that town, and yesterday he was ordered to pay a fine of $500 by Judge Hooper. Rather a costly attempt. If he had succeeded perhaps the smack would have been worth the price paid for it.

The big New York papers, who are publishing columns about McKinley and how he is gobbling up the delegates, are doing so with the idea that it may help him to get the nomination, and then they will have the fun and a part of the credit in knocking him into obscurity. It is a great game.

Senator Sewell is bumptous. He says that he has been chairman of the National delegations for five consecutive times, and that he proposes to get there this time. One refreshing feature of his remarks is the knowledge that there is one monopoly which the suave and wealthy John does not monopolize.

The National Prohibition Convention will be held at Pittsburg on the 28th inst. George Lamont is one of the delegates-at-large. There is danger of a serious division between the eastern and western factions. The former desires to restrict the issue to temperance only, while the latter desire to traverse all public questions.—Somerset Democrat.

The New Brunswick Home News says that "in Plainfield a policeman is to be tried for wearing his trousers too high. Here a policeman can go on a high old drunk and do other naughty things without any notice being taken." But then it must be remembered that there is considerable difference between Plainfield and New Brunswisk.—New York Tribune.

The Press has it on reliable authority that Mr. Clark Moffett, of Sterling, N. J., came to Plainfield a day or two ago and negotiated for five lots on which he intended to erect five small cottages. Before making the purchase he investigated the building ordinance, and now he has returned to Sterling and the lots are still on the market. Too much red tape is the reason assigned for his failure to consummate the deal.

As The Press advocated on the 11th of March, the day following the spring elections, the Somerset county Board of Freeholders selected that honorable and upright citizen, William J. Logan, of Bridgewater township, as Director of that body. Mr. Logan, while an enthusiastic Democrat, is also a liberal-minded gentleman. The county of Somerset is fortunate in having such a citizen as Mr. Logan to administer over its affairs.

New Jersey's first and most energetic woman lawyer, Miss Mary Philbrook, believes that if you don't get what you want, ask for it. And she does so unabashed. Miss Philbrook had an idea that it would be a good thing for her practice and professional reputation to be appointed as an assistant corporation attorney of Jersey City. Immediately she made known her desire and solicited Mayor Wanser to confer the honor on her. But the Mayor has deferred. However, Miss Philbrook has expressed her opinion, gained some notoriety therefrom and stands ready to capture the prize at some future time. And thus the cause of woman's progress goes marching on.

The Philadelphia bicycle riders say that New Jersey has the best roads in the country for the speeding of the wheel. This may be complimentary in a sense, but New Jersey farmers are objecting to the paying of higher taxes in order to make roads for bicycling purposes.—Camden Democrat.

Up here in Union county, where exist the best roads in New Jersey, the farmers are not objecting to paying taxes for the reason assigned by The Democrat. As a matter of fact, they are not kicking at all over the road improvement taxes. They know that they get as much benefit from good roads as any class of people who use them, and it is in appreciation of this fact that they acquiese in their proportionate share of the necessary expense without complaint. The bicyclists can use the Union county roads all they want to, and not a kick will there be.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Edith Gilbert, of Crescent avenue, is ill with the measles.

E. J. Coe, of this city, is in Philadelphia for a few days on business.

Miss Tiny Rudd, of New York, is visiting relatives on Clinton avenue.

County Attorney John A. Frech, of Somerville, is contemplating opening a law office in this city. Mr. Frech is well-known to many of the citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., returned home this morning after a most delightful visit with Mr. and Mrs. William M. Buckman, of Vine street.

Rev. Joseph Osgood, who is to preach in All Souls church tomorrow morning, has just retired from fifty-four years of active service in the ministry. His latest charge was at Cohasset, Mass.

Sidney E. Flower, for many years one of Plainfield's merchants, but recently of Binghamton, N. Y., came to Plainfield yesterday and called on a few of his many friends. He is looking as fine as silk.

J. B. Hurlburt, of The Press office, leaves this afternoon for Utica, N. Y., to attend the reunion of the Fourteenth and Twenty sixth Regiments and Battery, and also to attend the State Encampment of the G. A. R. in that city.

John Leal, of Central avenue, returned yesterday after a short visit in northern New York State, where he was called by the dangerous illness of his father. This was his first absence during his career as a school teacher of twenty-two years.

Plainfielders will learn with pleasure of the probability of B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of the borough, succeeding the late Samuel Sloan as second vice-president of the D., L. and W. R. R. Mr. Hegeman is now General Traffic Manager for the road.

Sick Headache.

"I regard your pills as a godsend to me. . . . I could not make a business engagement without the proviso, "unless I have sick headache." Now my health is excellent, and all from the use of Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills." So writes Hon. W. H Beveridge, one of Richmond, Va.'s, prominent lawyers.

HARD TO SATISFY EVERYONE.

Street Commissioner Meeker Explains Something About the Steam Roller.

Some of the Park avenue residents are still not content with the methods of the long-suffering Street Commissioner Meeker. They have raised an indignant howl over the fact that the work is not hurried and that the steam roller stands idle part of the day. Street Commissioner Meeker. explained the situation to a Daily Press reporter this morning. The man in charge of the roller has to act as engineer, fireman and everything else. As the roller is not on a regular track, but is steered by the engineer, it is necessary for him to remain by the steering wheel whenever the roller is in motion for, if left to itself, there is no telling in what direction it might suddenly go. It is, therefore, necessary for the engineer to stop the roller when it is necessary to take care of the fire or fill up the water tank.

The sewer connection bumps, which are the great enemy of cyclists and drivers, are rapidly disappearing, as Street Commissioner Meeker's talk with Contractor Siddall has proved effective. Of course it will take some time to ram them all down, but the cyclists may have the satisfaction of knowing that the are being fixed.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

NEW ORANGE!

This Association will receive subscriptions for a limited number of its Lots, located at New Orange, on and after MONDAY, MAY 18, AT 10 A. M.

The lots offered for sale are excellently located along the line of contemplated improvements, thus assuring a rapid increase in the values of the property in that vicinity and throughout the whole territory of New Orange.

A Positive Guarantee is given every Lot Buyer that this Association will erect or cause to be erected at NEW ORANGE Manufacturing Plants with a capacity

TO EMPLOY 10,000 PEOPLE

Any subscriber who may die after three payments have been made on his or her lot or lots will be treated with due magnanimity by this Association The remaining payments on the land will be cancelled, and the lot or lots will become the property of the heirs at law of the deceased, or any one he or she may direct, without further payments, provided they are not in arrears.

New Orange is located within the radius of Greater New York, west of the Hudson. The land has an altitude of 120 to 180 feet above the ocean, and from points near the centre of the property New York City, Brooklyn Bridge, and the adjacent towns in the immediate vicinity can be seen. The soil is dry, healthy and admirably adapted for a town site. This fact was taken into consideration when the location was chosen. From every indication the new town will develop into the finest resident section of any of the "Oranges," which are admitted and recognized as among the most attractive home sites in the neighborhood of New York.

Owing to the large number of people who will secure employment here, it is evident that New Orange will have a population in a few years of fully 60,000 inhabitants.

Each manufacturer of New Orange will have direct shipping facilities from his factory to any part of the country over four to five great trunk railroad lines. The belt railroad to be built by this Association will afford manufacturers and residents the best of accommodations These and other inducements offered manufacturers by the Association make New Orange the most desirable location for factory plants within the radius of Greater New York east or west of the Hudson.

For further information call at any of our offices or write either the President or Manager. Subscriptions for the lots will be received at all the offices, and prospectus, plots, etc., will be furnished on application.

The Association makes all its statements and agreements in its printed matter and contracts, and is thereby responsible, but not otherwise.

Subscriptions by telegraph, mail or in person will be received by the Association, or at any of its offices, but it reserves the right to refund any subscription before the second payment becomes due.

Gray, who, it is understood, will continue to conduct (as heretofore) as a Republican journal. The first issue under the new regime will be published today.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Paul Ruesch, the Dunellen baker, had a lively time this morning while returning from New Market with his his horse and wagon. The horse became frightened and Mr. Ruesch being unable to hold him, jumped from the wagon and let the animal run. When the flying steed reached Mr. Schefflin's residence he and the wagon collided with a tree, with the result of making a complete wreck of the wagon. The horse was finally caught and returned to Mr. Ruesch. The owner was not injured.

FOUR SCORE, AND A POET.

P. P. VanArsdale Celebrates His 80th Birthday With a Poem.

Though he passes his 80th birthday today, P.P. VanArsdale, of East Front street, is as bright and vigorous as a man in the prime of life. For this occasion he has written the following lines of rhyme, inspired by reading the Ninetieth Psalm:

Our life has been supported by Thy grace
Thus far, the Lord has been our dwelling place,
Before the mountains were brought forth. His name
Endures, to everlasting years the same.

But man, frail feeble man, is born to die,
When God doth say return, we must comply.
His life is like the grass which grows at morn
And at the evening withers, and is shorn.

Disease of sin is what our God doth hate,
But yet His pardoning love to us is great.
Our secret sins, viewed in His sacred sight,
Would make His dreadful sentence just and right.

We spend our years just as a tale that's told.
And all our days are passed away, foretold.
Our days or years are three-score years and ten,
Yet few attain thereto among the sons of men.

But if by strength they should be four score years,
Yet often is their strength turmoil and fears.
The form and tottering step all seem to say,
Its soon cut off and then we fly away.

Teach us to know Thy power, Thy anger fear.
And so our days to number, that no tear
Of grief befall us—or Thy love abuse,
But walk in fear and love, and wisdom choose.

Return, O Lord, how long, and grace afford,
O satisfy us with Thy mercy, Lord.
And make us glad according to the years
Wherein we have seen evil, yes, with tears.

Do let Thy ways appear unto us now,
Thy glory to our children dear, allow,
The beauty of the Lord our God bestow.
Establish us, that we in Thee, may grow.

—It was noised about that the management of a merry-go-round from out of town wanted to locate near the proposed circus grounds in the borough, and the residents at once signed a petition against having it located there.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

BUSINESS IS DULL

Little, If Any, Improvement During the Week Just Closing.

THE SEASON OF WAITING PROLONGED

The Most Favorble Features Reported from Western States—Collections Not Altogether Satisfactory at Some Points—Bank Clearings.

New York, May 16.—Bradstreet's review of the state of trade for the week just closing will, to-day, say: General trade throughout the country remains quiet, wholesale merchants continue conservative, and the distribution of general merchandise is almost of a hand-to-mouth character. South and southwest business remains dull and featureless — unchanged from last week. At larger eastern centres travelers are preparing to start out, but unfavorable features in recent weeks with respect to cotton and woolen and iron and steel industries show no change. Collections in most directions continue unsatisfactory. Concessions have been made in prices of wool, and manufacturers of cotton goods complain that prices are below a parity with the cost of raw material. Tobacco is depressed by trade embarrassments and quotations are weaker except for Havana. Demand for iron and steel is disappointing, and quotations for Bessemer pig have been further shaded. Unseasonable weather has had an unfavorable influence upon clothing and other staples, while labor disturbances at some western cities have checked demand. Request for lumber is smaller than anticipated, and dry weather at the south has emphasized the dullness of last week.

The Favorable Features.

Relatively the most favorable reports as to trade this week come from Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. Jobbers supplying that region report demand for hardware, shoes, dry goods and notions more active, and that mercantile collections have improved. Recent rains had a big influence on crops in Kansas and Missouri. This has tended to make merchants regard the outloook more favorably and to stimulate purchases. Demand for lake tonnage and canal freights has stimulated trade, and New England boot and shoe factories report prices firmer, with the outlook favoring an advance. Tacoma telegraphs that the Washington wheat crop promises to be the largest on record, and San Francisco that damage to the grape crop by frost has resulted in higher prices for wine. In addition to a better feeling and stronger values for leather and hides, steel rail mills sold two tons of product this year to one ton last year. The fact that fewer pig iron furnaces are turning out as much, if not more, iron this month than last indicates that an unexpectedly large volume of contracts had been placed prior to the late nominal advance in quotations.

Waiting Season in Business Continues.

The recent average weekly commercial death rate is continued, with a total of 265 business failures throughout the United States this week, against 267 last week, 210 in the week one year ago, 186 in the corresponding week of 1894, and as compared with 255 in the like week of May, 1893. More important changes in quotations for staples include advances for nails, cotton and oats, and decreases for pig iron, wool, petroleum, flour, wheat and pork, with steel nominally unchanged or shaded, according to the character of the sale. The prolongation of the waiting season in business is further indicated by the moderate change in the volume of bank clearings compared with last week, the increase being 1.4 per cent., the total for the past six business days throughout the United States being $1,019,000. Compared with the corresponding total in the second week of May, 1895, the decrease is more than 12 per cent., but as compared with the corresponding week of 1894 this week's aggregate shows an increase of 15 per cent. When contrasted with the like total in 1893 the falling off is nearly 17 per cent., and as compared with the corresponding week in 1892 it is a little more then 17 per cent.

E. J. FOSTER DROPS DEAD.

Surgeon-General on Gov. Wolcott's Staff Dies on a Boat at New York.

New York, May 16.—Edward J. Foster, surgeon-general on the staff of Gov. Wolcott of Massachusetst, died suddenly on the steamer Puritan of the Fall River line at 5 o'clock last evening. Mr. Foster, who lived with his family in Boston, was 50 years old. He was on his way home and was stricken while sitting on the saloon deck. He fell from his seat to the deck unconscious and died almost immediately. It was decided to take the body to Boston on the Puritan. but the policeman on duty at the pier objected to this being done without a coroner's permit. Apoplexy was the cause of death.

Empire State Express Derailed.

Buffalo, May 16.—The engine, baggage car and one coach of the Empire State express on the New York Central railroad were derailed at the corner of Swan and Senaca streets in this city last night. The train was passing through the yards at the time of the accident and was fortunately going at a slow rate of speed. Save for a general shaking up, the passengers suffered no injury.

Jefferson Medical College Commencement.

Philadelphia, May 16.—The seventy-first annual commencement of the Jefferson Medical college was held yesterday afternoon in the Academy of Music. Degrees were conferred upon 227 graduates.

POLICE NEWS SUSPENDS.

Formerly a Big Paying Investment of the Late John Stetson.

Boston, May 16.—The Police News, which was for many years a source of big revenue for the late John Stetson, jr., but which during his last year was a losing investment has had its last issue. By order of the administrator of the Stetson estate the Police News office closes and the paper suspends. Tonight the Park theatre also closes for the season, and when it opens again it will be under different management—probably under that of Charles H. Hoyt, the playwright. The Police News at one time made as high as $75,000 a year, so it is said, but of late years it has dropped money, and during the past year it is said to have dropped $10,000. The Boston Job Print, which is owned by the Stetson estate, has no encumbrances and is still making money, so it will not be closed, but will be conducted by Manager Blaisdell till the affairs of the estate are straigtened out.

CAPT. LOTHAIRE'S ACQUITTAL.

The British Vice-Consul Instructed to Lodge an Appeal.

London, May 16.—Replying to a question on the subject in the house of commons last evening the parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, George C. Curzon, said that the British vice-consul at Boma had been instructed to lodge an appeal against the acquittal of Capt. Lothaire, the Belgian officer who was recently tried for hanging Stokes, the English trader of the Congo Free State.

Gov. Morton Leaves for His Summer Home

Albany, May 16.—Gov. Morton will go to Ellerslie to-day and the four daughters who have been with him at the executive mansion all of the spring will accompany him. The young ladies will remain at Ellerslie until August, when they will go to the Adirondacks and there join a camping party, staying until the middle of September.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Contests That Were Famous Among the Ancient Greeks.

Foot Races, Boxing and Wrestling Were the Three Main Features in the Earlier Festivals—Races for Boys and Girls.

In the April number of Century there is an article by Prof. Allan Marquand on "The Old Olympic Games," apropos of the coming attempt to revive the festival of Athens. A number of striking pictures by Andre Castaigne accompany the aritcle. Prof. Marquand says:

The foot-races were three in number, called respectively the dromos or stadion, the diaulos, and the dolichos, according as the course was traversed once, twice, or a number of times. The dromos was a straightaway dash of about 200 yards, or exactly 192.27 metres. A long line of flagstones, grooved so as to be firmly gripped by the feet, was laid at each end of the course. This permitted the finish for both long and short races to take place at the same end of the Stadium. Along these flagstones posts were erected, dividing the line so that 20 runners might start at once; for there seems to have been an all-comers' race, from which the victors were selected to contend on the following day in groups of four.

The diaulos was not a straightaway race, but involved a quick turn at the farther end of the course, and a return to the starting-point. The dolichos was a long race, the length of which was variously stated as six, seven, eight, 12, 20 and 24 stadia. At the longest this race did not reach three miles, but the quick turns and heavy sand made it a contest in endurance of quite different character from running the same distance on a modern cinder-track. Such physical endurance proved most useful at times, as when Phidippides, sent to notify the Spartans of the approach of the Persians, ran from Athens to Sparta and back (135 miles) in two days. But all the feats recorded of long-distance runners in Greece have been eclipsed by the six days' running and walking matches of modern times. The military value of speed was recognized in the Olympic festival by the hiplitodromos, or race for armed soldiers, who ran the length of the course and back in heavy armor. At first they seem to have carried the helmet, spear, shield and greaves, but later the vase paintings indicate that only helmets and shields were carried. Twenty-five brazen shields were preserved in the temple of Zeus for this purpose.

The races for boys were not a revival of ancient usage, but were instituted by the people of Elis "because the idea pleased them." These races were over a shorter course than that for the men, as were also the races for young girls. The races for girls were not a portion of the great Zeus festival, but took place under the auspices of the goddess Hera on another occasion. Pausanias thus describes them: "Every fourth year 16 matrons weave a shawl for Hera, and the same number preside over the games. And the contest is a race for maidens of various ages. In the first race are the youngest, and next those slightly older, and last of all the eldest. And they all run with their hair down their back, a short tunic below the knee, and their right shoulder bare to the breast. They use in this contest the regular race-course in Olympia, but make it a sixth part of a stade shorter. And the victors receive crowns of olive and part of the heifer sacrificed to Hera, and paintings of them are made for Hera. And the 16 matrons who preside over the games have as many handmaids."

Severer and more dangerous, but more popular, were the contests in wrestling, boxing and the pancratium. Wrestling, however, since the days of mythical Theseus, had ceased to be a contest of brute force, and had become a trial of skill. Pindar praised the victor Epharmostus as being "deft-handed, nimble-limbed, with the light of valor in his eyes;" and Plutarch regarded wrestling as the most scientific of all the games. Quickness of eye to detect a weakness in the stand of the opponent, activity in the use of arms and body and legs, and the timely application of muscular strength, brought into harmony a play of athletic qualities which made the contest an object of beauty to the plastic minds of the Greeks. Few were the restrictions, such as the rules against striking and biting; many were the stratagems which were permitted, such as choking, squeezing, tripping, clambering upon an opponent's back, or breaking his fingers. Thrice must an opponent throw his adversary so that both shoulders touched the ground before he could be declared victor, and if we may judge from the figured representations, the final overthrow was by no means a gentle act.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Station Agent Haynes is riding a new full nickeled wheel.

John Vroom, of the Daily Press office, rode his wheel to Trenton today. He will return tomorrow.

Six Cleveland Swell Specials were received yesterday by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company for their new rental department.

Milliard F. Elderton, of the News staff, has purchased a Plainfield wheel. The Plainfield wheeel is built in this this city by Horace J. Martin.

Crescent wheels have been sold by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company to Roland Rockfellow and Daniel L. Hurlick. J. R. Kowlton purchased two Cleveland Swell Specials, a ladies' and a gentleman's wheel from the same company.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Wilbur F. Cornwell and George P. Smith went to New York today to attend the New York Interscholastic Athletic Association's annual games at Berkley Oval this afternoon. Jesse L. Hurlbut, Jr., of Berkley school, formerly of this city, is entered in the pole vault and will attempt to break the interscholastic record of 10 feet, 6 inches, made by himself several weeks ago.

Plainfield sportsmen will be pleased to know that the Jersey Weel Company have completed arrangements with A. G. Spaulding & Bro., for an agency of their world renowned sporting goods and now have in stock a complete assortment of supplies for bicycling, baseball, tennis, golf and croquet. Same prices as in New York.

Pythians at Work.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., met last night and worked one candidate in the long form of the third rank. A committee, consisting of James Patterson and Charles Foster, was appointed to confer with the committee from the Crescent Division to make arrangements for Memorial Day. The meeting closed with an informal smoker.

Mrs. Fred E. Smith, of Mercer avenue, was able to walk out yesterday, after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. A. D. Fredricks and Miss Rodman, of Kensington avenue, gave an informal reception last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Steven Higham have returned from their wedding trip in the South and will reside at 115 Lafayette place.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Shepard and family, of Jacksonville, Florida, are guests of J. Hervey Doane and family of LaGrande avenue.

Mrs. Lissignolo and family, who have been detained in Plainfield by illness, left for their summer home in Belmar, this afternoon.

—The overhead bridge on Terrill road which spands the Central railroad caught affre at 3 o'clock today. The chemical engine has gone to the scene.

—Uncle Dan Roberts yesterday gave an order to a Philadelphia firm for a set of rubber tires for Chief Doane's fire wagon.

—The famous Harris band of gypsies are camping near Campbell's Club House. The daughter is the Queen of the Gypsies of the United States, and famous for her fortune telling.

—The Daily Press was misinformed yesterday in regard to the borough bicycle ordinance going into effect. It was the ordinance which provides for the re-numbering of Westervelt avenue.

NEAR THE WHITE HOUSE!

Personal Friends of the President Indorse Paine's Celery Compound.

Following the Testimonials of Judge Powers and Congressman Grout, Come Hearty Letters From Congressman Meredith of Virginia, Assistant United States Attorney John G. Capers, Major General Birney, Congressman Wilber of New York, Congressman Bell, Lieutenant McAllister, Congressman Neill and Many More.

The proprietors of Paines celery compound have never exaggerated either the virtue of this wonderful remedy nor the astonishing character of the endorsements it has received.

This greatest of all blood purifiers and restorers of nervous energy, this remedy which is today in greater demand than all the so-called spring remedies put together—

This Pain e's celery compound which was first discovered and prescribed by America's most eminent physician, that giant among medical scientists of this progressive age, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college—

This remedy, which has been a blessing to thousands upon thousands of homes in every state and city of the country, which has been energetically endorsed by the ablest physicians, which has received thousands of heartfelt testimonials from women and men in every station in life, and has been publicly recommended without solicitation by persons of such high character that they are honored by the whole nation—this remedy that makes people well, has received so many letters in its praise within the last two or three months, coming in every mail from every section of the country—that it would be impossible to print them all in the daily issue of any one paper.

Mr. Hearst's great paper, the Journal in New York, the Globe and the Journal in Boston, Mr. Kohlsaat's powerful Times-Herald in Chicago, have each of them, within a month, devoted from one to three pages at a time to the most remarkable canvass ever made of the druggists in the great cities. And their best reporters, unprejudiced one way or another, have found that the druggists are meeting not only a larger demand than ever before for this one remedy but that this demand—because Paine's celery compound cures where everything else fails—is so far greater today than that of any other remedy that it has no competitor.

Among the thousands of testimonials that have been received by the proprietors of Paine's celery compound this spring, none have been more noteworthy than those that come from the national capital. The enthusiastic letters of Judge Powers and of Congressman Grout, were recently published in this paper. Above is a good likeness of one of the ablest members on the Democratic side of the house, a leader of acknowledged ability, a personal friend of the president, a man of great weight—Congressman Elisha E. Meredith, of Virginia. A letter from him dated Feb. 4, from the House of Representatives, says:

"After a fair trial I have no hesitation in saying that I believe Paine's celery compound all that is claimed for it, and it gives me pleasure to commend it."

A letter from Congressman Robert Neill, of Arkansas, contains the following:

"My home is at Batesville, Ark. During the last spring and summer my eldest daughter, then 17 years of age, was in very poor health, suffering from general debility, nervous prostration and frequent slight fevers. She had the best medical attention, but apparently with little benefit. In the latter part of September last, while still feeble, she began the use of Paine's celery compound, and improved in health continuously. In three months she had fully recovered, and is still in perfect health. I am bound to think the remedy is an excellent one, and do not hesitate to recommend it to the suffering."

Lieut. C. A. McAllister, writing from Hotel Oxford, March 28, said:

"For several years past I have been a sufferer from severe attacks of dyspepsia, caused by too close attention to business; on the advice of a physician I took several bottles of Paine's celery compound and have been greatly benefited thereby. Since the first of last September I have gained 25 pounds and am now feeling in first-rate health. C. A. McAllister,

"1st Ass't Engineer, U. S. R. C. S.

Hon. John C. Bell, member of Congress from Colorado, in a letter to Wells & Richardson Co., about the same time, told how he had used three bottles of Paine's celery compound for dyspepsia and rheumatism with satisfactory results.

Major Gen. Birney, who is now, at the age of 75, practicing law and doing departmental work in Washington, the unflinching commander at the battle of Fredricksburg, of the famous 38th New York regiment, in a letter to Wells & Richardson Co., says:

"My wife has been taking the Paine's celery compound for some time past and is so much pleased with it that she wishes me to express to you her high opinion of its merits. She thinks it the best she has ever tried."

Congressman Wilber, of New York, writing in March, used these signifi-words: "I was persuaded by a friend to try your Paine's celery compound some time ago, and after its use, am pleased to recommend it to any one who is in an overworked or run-down condition, as doing what is claimed for it."

Many other letters from prominent people who are not so well known are included in this year's files of testimonials from Washington.

Every city and every town in the country is equally well represented in this wonderful popular indorsement of the remedy that purifies the blood, rebuilds the shattered nervous system restores strength, regulates the kidneys, liver and bowels, cures disease, makes people well.

In these latter days of spring, in the last of the three great months, the close of nature's yearly revival season, when the recovery from sickness is the most rapid and lasting, Paine's celery compound will make vigorous nerves and good blood.

During these latter spring days there is a clearing of the air; it is the most favorable time of the year to cure nervousness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, headaches and low spirits by the use of Paine's celery compound.

Paine's celery compound points to a wonderful record already achieved. The most wide-awake, intelligent part of every community in this country are among its most enthusiastic vouchers and indorsers.

HETTY GREEN IS MAD.

THE RICHEST AMERICAN WOMAN IS AFTER J. EVARTS TRACY.

She Claims That Mr. Tracy's Law Firm Have Wrongfully Confiscated Papers of Her Father's Estate.—Mr. Tracy's Say.

Mrs. Hetty Green, America's richest woman, is arter J. Evarts Tracy, of West Eighth street, this city, who is a prominent lawyer in New York, with a sharp stick, figuratively speaking. Associated with Joseph Choate, Mr. Tracy was the counsel for Henry A. Barling, the late trustee of Mrs. Green's father's estate. The essential points of the affair are taken from the New York Sun of yesterday and today as follows:

"Mrs. Green recently secured the appointment of Edward H. R. Green, her son, as executor of the estate of her father, Edward Mott Robinson, to succeed Mr. Barling; and according to the story told Saturday, when Mr. Green went to the office of the Robinson estate, at 45 Cedar street, he found that the seals which had protected the safe since Mr. Barling's death had been broken and that important papers that should have been there were missing.

"'When we went to have my son appointed trustee, Tracy appeared to oppose it,' says Mrs. Green. 'He was just awful. When Judge Lawrence asked him why he opposed Ned, Tracy said that it was because of Ned's connection with Texas Midland. Then when that objection wasn't received, Tracy said Ned shouldn't be appointed because he was remainderman. Judge Lawrence said that as the estate was coming to Ned in the end there was no better man to serve as trustee.

"'Then what do you think that man Tracy wanted to do?' asked Mrs. Green with rising indignation. 'Why, he asked Judge Lawrence to give him the papers and not let Ned have them. Judge Lawrence is a fine gentleman and can't be bulldozed by Choate and that crowd, and he said:

"Why, Mr. Tracy, I am surprised that a lawyer of your standing would ask for such a thing. How can I nominate a substituted trustee without giving him the powers of a trustee?"

"Well, Ned went to Richmond and demanded the papers and securities so that his lawyers, Evarts, Choate & Beaman, had told him not to. Ned didn't want to go back to the court, and so he waited. Richmond and Tracy thought they owned the office at 35 Cedar street. Richmond was the only one who knew the combination of the safe, and he wouldn't give it to Ned. Tracy and Richmond wouldn't even give my boy a key to the office, and he had to go to the janitor and have one made.

Then Ned, when he found out that Richmond had already sent ten boxes of papers away, dismissed him. But Richmond wouldn't go. He said that Tracy had told him not to go, and Ned couldn't make him. My poor boy, who was nearly worried to death, didn't want the Judge to think we were quarrelsome, and he let Richmond stay. Finally my lawyers wrote to Evarts, Choate & Beamen, and complained about this refusal to let us have the papers. That did no good, and then we threatened to sue them. Then they consented to let us have a part of the papers. We decided to take those and fight for the rest. On Monday a partial inventory was made, and then my son had to go to Chicago.

Mr. Tracy does not seem to be very much worried over the charges that have been brought against him by Mrs. Green. He laughed about them when talking to a Sun reporter at his home in Plainfield Sunday.

"I don't care to get into a newspaper controversy with Mrs. Green," he said, when asked to make a statement.

"But the charges seem to be very grave."

"Well," he said, with a smile, "they aren't the first grave charges she has made. She accused Mr. Barling of having stolen $3,000,000 and of having killed her father, of having forged a will. Why, I believe that she held the candle for her father when he signed that will."

"But she says that she has a letter from your firm saying that you have the papers."

"Have you seen the letter?" he asked, laughing. "You have only Mrs. Green's word for it."

"Her lawyers made a formal statement last night that they have the letter."

"H'm!" said Mr. Tracy. "Well, I don't think we have done anything unlawful. I have nothing to say now. When Mrs. Green says something in the proper manner, then maybe I'll answer her."

Mrs. Green is known as a most erratic woman, and Mr. Tracy's friends in this city, where he is well known, realize that the charges, if there is any substance to them at all, are greatly exaggerated.

SERMON TO THE CADETS.

Dr. Johnstone Preaches a Military Sermon to the High School Boys.

Yesterday morning the High School Cadets attended the service in the Church of the Redeemer by the kind invitation of the rector, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone. The company assembled at the home of Captain Edwards, of Duer street, and from there marched under military command to the church.

Dr. Johnstone preached a very instructive and pleasing sermon, the subject being "The Excellency of Discipline," his text being the words taken from the latter part of the ninth chapter of Corinthians.

Dr. Johnstone explained the need of training in religious, military and athletic contests, bringing out the points found in the text with great force. The second part of the sermon was a purely military discourse and was much enjoyd by the young cadets. In this section of the sermon Dr. Johnstone explained the meaning of the American flag and showed the significance of the various colors. Dr. Johnstone, although a newly-enrolled citizen of the United States, became very enthusiastic in his discourse upon "our flag" and showed by his words that he was thoroughly an American citizen. His sermon was one of excellent quality and the cadets agreed that they had been well paid for attending the service.

Pretty Home Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Amelia L. Greder, of Lincoln place, and Frank Sinclair, of Bloomsbury, was celebrated Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas Melcher, of Lincoln place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Jacob Voehl, guardian of the bride, was best man, and Mrs. Thomas Melcher was bridemaid. After the marriage a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs Sinclair will reside at Bloomsbury. They were the recipients of many useful presents. There were about twenty-five guests present, who witnessed the marriage.

Picks Strike in for a New Street.

As was exclusively announced some time ago in The Daily Press, Farmer James E. Martine this morning started a large gang of men at work opening up the new street from Third place and Ninth street to Martine avenue. The street was staked out by Civil Engineer H. C. Smith, and the work is being done by Contractor Michael Uhdal. In connection with this improvement, the contemplated extension of Sycamore street would make one of the most beautiful avenues in this city.

Deputy County Clerk of Hunterdon.

Elmore D. Moffett, of this city, who retired from the Deputy County Clerkship of Union county the first of last January, is now filling the same office in Hunterdon county. Mr. Moffett commenced his duties in his new position last Wednesday, having succeeded George Bell, who has been the deputy for some time past. Mr. Moffett is thoroughly experienced in the work of the office, and it is probable that he will move his family to Flemington, where the county seat is located.

A Successsul Beggar.

James Watson was arrested by Chief Marshal Wilson this morning for begging among borough residences and being abusive. He had enough refreshments to start a small restaurant when arrested. He told the court that he had walked from Elizabeth and was going to Burlington, this State, where he had a position on a truck farm. Justice Crosley thought ten days at Somerville would help him, and that is where he will be sent.

Nurses to be Graduated.

The graduating exercises of the training school for nurses in connection with Muhlenburg Hospital will be held on Thursday evening, May 21st, at 8 o'clock in the chapel of the Creecent Avenue church. Mayor Gilbert will be one of the speakers.

John Powers and a party of friends spent yesterday at New Brunswick.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

THEIR SEVENTH YEAR.

ANNIVERSARY OF CHAPTER 1, EPWORTH LEAGUE, LAST NIGHT.

Rev. William H. Morgan's Address on the Power and Service of Youth in the Battle of the Lord Against Sin.

Even the warm weather could not still the enthusiasm of the members of the Epworth League, and they, with their friends, turned out in full force last evening to celebrate the seventh anniversary of Chapter 1 at the First M. E. church. The fans kept up a steady vibration throughout the service and everybody was warm, but the speaker of the evening, Rev. William H. Morgan, of Mendham, was an interesting one, and helped his hearers to forget the high mercury.

Robert Davis, president of Chapter 1, presided, and was assisted in the opening devotional exercises by the pastor, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D. The large chorus choir rendered an anthem, besides assisting in the other singing. The secretary, Miss Ida Angleman, read her report, which showed that the society had made general progress in all lines of work. Twenty new members were added to the roll during the year.

Rev. Mr. Morgan took as his subject "Consecrated Individuality in the World's Work." He said in part: Each age finds its expression in some kind of a characteristic movement. The movements of this century are too many and varied to select any special one as characteristic, but, aside from that of missions, the movement among the Christian young people is one of the greatest. Youth has been in every department of life a prominent factor of civilization, and God gives the young people his most important work to do, as they are vigorous and full of enthusiasm and energy. The man that said that the formation of the Epworth League was providential and God's gift to the Methodist church, was right, and the mighty power in the Epworth League and kindred organizations is plain to all. Every organization must clearly demonstrate its usefulness before it will be regarded favorably, and the young people's societies have done so.

This is a very practical age, but the world's work is not to acquire a fortune; it is to develop the character. Christianity differs from other religions in that the latter convert by the masses and Christianity converts by the individual. Sympathy and not force is used.

History is made by the acts of individuals. It is not the masses that originate; they are imitators of individuals. Fashion is an example of that. The great conflict of today is between generalization and individuality. The Lord wants us to use our individual power for Him. He has never made a human being without ability to do His work. God uses the weak things of the world to do His mightiest works. Let us not lose sight of our individuality in the church, but ask God to use us as he wills.

Epworth Day was well remembered at the Monroe Avenue chapel last evening and a large congregation turned out in honor of the occasion. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell made a very interesting address on the Epworth League and its growth during the last seven years. He likened it to Hannibal and his famous march to Rome over the Alps. The Alps of the League, he said, had been crossed and the League was now in its prosperity. That was no reason, he said, for not working, and he urged the members to put forth every effort to advance the cause.

James McGee also made some appropriate remarks on the League and the duties of its members. They would, he said, do much more good if they would remain in their own church and not go elsewhere and listen to a sensational sermon. Special music, consisting of a number of hymns, written specially for Epworth Day, was included in the exercises.

Didn't Press the Charge.

On complaint of Mrs. Thain, his mother-in-law, John Morecraft was arrested by Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, Saturday night on the charge of assault and battery on Mrs. Thain's daughter, Mrs. Morecraft. This morning the defendant was taken before Justice Mattison, but no one appeared to press the charge and the justice was obliged to discharge the prisoner.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. BASEBALL STARTS WELL

PLAINFIELD AND CRANFORD OPEN THE SEASON IN THIS CITY.

A Good-Sized Crowd Present, Among Them Being Several Old-Time Cranks—Plainfield Won by a Score of 14 to 5.

Well! well! well! were the exclamations heard Saturday afternoon on the new baseball grounds which were opened by the Y. M. C. A. team, as one after another of the old cranks appeared. It reminded one of the old baseball days when the crowds were accustomed to gathering on the La-Grande avenue grounds, and were perfectly willing to sit or stand, for two hours, while the favorite team were doing or being done by their opponents. It really did one's heart good on Saturday to see such old-time cranks as Charley Burnett, Samuel Wilbur, Alex Mallinson, S. C. Peck, W. W. Pearson, Charley Reed, Jos. Gavett, and a host of others, who have always been identified with the national game, on the grounds. Then there was a goodly number of Plainfield divines present, which gave a tone to the affair. Of course, the small boy was in evidence, and while he is not the same one who was a figure in the good old days, his capacity for yelling and shouting is just as large. The fair sex must not be forgotten, for they were also present to cheer the home team and give them encouragement.

Manager McLaughlin was present with his eight stalwart youny men who were to battle against the Cranfords. They took to the field and during their alloted practice time they covered the field in a manner that reminded one of a lot of colts. They fielded in a way that gave evidence that good ball is going to be played and considering that it was their first time together the team did remarkably well. Owing to an injury, Johnson was unable to pitch, and McLaughlin was obliged to take his place. Another change was made in the field in consequence and Sprowl was stationed in right field. The new catcher, Dennis of New York, showed up well behind the bat, and while he did not accomplish much at the bat, it is thought that he will improve. Major as short stop appeared in good form and he will doubtless be a favorite as will also Sanson in left field; both are good hitters and neither one appear to be muscle-bound. In fact the whole team seem to be well chosen. McKelvey is just the man for second base and Simmons at first base and Cory at third, did good work and will continue to improve if allowed to play long enough to get used to their positions. Townley is located in centre field and he put up a fine game, accepting every chance and doing good work at the bat, while Sprowl in right field played a very even game and helped materially in making runs. McLaughlin pitched an excellent game and held the visitors down to three hits.

The game began at 4 o'clock and at first it looked as though it was going to be very close, until the fifth inning when the home team made nine runs, which practically took the heart out of the visitors. They were plucky, however, and played their best till the last, hoping that lost honors could be regained, but luck was against them. Early in the game Cox, the pitcher for the visitors, attempted to stop a hard hit ball, and a finger on his right hand was injured This handicapped him very much and he seemed to loose control of the ball. The game was devoid of any brilliant plays, with the exception of a neat double made by Townley and McKelvey.

Below will be found the score in full. It will be seen that the Y. M. C. A. team won very easily:

SUMMARY.

Earned runs—Y. M. C. A., 2; Cranford, 0. Two-base hits—McKelvey, 2; Sanson 1; Barrett, 2. Three-base hits—Sanson. Double plays—Townley to McKelvey. Passed balls—Dennis, 2; Bolich, 1. Wild pitches—McLaughlin, 1; Cox, 1. Left on base—Y. M. C. A., 7; Cranford, 7. Time of game—Two hours. Umpire—Mr. Ellis.

The large crowd present thoroughly enjoyed the contest, as was evidenced by their presence, and baseball bids fair of returning to its popularity as of yore. The grounds are located where the old athletic games were held years ago, just off of Washington avenue, not far from Front street, and a more delightful spot could not have been chosen. It is safe to say that many a good game will be witnessed there this year, and it only remains now for the people of Plainfield to turn out and support the team and encourage them in their efforts to give good ball. Seating accommodation will be provided and one could not spend an afternoon more pleasantly than to visit the grounds and enjoy a game in this cool and well-shaded locality.

INTEREST ALL CLASSES.

The Work of the Whittier House Spoken of by Miss Cornelia F. Bradford.

In spite of the heat, last night, the lecture room of the Congregational church was crowded with those who gathered to hear Miss Cornelia F. Bradford, head worker of Whittier House, Jersey City, the only college settlemement in New Jersey, tell of the work there.

Whittier House has only been established a little more than two years. The work was begun in an unoccupied room in Rev. Mr. Scudder's People's Palace. Now it occupies an entire house. The workers seek in every way to prove themselves friendly and the hundreds who daily throng the settlement, show how fully they have won the hearts of the people. There are three classes of helpers: resident, semi-resident and non-resident, a devoted corps of college bred men and women, who gladly give of the advantages they have received to those who have been shut out from them. A large number of classes of all sorts, from Latin and elocution to military and dancing, have been established and are fully attended. There are also many clubs, the men's clubs, which have for their object the making of better citizens, the women's and children's club, all of which have a large membership and are thoroughly enjoyed.

THE FIRST PICNIC.

The Junior Epworth League of Monroe Avenue Chapel Enjoy Themselves.

The members of the Junior League of the Monroe Avenue chapel enjoyed a delightful picnic Saturday at Brown's woods. They left the chapel at about 10 o'clock in the morning with Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Miss Charlottee Aldrich, as chaperones. At the woods the gay party called a halt, and there they remained until the setting sun reminded them that the dinner hour was near at hand. Lunch was, of course, eaten in the woods, and a big bunch of bananas and a large bag of peanuts furnished the needful refreshments during the remaining portion of the day. Some of the older people went down to the woods in the afternoon and enjoyed the fun as well as the younger ones. About forty were present.

Borough Fire Company Projected.

While John Kean was in town on Tuesday the matter of extending the water mains in the borough to Harrison street was brought to his attention. It was stated that the residents in that section were entitled to fire protection and Mr. Kean gave the matter close attention, and it is likely that the mains will be extended. In case this is done a hose company will organized in that part of the borough, a house will be erected and the old hose carriage, which is now stored away in Mayor Hegeman's barn, will probably be put in service as headquarters.

Saengerbund's May Walk.

The annual May outing of the Gesang and Turn Verein was held yesterday. The members left about 7:30 in the morning for Chimney Rock, going by the Valley route and returned about 7 o'clock in the evening by the way of Bound Brook. The day was delightfully passed in social enjoyment, and during the morning the singing section of the Somerville society appeared and furnished excellent music. About noon a sumptuous repast was served which added greatly to the pleasure of the occassion. Three stages were required to convey the members there and back.

Robert Crosson, of Park avenue, was the guest of Rahway friends yesterday.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

HOT SHOT FOR COL. BOB.

REV. C. E. HERRING TELLS HOW ILL FATE FOLLOWS INGERSOLL.

The Theatres That He Lectures in Seem Doomed to Failure and Whatever He Advocates Always Meets With Rebuff.

A large audience gathered at the First Presbyterian church last evening to hear Rev. Charles E. Herring. The subject of his prelude was "Ingersoll as a Hoodoo," and it was treated in an exceedingly able manner. Many valuable points for thought were brought out in the discourse which probably not been considered before by the people. Mr. Herring said:

"My purpose tonight is not a criticism of any of Mr. Ingersoll's arguments, but rather the presentation of some fatality connected with his addresses, lectures, etc. I do not think these matters have ever occurred in print.

"A superstitious man would certainly consider our eminent friend a hoodoo.

"Mr. Ingersoll has a great love for the theatre, and believes it to be a great educator; yet the theatre does not seem to flourish after he has lectured in it. The tread of his foot scorches. He possesses such power that he blasts the place he honors.

"He lectures at one dollar a head, but the dollars seem scarce after he has finished at the theatre.

"The Star Theatre is his favorite rostrum, and when he does not lecture at the Star he lectures at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York. These places are his favorite lecture platforms and last evening's Sun tells me that the two greatest failures of the year were at the Star and the Fifth Avenue.

Neil Burgess, of "County Fair" fame, spent vast sums remodelling the Star and the piece he produced, after great delay in opening, was a failure. "The Old Homestead," though a success around the corner, was a failure in the Star.

"While the Academy of Music passed a successful season, three managers have failed in the Star. And now nobody wants it.

"It might be well to transform this place into a Freethinking church, with "Our Bob" as Grand Sachem

"The Fifth Avenue Theatre is the other great failure. Ingersoll has lectured here more than in any other New York theatre excepting the Star, and yet one actress lost last season $80,000, and another prominent actor lost this season so much money that he declares he will never play in New York again.

"This theatre was successful before Ingersoll touched it.

"The only fire which occurred in any theatre for years occurred in the Standard while Ingersoll was in the audience listening, and the fearless champion, who never fears fire, was the first to dispappear.

"The fire was put out as soon as he got out.

"His article on suicide has been the direct cause of two suicides. This certainly had a bad moral effect on the community and language cannot be made too strong to denounce such public teaching. If it is morally and legally wrong to commit suicide, it is just as wrong to inculcate the doctrine, even though it emulates from the lips of the great demagogue.

"It is delightful to know that the press of New York deprecated the action of the 'World' for printing Ingersoll's 'Is Suicide a Sin?'

"It was not a syndicate publication but was written for and paid for by the World and it is a question whether the World has not been paying for it ever since.

"I have not been praying for him and all prayer will be valueless on a man who wills not to be better. Mr. Ingersoll has been soured by some past experience and his bitterness is better explained in that way rather than by attributing his thoughts to any rational conviction. Christ yearned for Judas, but Judas became a traitor in spite of the yearning.

"There is certainly a remarkable coincidence between the labors of Mr. Ingersoll and father, his breath withers his friends rather than his enemies. Politically, he has nominated Blaine and he was defeated, Harrison and he was defeated. He lectures in Columbia Theatre, Brooklyn, and Lillian Russell finds her first breakdown. If Ingersoll is not a hoodoo, I do not know what that term means."

Plainfield a Winner at Checkers.

An exciting series of checker games was played at Bound Brook, Saturday, between Francis Mulvey, proprietor of the Port Reading Hotel, and Andrew Muir, of this city. Out of twelve games played, Mr. Muir won six, Mr. Mulvey two, and four were drawn.

MOSCOW THRONGED

The City a Mass of Color for the Czar's Coronation.

ALL THE WORLD IS REPRESENTED

Deputations of Asiatic Tribes, in Weird and Gorgeous Raiment, Jostle Each Other in the Streets—Precautions Against Any Untoward Event.

Moscow, May 18.—Sunday was a beautiful day, and an endless procession passed through the streets from early morning. The city is a mass of color. Among the visitors are hundreds of peasants dressed in village costumes, with staves in their hands and bundles on their backs. A great many of them have walked long distances. They wander aimlessly about the streets, apparently stupefied by the unwonted sights. At night they sleep before the shrines. Yesterday there arrived the Khivan embassy, with the khan and his two sons at their head. The khan's suite is a numerous one. The emir of Bokhara, with a large following, arrived on Wednesday last. These rulers are quartered at hotels and are devoting most of their time to exploring the city. Prince Henry of Prussia, who represents Emperor William; the Grand Duke of Hesse, and Prince Ferdinand of Roumania, accompanied by their suites, arrived last evening. During the past week special trains brought thousands of guests to the city, and trains are daily arriving with visitors and deputations to witness the coronation of the czar. The terminal stations are filled all day with large, bustling crowds. Officials, covered with gold lace and embroidery, receive important guests and take them to the places where they will remain.

The Whole World Represented.

Infantry guard the lines of railway right into the city. Bridges are especially guarded, and at intervals along the line are to be seen tents and relief detachments. Even in the peaceful and quiet reign of Nicholas II. no vigilance or precaution is neglected that has been taken in former reigns. Representatives of nearly every race under the sun can be seen daily in the streets. The Asiatic tribes of Turkestan, the Tadshiks, Osbeks, Turcomans, Ladshiks, Kara Kirghiz, Kirghiz Cossacks, the tribes of Kiptschaks and Dungens are all represented by deputations. Strangely costumed boys from Western Siberia, Buriat chiefs from Kamschatka, Kalmucks from the Volet, and Bashkirs from Ufa add to the strangeness of the scene. These deputations, together with the representatives of the various Caucasian tribes, headmen in their rich national costumes, Mingreliens, Georgians and Lazes, are being piloted about the city t be shown the sights by officials set apart for that duty, accompanied by interpreters. It is a wonder where enough and varied interpreters can be found, for here and there groups of Suans, Abkhaz and Ossete mountaineers from the western and central Caucasus, Lesgians, Tartar princes from the Persian frontier, and dozens of other weirdly or gorgeously apparelled individuals are to be seen at every turn. The whole world has apparently come to grace the great occasion.

Large Number of Deputations.

The delegates include forty-nine marshals and two hundred representatives of the nobility, thirty-four presidents of provincial governments, and eighty-three mayors and other municipal functionaries. Each of these delegates is accompanied by two assistants, while the representatives of the nobility have a third deputy attached to them in the person of the territorial chief of their respective provinces. The rural population of the empire sends 710 delegates, for whose accommodation the Korsch theatre has been hire by the authorities.

Czar and Czarina Start for Moscow.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The czar and czarina started last evening for Moscow, taking with them their infant daughter, Grand Duchess Olga. Their departure was made the occasion of the most elaborate civil and military display. It is stated that the czar, on the occasion of his coronation, will abolish every form of corporal punishment in the empire. It is expected that he will pardon thousands of the convicts in Siberia.

Theosophists' New Adept.

New York, May 18.—At the meeting of the Theosophical society in Chickering hall last evening Ernest Hargrove, the president, announced that the adept who had been appointed by William I. Judge to succeed himself is Mrs. Catherine A. Tingley. It had been intended, Mr. Hargrove said, to postpone making public her name for one year, but the Theosophists had undertaken an important work which rendered an earlier revelation desirable. Mrs. Dingley is the wife of Philo B. Tingley, a clerk in the office here of the Red Star steamship line.

Congressmen in the Pulpit.

Washington, May 18.—Members of congress were in evidence yesterday in church work to an unusual extent. representative J. S. Willis of Delaware occupied the pulpit of Foundry M. E. church in the absence of the pastor, and last night representative E. A. Morse of Massachusetts was the principal speaker from the Gospel Union wagon, which is the centre of evangelistic services in the business part of the city.

Ryan and Dunfee To Meet To-Night.

Buffalo, May 18.—Tommy Ryan and Joe Dunfee, both of Syracuse, will appear before the Empire Athletic club in the exposition building at the Buffalo Driving park in a twenty-round bout to-night. Next to "Kid" McCoy, and probably without excepting him, Ryan and Dunfee are the two foremost middleweights in the country.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION.

Fierce Cyclones Visit Several Towns in Kansas and Kentucky.

Kansas City, Mo., May 18.—One hundred houses and two churches were destroyed by a cyclone at Frankfort, Kansas, yesterday afternoon. Twelve persons were injured, several seriously. Twenty-five people were injured and twenty residences destroyed at Sabetha.

Death and Destruction at Senaca.

Seneca, Kan., May 18.—A cyclone struck this place a 7 o'clock last night and destroyed one-third of the residence portion of the city. The court house, school house and Catholic church were unroofed. Five hundred people are homeless. The dead are two children of M. Everhees, two children of John McConnel and a son of Peter Assemacher. A score or more are injured.

Fatal Cyclone in Kentucky.

Benton, Ky., May 18.—A cyclone passed over the southwest corner of Marshall caunty yesterday morning. It demolished one house at Elva and killed the five occupants, Anderson Johns, aged 80; his wife, aged 55; a son 17 and two daughters, aged 12 and 10. At Simsonia two stores, two churches, a school house, several farm houses and barnes were destroyed, but no loss of life is reported there. Five coffins were sent to Elva and the Anderson family were buried in one grave.

THE TEXAS CYCLONE.

Probably 130 Dead and Many Are Injured and Homeless.

Sherman, Tex., May 18.—After even this lapse of time the number of dead and injured by Friday night's cyclone is not accurately known. over 100 bodies have been so far recovered and identified, but at least twenty more are missing, while of the wounded several cannot live, and it is probable that the death list when completed will foot up fully 130. The relief committee has sent to the state department at Austin for assistance, and it is expected that favorable reply will be received by to-night. L. H. Montgomery, a furniture dealer, whose family consisting of a wife and three children perished, is now confined in jail a raving maniac. The people of Sherman have buried the dead and are taking care of the wounded, but fully seven hundred people in the city and county are left destitute.

TRANSVAAL PRISONERS.

Latest Report Says Hammond Will Be Fined $125,000 and Banished.

New York, May 18.—A special cable dispatch from Cape Town, South Africa; says: A private message from Pretoria, which was shown to American Consul Knight, says that the four reform leaders of Johannesburg will be fined $125,000 each and be sentenced to ten years' banishment, and the remaining sixty will be fined $7,500 each and given some term of banishment, but the executive council is inclined to make the period one year in the case of the latter.

DENIAL FROM CARLISLE.

The Secretary Says He Never Made a Speech in Favor of Free Silver.

Louisville, May 18.—The Courier-Journal prints a long letter from Secretary Carlisle addressed to Hon. J. H. Johns at Prestonburg, Ky., denying the story being circulated by the free silverites of Kentucky that the secretary had, several years ago, made a speech in favor of free silver.

"Mrs. Everett's" Identity Disclosed.

New York, May 18.—The identity of "Mrs. Everett," the woman who committed suicide at the Colonnade hotel some time ago under mysterious circumstances, has been established as a woman whose maiden name was Louise Lansburg, a native of France. She had been married to a wealthy Englishman, whom she left to follow to America Feleicien Fauconnier, the man who identified her beyond a doubt. He refused to disclose her husband's name.

The Fight Not Yet Abandoned.

Washington, May 18.—The non-appearance of a weekly statement from the anti-McKinley managers this week is not to be taken, it is asserted, as an evidence that either Mr. Aldrich or Mr. Manley have consented by silence to any abdication of the stand heretofore taken by them in asserting figures, and it is not unlikely that the Reed managers will promptly be again at the front with deductions wrought from careful reasoning of the latest showings in favor of their side of the controversey.

Forest Fires Near Dubois, Pa.

Bubois, Pa., May 18.—Three times yesterday calls were made upon the Dubois fire department from neighboring towns for assistance in subduing forest fires. The first call came from Reynoldsville. Shortly after another call was received from Stanley, six miles south of Dubois, and an hour later a third call was received from Millvale. At each of these places forest fires raged and lumber mills and buildings were threatened. Engines were sent in each instance.

Died and Buried at Sea.

New York, May 18.—Ama Doti, a steerage passenger, 32 years old, on the Burgundia, just arrived, died on board in mid-ocean and was buried at sea. She showed symptoms of insanity, and it became necessary to confine her. She gradually pined away and died in delerium.

Baptist Anniversary Meeting at Asbury.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 18.—The regular spring anniversary meeting of the Baptist church will open here today and continue for six days. It bids fair to exceed in importance and attendance any similar meeting ever held. Strangers from all quarters are here in force.

GERMANS ANXIOUS

Merchants Excited Over Our Presidential Campaign.

LOOK FOR A RETURN TO PROTECTION

Comment of Berlin Newspapers on the Possible Election of McKinley—Other Matters of Interest from the German Capital.

Berlin, May 18.—The approaching presidential campaign in the United States is exciting unusual interest throughout Germany, particularly in the manufacturing centres, in consequence of the prospect that McKinley will be successful in securing the nomination in the republican convention with more than even chances of his election. McKinley's success in the election next fall is greatly dreaded here as his election would be regarded as an inevitable return to extreme protection in the United States. In an article on the subject the North German Gazette ascribes McKinley's renewed popularity in the states to the fact that the masses are realizing by experience that the democratic party during their present administration of government have been unable to achieve the economic wonders which were so freely promised in the last presidential campaign. The Vossische Zeitung laments the deep wounds which McKinleyism has inflicted upon trade and exchange and expresses fear that McKinley's chances of success are only too brilliant. The Berlin Post discusses at length the possibilities of a reaction from the present drift of McKinleyism in the United States, especially if Cleveland should allow himself to be persuaded to accept the democratic candidacy for a third term.

Criticism for an American Chief Justice.

The All-Deutschen Blatter, a journal most advanced in colonial jingoism, waxes wroth in behalf of the German planter Bulow against the action of the American chief justice of Samoa, H. C. Ide, in refusing to deal with certain complaints made by Bulow against native Samoans because the charges were lodged in the German language, which Judge Ide does not understand. Pursuing the subject the paper remarks that the Germans in Samoa pay more than two-thirds of Judge Ide's salary and demands that the German government intervene to the end of securing fair treatment for Germans coming under his jurisdiction.

Bismarck in Fairly Good Health.

Prince Bismarck continues to be in fair health and high spirits and receives at intervals as formerly. It is necessary, however, that the number of visitors should be greatly restricted, for if he should receive all who express desire to call and pay their respects to him the time of the aged ex-chancellor would be wholly occupied with receptions. A party of Mecklenburgers visited the prince at Friedrichsruhe on Saturday and presented him with a small model of the Friedrich Franz monument. The ex-chancellor chatted in a lively manner with his visitor and related many reminiscences connected with Mecklenburg. Eugen Wolff, the explorer, has just presented Prince Bismarck with a collection of curios and natural mementos which he gathered in Madagascar. The prince has ordered the collection to be exhibited in a tent in the park at Friedrichsruhe.

Against Duelling.

The rector and the senate of the high school at Karlsruhe have declared against the practice of duelling, and issued a manifesto warning the students that any violation of the prohibitory order will be punished with the utmost severity. The emperor has promulgated an order forbidding any one henceforth to include a copy of the Cologne Gazette among the newspapers brought to any of his castles or residences or to have a copy of that paper in his possession while within the precincts of such castles or residences. This prohibition is evidently in consequence of the recent publication of articles in the Gazette which were inspired by the officials of the foreign office and directed against the emperor's military and civil cabinets.

Kneebs Must Remain in Jail.

Bob Kneebs, the American horse owner, who is in jail here awaiting a new trial on the charge of having entered the mare Ethel in races on the German trotting tracks under the name of Nellie Kneebs, has renewed his petition for release from custody pending the rehearing of his case which was ordered by the superior court. The petition was rejected and Kneebs will have to remain in jail until his case is decided.

Detained at Quarantine.

Quarantine, S. I., May 18.—The Ward line steamer Seneca arrived last evening from Mexico and Havana. Twelve of her passengers were unable to produce certificates of acclimatization from Dr. Burgess at Havana. They were accordingly sent to Hoffman island for observation and will be detained there until to-morrow morning, when they will be released.

Destructive Forest Fire.

Gloucester, Mass., May 18.—The forest fire which started Saturday night at West Gloucester has done a great deal of damage. It passed over a large tract of valuable timber land and much of the large piece of forest land given to the city by the late Samuel E. Savage, and known as Havanawood of Arkansas.

Bibles for Naval Cadets.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redy ing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

UNITED STATES Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for the examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896. Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

TROUBLE NOT ENDED

Presbyterian Assembly To Reopen the Bible Study Squabble.

LIBERALS HAVE SECURED NEW ENERGY

Unexpected Developments Said To Have Frightened the Conservatives—Heated Discussion Expected To Begin at Saratoga Next Thursday.

New York, May 18.—The perennial squabble in the Presbyterian church over the old and new methos of Bible study is to have a fresh airing this week at Saratoga Springs. There on Thursday, at high noon, opens the 108th session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, north, and the troubles engendered by the interminable Briggs case are to be again endured. This time, from the present outlook, there is promise of a season of greater severity than the church has yet experienced in its long and heated succession of accusations, trials, deliverences and excommunications, of which Dr. Briggs, Union seminary and the Bible have been the subject. The dawn of peace which was promised at the great memorial love feast at Pittsburg last year is not at hand. Unexpected developments in unexpected quarters have revealed new resources in possession of the liberal minority in the church. Some of the heavy fighters of other assemblies are chosen commissioners this year and they have their battle planned for them. Both sides are now canvassing to gain possession of the organization of the assembly and the canvassing proceeds on lines very like those made familiar in political functions of the day.

Tactics of the Minority.

Strange to sav, the minority, which on count of hands in the past great trials for heresy, has been so astonishingly small as to be scarcely worth the counting; this inconsiderably minority has been time and again on the point of capturing the assembly by shrewd manoeuvres in the canvass for the moderatorship. These tactics are again in play. Last year, at Pittsburg, the conservatives, out numbering the liberals four to one, saved their cause at the last moment by uncovering the plans of the New York Presbyterian bankers to secure the defeat of Dr. Booth.

Liberals Have a Strong Candidate.

This year action began at Chicago. As in the past two general assemblies, the candidate advanced on the liberal side as the champion of peace and work, has the high rank of a busy and successful city pastor. As before, they propose in opposition to the concervatives a man with the reputation of soundness in the faith and staunch conservatism. Such a man, in 1894 and again in 1895, receiving the vote of every liberal in the assembly, gathered such strength from the conservative side as to bring him with in a few votes of the moderatorship. Rev. Dr. John L. Withrow of the Great Third Presbyterian church at Chicago is named for that office as a representative of the "progressive type" in the church, and is considered a strong candidate. The liberals describe the theological quarrel in the church as a difference of type of men, not of doctrine, and call upon the church in the coming assembly to disregard this difference and to recognize, in the interests of the efficiency and happiness of the church, the equal value of both divisions in the common cause.

Conservatives Alarmed.

The candidacy of Dr. Withrow, it is said, has alarmed the conservative party greatly. They see in it, it is declared, a repetition of the fight of last year when Dr. Page was forced out from the conservative side to stand as the representative of the liberals. "It is a well laid plan, and I fear it will succeed," said one of the oldest and most experienced campaigners. "If elected," he continued, "Dr. Withrow will place no barrier in the way of undoing all that the assembly has done for truth in the last five pears." Dr. Withrow cast his vote in the Chicago Presbytery to receive Rev. Frank V. Vrooman as pastor of the Kenwood church in that city. Mr. Vrooman's reception by the Chicago Presbytery created a furore in the west that was equalled only by that caused by the Briggs case in New York city. According to his own statement publicly made at a meeting of the Presbytery, he "did not expect to find a rational being who believed in every article of the Westminister confession of faith." He denied a full and clear belief in the doctrine of the Trinity as it is commonly accepted, and stated unequivocally his disbelief in the inerrancy of the Bible. After an examination of his belief in particular by a full Presbytery, Mr. Vrooman was received, after an avowal of his belief and acceptance of the confession which he had previously discredited, one of the votes in his favor being that of Dr. Withrow. It is this action and this explanation of his action that is the basis of opposition to Dr. Withrow on the part of the leading conservatives. "He would be a man pliable in the hands of the crafty liberals," is the comment of a conservative.

HIS FINAL BULLETIN

Grosvenor Says That McKinley's Nomination Is Assured.

Could Lose All the Contested Delegates, Mr. Grosvenor Asserts, and Still Have a Walkover—New York Opposition Only Assists Him.

Washington, May 18.—Gen. Grosvenor gave out his final bulletin last night. In it he said: "Last week closed the election of delegates to the St. Louis convention, and McKinley was endorsed by all the states which expressed an opinion during the week: Washington, Wyoming, West Virginia and North Carolina. The free silver states, of course, refused the endorsement of McKinley, and their delegates are uninstruced as to persons, but they have received peremptory orders as to principles. There are now elected 918 delegates, but four in Arizona, four in New Mexico and four in Oklahoma must depend upon the future action of the national convention for seats in that body, the official call authorizing them to elect only two delegates in each of the territories. The following states have elected either solid McKinley delegations or delegations with a majority of McKinley men, so that it may be conceded that McKinley's followers will control these states, to wit: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming and the territories of New Mexico and Oklahoma. Only three of these states have contests for the entire delegations, and throwing them out, there would be left twenty-nine McKinley states and territories to elect members of the committee on credentials."

No Way To Defeat Him.

Gen. Grosvenor figures up a total of 592 votes for McKinley, including, however, some that are contested, and in respect of this he says: "If all the contested delegates in all the states which are for McKinley are thrown out and the votes of the contesting delegates given solidly to some other candidate it will not effect the result. I stand by my estimate of more than two weeks ago, that if there shall be a complete roll call McKinley will receive 600 votes." In conclusion, Gen. Grosvenor says: "The support accorded to Gov. McKinley in the country at large has greatly been intensified during the week, and strong assurances of support have come from men who up to this time have supported other candidates. The attack upon McKinley emanating from New York upon the question of money has aroused a great deal of bitter feeling among the distinguished republicans in the east—men who believe that when the fight has been fairly made and triumphantly won by one candidate the friends of other candidates should not join to weaken the victor before the people. But the friends of Gov. McKinley have no complaints to make from this point of view, for the reason that the assaults upon the governor have had the effect to rally to his support a strong column of valuable friends."

CURRENCY THE VITAL ISSUE.

New York German-Americans See Great Danger in Free Silver or Bi-metalism.

New York, May 18.—The German-American Sound Money league, a new organization of German business men of New York and Brooklyn, have united in an address, in which it is declared that "our country will be subjected to a disastrous commercial crisis and universal bankruptcy, compared with which every former industrial and commercial crisis would have to be deemed a light economical illness, if, at the coming presidential election a party should be successful which has declared in favor of free silver coinage or bi-metalism." The resolutions assert that the currency question is the vital issue, to which all other questions must be subordinated, that the strongest efforts should be made to influence German-Americans to favor the gold standard, and that in case the platforms of the two great parties are unsatisfactory on this subject the German-Americans are called upon to participate in the formation of a national sound money party.

WILL NOT DECLARE HIMSELF.

McKinley Does Not Want To Dictate to the Convention on the Currency Question.

New York, May 18.—A Herald special from Canton, O., says: Ex-Gov. McKinley has caused it to be authoritatively announced that neither now nor at the St. Louis convention will he declare himself upon the currency question. He does not want to dictate to the convention. In other words, if nominated, McKinley will run upon whatever platform is given him.

Spread of Cholera in Egypt.

Alexandria, Egypt, May 18.—Seventy-three new cases of cholera and twenty deaths from the disease were reported here yesterday. Every steamer leaving the port is packed with people fleeing from the scourge. At Cairo eleven fresh cases of cholera were discovered yesterdry. The deaths numbered nine.

Will Probably Be a Total Loss.

Ocean City, N. J., May 18.—The three-masted schooner Alice Belle from Gardiner, Me., to Ocean City, N. J., with ice, which grounded on the outer north bar Saturday, is hard aground and is partly filled with water, and it is believed that the vessel with her cargo will be a total loss.

The Town Improvement Association proposes to offer prizes in money for the best kept backyard bounding the railroad tracks.

Those residents of the borough who signed the petition protesting against the granting of a license for the merry-go-round at the corner of Somerset street and Summit avenue, desire to thank the Borough Mayor and Council, through the columns of The Daily Press, for their favorable action relative thereto.

As was predicted in The Press on Friday, the conference of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention decided to make Senator Smith chairman of the delegation. They agreed to leave undecided the successor to Miles A. Ross on the Democratic State committee, but it is generally thought that Allen McDermott will be selected.

The many Plainfielders who are interested in the work of the Woman's Town Improvement Association will be glad to learn that The Daily Press will devote a department one day a week to the aims and accomplishments of the society. The progressive women who form the membership of the organization are full of vim and enthusiasm to make Plainfield "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," and their work will be read with interest.

OPENING DAY AT WOODBRIDGE.

Hotly Contested Races Between the Steppers of This Vicinity.

The Rahway and Woodbridge Driving Club opened their new track, which is situated about a mile and a half from Woodbridge, on Saturday, and the event from every standpoint was a great success. The track, which is one of the fastest and best half-mile rings in the State, was in perfect condition, owing to the care and good management of the association. And the crowd, which consisted of four good races, two trotting and two pacing, was gotten off without a hitch by their able secretary, H. D. Crowell. The official judges of the day were J. W. Johnson, of this city, and J. Crowell, of Rahway. Timers, J. T. Scott and B. H. Smalley, of this city. National Trotting Association rules governed. The Plainfield judges were met at the train by C. A. Campbell and Vice-President F. F. Amess, and on the way to the track made a stop at Mr. Campbell's elegant farm and after partaking of his hospitality, proceeded on their way. There were between ten and twelve hundred people at the track when the horses were called for the first race, the majority having come from Woodbridge, Amboy, Rahway and Plainfield. President Eyer, who was in the stand, said that he was more than pleased with the attendance, as it showed that the people from the adjacent towns had taken an interest in the sport. There will be trotting at this track every Saturday afternoon during the summer months and between the two associations, Plainfield and Woodbridge, there ought to be no end of sport for the lovers of the light harness horse. The first race called was the 2:40 trot. Four horses started in this class, namely: Jamie, Gold Dust, Gerd Benham and Dandy. The racing looking gelding Jamie, owned and driven by Mr. Carpenter, won this race in straight heats, with Gold Dust, driven by Charley Brower, the contesting horse.

St. Albans, Highland Boy and Myrtletwig met again in the 2:25 class and the game stallion again outfooted the pair and won the race in straight heats. They got the word to a good start, the first heat with Highland Boy at the pole, St. Albans second, and Myrtletwig on the outside, and it was a horse race from stand to stand, but at the wire St. Albans had the best of it by a length in 2:28. Highland Boy second, and Myrtletwig third.

There were only two starters in the 2:30 race, the black mare Hazel and the bay gelding Harry, but it was a horse race from wire to wire, and was won by the handsome mare Hazel, driven by Mr. Sweet. She won the first heat in 2:39¼, and then dropped a heat to the gelding in 2:36, but won the next and deciding heat in 2:37.

Three horses scored for the word in the 2:40 race, which was a split heat race, the first heat going to the good gelding Roy, from Rahway, but the second and third heats were won by the fast and good finisher, Ned Davis, driven by Mr. Cortright. Mr. Carpenter's gelding, Joe Boy, went a good race, but only got third position in the summary, as he failed to get a heat. The summary is as follows:

HAVE YOU

seen our New Fountain? It is a beauty and the very latest thing in the way of soda water fountains. One of its best points is the fact that absolutely nothing comes in contact with the syrup but hard rubber and glass thus obviating all danger of contamination from imperfect metal faucets.

"UP-TO-DATE"

Hood's Pills are easy to take, easy to operate. Cure indigestion, biliousness, headache.

—John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will hold a very important meeting tomorrow evening.

—Justice Mattison, of the borough, has purchased a well-appointed desk for his increasing business.

—Extra rehearsals of the Cecilia Society will be held this and tomorrow afternoons in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

—Clifford Crane, of West Eighth street, launched his new catboat "Alma" at Greenville, Saturday afternoon.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Monroe Avenue chapel are preparing for a strawberry festival to be held in the near future.

—The Rasores Club will meet tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Kimball, of 219 East Fifth street.

—A special meeting of the official board of the First M. E. church will be held on Wednesday evening after prayer meeting.

—The Cantata, to be given Thursday evening at the Y. M. C. A., by the Cecelia Club, will be rendered exclusively for the Y. M. C. A.

—Plainfield's Woman's Improvement Society is doing good work. "New brooms sweep clean;" also new women.—Metuchen Recorder.

—When you have lost all patience waiting for your paper hanger, go to Love's, North avenue, who will do your decorating at short notice.

—A. D. Findlay, of East Second street, has placed new fixtures in his cafe. The men worked all Saturday night making the change.

—Renewing his custom of last year, John Tier, Jr., now leaves ice every morning at the fire headquarters, and the thanks of the firemen are hereby extended.

—At the City Council meeting this evening Patrolmen Flynn and Vanderweg will be given a hearing on the charges preferred against them by Sergeant Kiely.

—The Epworth League State Convention opens at Trenton on Wednesday, and will continue for two days. A large number of members will attend from this city.

—Impoverished blood causes that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, giving new life and increased vigor and vitality.

—The Women's Missonary Society of the Congregational church will hold its annual meeting and election of officers Thursday afternoon in the parlors of the church.

—The merchants of West Front street are still considering the advisability of an asphalt pavement for the street, and it is not wholly unlikely that this may be done.

—The Plainfield Ice Cream Company furnish Sunday orders, properly iced, for 35 cents per quart, delivered. Their delivery wagon runs every day from 2 to 11 p. m. to all parts of the city and borough.

—The trolley cars did a large business yesterday, especially the Somerset street line. Crowds of people sought the mountains and the new hotel on Johnston's drive, where the cool air is very refreshing.

—The Sunday-school of the Congregational church will meet on the third Sunday in June before church at 9:30 o'clock. In previous summers the Sunday-school has always been held after church, from 12 to 1 o'clock.

—On Wednesday evening of this week the Ladies' Guild of the Church of the Redeemer will give a soiree and musicale in the music rooms of Walter Arnold Hudson, in the Babcock building. The musical will be in charge of Mr. Hudson.

—The regular Saturday evening meeting of the teachers of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church has been discontinued until fall. The last meeting was held Saturday evening at the residence of the superintendent, C. E. Boss, of Craig place.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Disastrous Fire Averted.

A serious fire was averted Saturday evening about 8:30 in the rear of the electric light station next to the railroad. A number of oil barrels had been left there and in some unknown manner a fire broke out among them. George E. Cornwell, of 319 West Second street, was returning home through Madison avenue at the time and noticed the presence of smoke. He ascended the railroad bank and with the assistance of two or three men extinguished the fire before any great damage resulted. The fire was close to the wood trestle which is run in there for the Electric Light Company, and in case that had caught no doubt the fire would have been disastrous.

A. L. KING RUNS TWO HOTELS.

A German Institution Which Dates from Peter the Great.

Although a Sovereign Ruler, King William of Wurtemberg Is Not Too Proud to Pose Before the World as a Boniface.

Queen Victoria is about to confer the Order of the Garter upon a hotel keeper. True, the hotel keeper is a king, but he is none the less a boniface. It is his majesty William of Wurtemberg, and the hotels which he owns are the "Marquardt," situated right opposite the royal palace at Stuttgart, and the "Riesig," located under and over the arcade of the Konigsbau. In running these hotels as a source of profit to his private exchequer, the king of Wurtemberg is merely continuing the traditions of his predecessors on the throne. There is a story as old as the time of Peter the Great in connection with this peculiar source of royal income.

It seems that the czar, who was determined on retaining his incognito in traveling through Europe, absolutely declined to take up his quarters at the royal palace at Stuttgart, but insisted on going to an inn. Having learned of this prior to his arrival, the Wurtemberg sovereign caused all the hotel and inn keepers to remove their signs. Over the principal doorway of his palace he had a huge sign hung out, stating that there was cheer for man and beast at cheap prices, and that the name of the hotel was the Konigsbau.

On the czar's carriage and retinue entering the city, the postilions, previously instructed by the Wurtemberg officials, drove straight to the palace, and there, standing at the main entrance, was the sovereign, fat and burly, arrayed in a traditional costume of a boniface, with white apron and cap, while the various princesses, princes, nobles and dignitaries of his court were costumed as waiters and waitresses, hostlers and other servants. Peter the Great, greatly amused by this witty and kindly manner of humoring his wishes, entered thoroughly into the joke, which was kept up until the following day, when he proceeded on his journey.

Noticing that the postilion mounted on the wheeler of his traveling carriage was a man of singularly unkempt appearance, his clothes ragged and covered with mud, he made the remark to one of his attendants that there was at least no mistake as to the social condition of that man and that there could be no danger of his being a nobleman of the first stage. When the postilion came to the carriage door to receive his gratuity and raised his cap from his head, the czar, to his astonishment, recognized in him the heir of Wurtemberg's throne, who had assumed the disguise for the purpose of speeding his father's imperial guest.

The king, who will be accompanied on his approaching visit to London by his queen, enjoys the distinction of being the only ruler who makes use of a single eyeglass, and with this exception presents a striking likeness to the prince of Wales. His beard is of a reddish blond color, sprinkled with gray. His hair is likewise of the same hue, and thin on the top of the head, while the girth of the king's waist is almost identical with that of Queen Victoria's eldest son.

The queen, besides being of rare charm and beauty, is distinguished for her nerve and her presence of mind, of which latter qualities she gave evidence the other day when her horses bolted while she was out driving at Stuttgart. Both the coachman and the footman were thrown off, whereupon the queen climbed upon the box, and bending down over the dashboard, managed to secure the reins which were trailing on the ground, and finally obtained control of the frightened animals.

Her lady-in-waiting was found unconscious from fear when the carriage was stopped, but she soon recovered, and beyond a loss of paint from the wheels of the carriage and a few bruises sustained by the coachman and footman, there was no harm done. This is by no means the first time that the queen of Wurtemberg has given evidence of her pluck. About three years ago, prior to her husband's accession to the throne, she was driving with him to church at Ludwigsburg, when an unemployed saddler, named Klaiber, fired a revolver at the prince. The bullet grazed the forehead of the princess, and the would-be assassin was seized by passers-by before he had time to fire a second shot.

The queen is very popular, not only in her husband's kingdom, but also throughout Germany. She is the second wife of the king, his first wife having died, also leaving no children.

Where Toothpicks Are Made.

Only one characteristic distinguishes the little village of Strong, Me., from the thousands of others that are scattered all over New England. That is the peculiar industry which serves to support the entire community. Strong is famous for nothing but toothpicks, but is known in the trade as the place from which come the majority of the toothpicks that are used in the United States.

WHISKERS FROM THE SEA.

Something Concerning the Formation o a Curious Marine Growth.

There is a marvelous marine growth called sertularia which has the appearance of a delicate bush, although its slender stalks or fibers are built up by thousands of minute animals, something as the coral polyp builds up the coral. It is found, says the New York Sun, in clumps and bunches on wreckage and stones and elsewhere, and sometimes it is torn loose in storms and driven ashore. The many thousands of tiny creatures which have built it up and inhabit it die, and the dead bush is called a skeleton. Its fibers shrink some now and they are even finer than they were. They may be a foot in length; sometimes nearly two feet. They are brown, some bunches being dark and some of a lighter shade.

As the children of the carpenter adorn themselves with shavings from their father's workbench, so do the children of the fishermen with the sertularia cast up from the sea. Its fibers are pretty nearly straight, so they cannot be made to serve as ringlets, as curly shavings do, but the girls take the longer, finer bunches, which are usually the lighter in shade, and make of them long brown tresses. The boys make great mustaches of the sertularia, and flowing Dundreary whiskers and sober beards. In wandering along the shore one might come upon a stranded boat hauled high above the tide with her side stove in, perhaps, so that she would not float, but occupied by a dreaming youth in sertularia beard and mustache, who imagined her a gallant ship and himself her bearded commander.

RUINED BY A CONTRACT.

An Iron Founder Undertakes Something Outside of His Line.

The founder of the Vendome column in Paris met with financial ruin in his contract. The French government, when it decided to erect the notable column, entered into a contract with an iron founder, says the Philadelphia Record. He knew nothing whatever of modeling or casting in bronze. The government agreed to supply him with cannon captured from the Russians and Austrians during the campaign of 1805, in quantities sufficient to found the monument. The contractor, knowing nothing of the phenomena which the fusion of bronze offers, found when two-thirds of the column was completed that he had used up all his metal. Sufficient bronze had been given him to complete the monument, and he was responsible for the entire amount. Finding himself face to face with bankruptcy he melted up his scoriae and mixed the metal with cheap refuse which he purchased, and so completed the founding. The castings, however, were found to be so full of flaws that the work was stopped, and the founder ruined. The moldings of the different parts of the bas-relief were so badly executed that the chiselers who repaired the defects removed no less than 70 tons of bronze. They received for their labor £12,000, to which was added the 70 tons of bronze, which became their perquisites. The whole transaction was very, very French.

BROKEN WIRE.

How the Telegraph Operator Tells Where the Break Is Located.

Perhaps the greatest of all mysteries, to the uninitiated, about telegraphy is the fact that when a wire is broken or damaged the operator, sitting in his office, can tell exactly where the accident has occurred.

The explanation, however, is very simple. It requires force to send electricity through a wire, just as it does to pump water through a hose. The longer the wire is the greater is the force required. This force is measured; but, instead of calling it pounds, as in the measuring the pressure in a boiler, electricians call the units of electrical force "ohms."

Suppose a wire between two offices is 150 miles long, and that, on a stormy night, it gets broken somewhere. The telegraphist knows that when the wire was sound it takes just 2,000 ohms to send a current through, or 14 ohms per mile. He now finds that he can send a current with only 700 ohms. He divides 700 by 14, and finds that the break in the wire is 50 miles from his end.

When the wire is under the sea a curious thing happens. The electricity decomposes the sea salt, and a new salt is formed on the broken ends of the wire; and until that is cleared away by what is called a zinc current, acting for ten or twelve hours, no measurement can be made.

Nature Plaints of Negroes.

A writer in Progress Artistique, in discussing the music of south Africa, says the races living there possess to an astonishing degree the faculty of assimilation and imitation. They reproduce with surprising fidelity the songs of birds, cries of animals and the various sounds of nature. Child-people, they receive in their otherwise obtuse brains impressions of freshness and vivid intensity. Their long solitary wandering upon hills and prairies, united with fleeting association with foreigners, results in a species of melodic nature plaints, as one might imagine, a developed monkey music.

Pointed and Witty.

A lawyer residing in the north of England and noted for his laconic style of expression sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client who would not succumb to his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill: "Sir, if you pay the inclosed you will oblige me. If you do not I shall oblige you."

A Walking Encyclopedia.

Lord Bacon was a walking encyclopedia. He was a master of all the knowledge of his time and remembered it to the minutest detail. He rarely made a note of anything, trusting to his memory all the particulars of the complicated legal cases brought before him, and seldom was it found at fault.

GERMS.

They Exist Everywhere Now-a-Days.

In the Air and in Our Food and Drink. No One is Free From Them for a Moment.

One reads so much about germs, these days, that he becomes almost afraid to drink a glass of milk or wash his face in a basin of water. Yet those who are most competent to judge tell us that there are many diseases now known to be caused by germs; and probably other diseases will be discovered to be due to germs also.

If you sow wheat in dry dust and keep the soil in that condition, the kernels will not sprout and grow. And if you should sow the grain in very wet soil it will not grow then, but would mould or rot. Therefore we must not only have proper seed, but the soil must also be exactly right for the growth of the seed, if we expect results. Take consumption germs, for instance, you may inhale these germs and yet no harm follow; because the soil in your lungs was in such a healthy condition these disease-germs cannot grow there. Then, again, you may have exactly the right kind of soil in your lungs for the germs of consumption, and yet not have the disease because you have not inhaled the germs. It is certainly true that thousands of persons inhale the germs of consumption, and yet do not have the disease. The fact that this soil must be suitable to germ-life, explains the reason why some children have severe stomach and bowel trouble, and yet others in the same house be unaffected.

There are a number of complaints which may not be due to germs; and yet the principle we wish to establish is the same. Some take cold more easily than others; have frequent attacks of indigestion; become easily exhausted; and show in every way that the body is not strong. What is the best weapon with which to fight germs? A strong constitution. How can you prevent many of the ailments of everyday life? By keeping the body well nourished and the nervous system substantially re-inforced.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will do all this. It feeds. It nourishes. It builds up. It invigorates. It fortifies. It shields the body from the enemy, and brings victory even in the face of defeat.

It is pleasant to know that such a remedy can be prepared in a form agreeable to the palate and the stomach. It does not nauseate. It does not cause diarrhœa. It does not produce those disagreeable eructations of gas. It does not necessitate bribing or threatening the children. Best of all, it does not have that fishy taste.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

I.

CHANCE, or, to speak more accurately, a series of those jests of fate we call chance, made me one of the ship's company of the stanch clipper Mary Peck, bound from New York to Valparaiso. A week before that bright windy March day when she spread her broad wings and caught the ocean swell of Sandy Hook, nothing had been farther from my thoughts than a voyage round the Horn. A trip by balloon, an exploration of African wilds, or or a raid on the north pole would have seemed a proposition as feasible as this venture to the southward, to a young physician struggling ineffectually to prove that the community had need of him and that the years of preparation for his profession had not been thrown away.

It was chance the first that Capt. Abner Peck should come back from a voyage to the west coast to find the wife of his bosom in failing health, and to resolve to take her with him on his next run to the farther side of the sister continent. It was chance the second that, in his anxiety for his spouse, the skipper should decide to ship a surgeon; as part owner of the Mary Peck, he was entitled to some luxuries. It was chance the third that the captain and I, Alfred Morris, M. D., should meet at the house of a friend in the New England city in which I was striving to earn my daily bread; and it may have been chance the fourth that we fraternized with uncommon cordiality. The seaman told me something of his plans; I confided to him the story of a few skirmishes of my uphill fight. The talk ended in his making a definite proposition. I asked 48 hours to consider it—and accepted it in 12. In going to sea I gave up little. A few patients, chronic as to maladies and uncertain as to payments, would be forced to seek a new medical adviser; in exchange for them, I bargained for passage on a fine ship, forgetfulness of the landlord bugbear, and pay sufficient to supply spending money at the ports we might touch at and to bring me home with a little loose silver in my pockets.

Once the die was cast, the thought of the voyage filled me with glee; for it offered a first prospect of adventure, though from boyhood mine had been an existence of vicissitudes. Left an orphan in childhood, I had grown up into my teens under the care of an uncle, an elderly bachelor, who treated me with a mixture of the fondness he felt for kinsfolk and the distrust he manifested toward those debarred from the suffrage by circumstances of age or sex. He did not understand children, and he feared women. He owned a small factory in Rodneytown, a village on the New England coast which had closed its days of progress about the middle of the century, but which still maintained activity enough to keep it alive. My uncle seldom attempted to interfere with my amusements, which, as it happened, generally took me out of his sight and hearing, thereby, no doubt, gaining his tacit approval. I was a rather solitary little fellow in those days, with a liking for prowling about the fields and along the beach or paddling a crazy raft up and down the shallow tidal streams in which the neighborhood abounded, and on the banks of the largest of which Rodneytown was built. Behind the village rose a long low ridge, and beyond that in turn was a rolling country, well wooded and fairly fertile. Between the ridge and the beach stretched lowlands fringed on the seaward side with salt marshes, and penetrated in many places by the tidal creeks of which mention has been made. For farming purposes the lowlands were of little value, and at no time had they many dwellers. In fact, to this day there is scarcely a habitation to be found from one end of the plain to the other, though a little way up the slope of the ridge which bounds it are several clusters of farmhouses.

I found a fascination of a kind, in this waste region, which seemed to belong hardly more to the land than to the sea; and I spent many happy days exploring it. Here and there, rising from the marsh, were rocky hillocks, steep-sided, and dotted with dwarfed trees and bushes wherever, by accident, sufficient soil had collected to give the roots a covering. On one of these islands—as they may be called for want of a better term—I discovered a house, old, and long untenanted, but not dilapidated. Why its builder had chosen its site as he had was not to be explained, for he had long been dead and buried; but his work remained to prove that he, like most of his contemporaries, had been an honest constructor. This old house enchanted my fancy. To the east it commanded a view of the bay, a broad expanse of water sheltered from ocean gales by a long cape jutting out from the mainland some miles to the south and then curving so as to extend almost parallel with the line of the inner beach. To the west was the plain, and beyond it the ridge. To the north and south was the amphibious region where marsh and dry land joined. But the great attraction of the place was its isolation. Nobody dreamed of invading my retreat, and there I could imagine myself monarch of all I surveyed, ruling a realm so deserted that the very loneliness of it, for which I loved it, sometimes terrified me.

My uncle's death, cutting short my stay in Rodneytown, led to my removal to the far different scenes of a small city in central Illinois, where dwelt another of my father's brothers, a childless widower. He was an austere man, intensely practical, and well calculated to cure me of the romantic moods I had learned to cherish, had we but come to terms of affection. Unluckily, however, we had too little in common to reach even amity. At 18 I was told the time for study was over, that the time for toil had arrived. He took me into his shop—he was a merchant in a small way—and for a year strove zealously to discover some trace of business capacity in his assistant. Failing utterly in this, he called me before him, gravely passed his verdict on my manifold deficiencies, and inquired whether I had any plans in mind.

One of my friends—a few had been acquired, perhaps by force of circumstances—had entered a medical school in a neighboring city; and, on the spur of the moment, I elected to follow his example. My guardian—he held that post in virtue of the small estate left to me by my first protector—offered no objections, though he gave formal notice that the funds in his possession would hardly suffice to do more than carry me through the school. Undeterred by the warning, I matriculated, and for two years studied faithfully, receiving a degree at the end of the second, and thus becoming entitled legally to experiment on humanity. As, by virtue of strict economy, there was still some money to my credit, I determined to spend a year at a famous eastern school; and I carried out the plan, only to meet one of the keenest of disappointments at the close of the period, through failing to secure a coveted appointment as a hospital interne.

Just at this time, too, came news of the death of my uncle. He bequeathed to me a letter of sound advice and a thousand dollars. By means of the latter—and disregarding the former—I spent a fourth year in study, this time selecting another of the great institutions. The balance left at the end of the season served to equip a modest office in the city, in which Capt. Peck found me, just entering my 25th year, with resources exhausted and hopes blighted by the dreary waiting for paying patients who did not come. Add to these troubles a share of anxiety as to my health, and one can understand the willingness with which I became surgeon of the Mary Peck.

She was almost a new ship, Maine-built, Yankee-officered and manned by a crew representing many nations. She was of about a thousand tons' burden, and was freighted with a cargo of considerable value. Her living quarters aft were comfortable, if not luxurious, and the cabin fare was excellent. The captain and his wife, the two mates and I, made up the population of that part of the vessel.

The Mary Peck's run to the equator was made in circumstances of the sort to delight both the skipper and the pair who were making their first deep-water voyage. Barring a sharp gale soon after she cleared the coast, the ship encountered fine weather down to the line, with plenty of wind, but not too much of it—a very important qualification in the eyes of the novices. As the days grew warmer Mrs. Peck throve amazingly, the color came back to her cheeks, and her strength increased, until we almost forgot that she had begun the voyage an invalid. She herself credited old ocean with her improvement, and the captain was much of her way of thinking, while my notion of the matter was that the companionship of her tall, bronzed husband counted for more with the little woman than sea air and sunshine combined. At all events, however, the surgeon's post promised to be a sinecure.

To the line, as has been said, fortune showered her favors upon us, but no sooner was our prow cleaving the waters of the southern hemisphere than the gifts of the fickle goddess ceased. For a fortnight we had calms or breezes so faint as hardly to give the ship steerage way. Yet she contrived to crawl on, daily putting some leagues of her road behind her; for her master was a smart seaman, and made the most of every cat's-paw. Nevertheless it was slow work, and all of us longed for cooler days and fresh winds with an invigorating keenness in their rush.

I was leaning against the rail one night, lingering beyond the usual hour and loth to quit the coolness of the deck, when the captain came up, and, standing beside me, lighted a cigar. The night was still and moonlit, and the ship lay almost motionless.

"Still ocean holiday weather," said I. "Do you look for much more of it?"

"I hope not," said he, emphatically. "It's the sort of holiday that's worse than labor."

"And when steam discounts canvas."

"Yes," he observed; "it's enough to make one pray for engine and screw. But perhaps I ought not to complain. My wife certainly seems none the worse for this drifting in the tropics."

"She stands the heat well, no doubt of that," said I. "In fact, she takes most kindly to the sea. I wonder you've never had her with you before."

"Wait till we're on the other side of the Horn, and then see if your opinion's the same."

"It will be a long time to wait, at this rate of sailing. So far I've only had one cause to find the ocean disappointing. I've looked forward to all sorts of incidents, but not one has occurred."

"Wait till we're in the Pacific before you reach conclusions. By the way, what manner of incident might you crave?"

"Anything not too perilous. You know the list better than I."

"I'm willing to avoid them all this voyage," he answered, with a laugh. "Still, if any excitement occurs you shall be notified promptly."

"On the strength of the promise I'll turn in," said I, and, leaving him to finish his cigar, made my way below, to toss and turn in my bunk for a time, and then to fall into a restless slumber. Presently, as it seemed, from the drowsiness which was heavy upon me, though the summons was loud enough to wake the soundest of sleepers, the steward rapped upon the door. The daylight in the stateroom proved that, after all, the night had passed only too quickly.

"What's the matter?" I called out, convinced that the man must have blundered and called me at least an hour too early.

"The cap'n requests you to step on deck at onct," he answered.

"What for?" I demanded; but the steward had gone his way, and there was no answer.

Pulling on a pair of trousers and a jacket, I hastened to obey the skipper's orders. As I reached the deck I caught sight of a little knot of men about a figure lying motionless on a grating. Kneeling at the side of the prostrate man was a woman, and a little forward two strange sailors were surrounded by half a dozen of the ship's crew.

"Here's business for you, doctor," was Capt. Peck's greeting. "That incident you were longing for last night has occurred fast enough."

"What's happened?" I asked. "Who are these people?"

"We've just picked them up," he answered. "Their boat is towing alongside now. They are from a small Portuguese steamer, the Nina or Nita, from Lisbon for Rio, destroyed by fire two days ago. There were four of them in the boat we fell in with, two sailors and two passengers. That man lying there has broken a leg—got it by a fall in leaving the steamer, tumbled into the boat, in fact—and he seems to be in a mighty bad way. We hoisted him aboard as easily as possible, but he fainted from pain while we were doing it. He needs your attention badly."

Kneeling at the side of the prostrate man was a woman.

And truly his need was great—a fracture of the tibia and two days in an open boat with only the rudest treatment for his injury. A glance at the swollen limb was enough to tell the story of his hours of torture.

He was a tall, fine-looking man, of middle age, with well-cut features and a close-cropped dark beard. His dress, disordered as it was, showed him to be a person of wealth.

"Best get him below at once," said I. "He's in for a siege, no doubt of that."

"Put him in the stateroom forward of the first mate's," said the captain. "Bear a hand here, a couple of you fellows."

Two of the sailors came aft and carefully raised the injured man. With the skipper and myself assisting in the operation, he was carried to the quarters assigned him. He moaned feebly as the men lifted him from the grating, and again as they felt their way down the companion-stairs, but, on the whole, the job was well done. Then came the labor, which was particularly my own, of reducing inflammation, of getting the leg into splints, and of making the patient as comfortable as circumstances permitted. At last I was able to report that, all things considered, he was doing very well.

"That's good news," said the captain, heartily. "By the way, did you learn anything about him or the loss of the steamer?"

"Only that, though he is a Brazilian, he speaks English like a Briton. The lady, who seems to be a relation of his, knows nothing but her own tongue. She's with him now, watching him, although there's nothing for her to do."

"You learned his name?"

"Yes; Perez."

"So much I've extracted from the sailors," said Capt. Peck, "but very little else, except that, when the rush was made to leave the steamer, our friends were almost left behind. Most of the crew and passengers got away in three other boats. The one we met was the last to pull away from the steamer. That's the limit of information to be had from the men."

"I suppose that nothing has been seen of the other boats?"

"Nothing. I'll do my best to find them, but it's not likely we'll come across them. The people we have on board lost trace of them the first night. God pity the poor souls crowded into those three boats!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Sanford Robinson has sold a World wheel to Andrew McArdle, of West Front street.

Monte Scott, who is training for the Milburn road race, was in town yesterday calling on friends.

E. W. Mills, of East Fifth street, enjoyed a spin over the Hudson county Boulevard yesterday and visited friends at Jersey City.

Mrs. N. P. Rogers, of East Front street, has purchased a lady's Cleveland Swell Special of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

C. Sorenson, president of the Webster Place Outing Club, is hard at work training for the Irvington-Milburn race.

Saturday night, at the Revere House, a party of guests counted thirty-five bicycles pass that point in four minutes.

Track privilege tickets for the Crescent Oval are now ready and may be obtained from George B. Cobb, at the office of the Jersey Wheel Company on North avenue.

The entries for the Irvington-Millburn road race on May 30th closed Friday, although all mailed on that day will be accepted. There are at present 101 entries this year, against 145 last year.

Mifford Giles, of East Third street, has resigned his position at Van-Sickel's meat market, and today he commences training on his wheel for the Milburn road race, which takes place Decoration Day.

The old signboards in northern New Jersey, while reliable as far as direction is concerned, are exceedingly inaccurate in regard to distance. Wheelmen after travelling two or three miles from a signboard have found the distance to their destination greater than it was at the first board. The errors should be corrected or no distance given.

The first run of the Y. M. C. A. cycling league will be held on Thursday evening. The run is to Summit and the local Y. M. C. A. riders will start from here at 7 o'clock. The Summit Y. M. C. A. are making great preparations for the coming of the visitors and will entertain them most lavishly. There will be refreshments, of course, and lots of them, and a pleasing entertainment.

The first run of the season for the members of the Y. M. C. A. cyclists was held Saturday afternoon and proved to be a very enjoyable one. Promptly at 3 o'clock the party, under the command of Captain Thos. A. Cuming, rode away from the Y. M. C. A. building in the direction of Metuchen. The wind blew across the road at a lively rate so the progress of the riders was necessarily slow. After sundry adventures with gypsies, tramps and stray cows, the party arrived at Metuchen without mishap. The return was made by the way of the New Brunswick road to the high bridge over the Pennsylvania railroad and then a long coast back to the county road. A naughty sandy place in the road brought one of the riders to the ground but nobody was hurt. The tendency of some of the party to scorch was promptly squelched by the captain and the homeward journey was made at a lively but comfortable speed, enlivened by numerous coasting contests. The run was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all who went.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

In the New York Interscholastic Athletic Association's games held at Berkley Oval, Saturday afternoon, Jesse L. Hurlbut, Jr., of Berkley School, New York, formerly of this city, broke the scholastic and interscholastic pole vault records by seven inches, vaulting ten feet, seven and three-fourth inches.

Called Hard Names.

John Cox was arrested for calling two colored people names on Park avenue Saturday night. The witnesses did not appear at the city court this morning and Cox was discharged.

Did you ever think how readily the blood is poisoned by constipation? Bad blood means bad health and premature old age. DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills, overcome obstinate constipation. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

Board of Education Committees.

President McCutchen, of the North Plainfield Board of Education, has appointed the following committees, the grievances being a new one: Teachers and text books, Messrs. McCutchen, VanWinckle and Honeyman; grievances, Messrs. Honeyman, Waring and Brown; buildings and grounds, Messrs. Waring, Overton and Loomis; school supplies, Loomis, Fountain and Brown.

Refused Alms, Then Became Insulting.

One of the regulation vagrants was arrested by Patrolman Vanderweg Saturday for begging and insulting those who did not give him anything. He gave his name as John Mellin in the city court this morning and was sent to the county jail for thirty days as he lacked the necessary $5 to pay his fine.

Getting Ready to Operate.

The Fourth street trolley line is being cleared up today and an effort will be made to have a car running there tomorrow. There yet remains a little wiring to be done on this line and on the Dunellen line. The latter road is also being put in condition.

A Column of Interest.

Due to the courtesy of the Daily Press, the Town Improvement Association will henceforth issue half a column weekly, setting forth its aims and work and needs. All items for publications should be addressed to Mrs. A. S. Paterson, Chairman Press Committee.

Charged With Disorderly Conduct.

Harry Bundy, a colored individual, was brought up before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of being disorderly on North avenue. He pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for next Saturday morning.

An Alumni Reunion.

The reunion of the Alfred University Alumni Association, of New York city and vicinity, will be held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of this city, this evening.

—An autopsy was performed on the body of the late H. Woodward, Saturday, by Dr. Adams.

—On complaint of his wife, Thomas Marley was arrested Saturday night for assault and battery by Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Cooney. This morning he was arraigned in Justice Newcorn's court, and was discharged owing to the fact that no one appeared against him.

Mrs. John Lindsay, of West Front street, has returned home from New York where she has been for her health for the past five weeks. She is much improved.

Time's Changes.

"So you're from Kansas?" said the eastern girl, with the supercilious look, to the senator's daughter.

"Oh, yes, indeed."

"And do you see Indians and buffalo and wigwams and cowboys at your western home?"

"No; the procession of years has brought many changes to Kansas since you studied geography."—Kansas City Star.

SENTENCE OF POLICEMAN VANDERWEG FOR INSUBORDINATION.

Patrolman Flynn Pleaded Not Guilty and Both of the Officers Wrote Letters Apologizing for Their Conduct.

A representative and large audience assembled in the lobby of the Council Chamber last evening for the purpose of hearing the trial of Patrolmen Flynn and Vanderweg, charged with being disobedient and using profane language, but their hopes were dashed, for the matter was quickly and amicably settled to the satisfaction of those interested, and a large portion of the crowd left the lobby.

President See and Councilman Barrows, Fisk, Stebbins, Frost, Ginna, Tolles, Serrell and Westphal answered the roll-call.

Mr. Fisk moved that the rules be suspended and the trial of the patrolmen be taken up at once, which was done.

Mr. Barrows then presented a letter from Patrolman Flynn which was read by the clerk. It stated that the officer could not plead guilty to the charges, but he regretted very much any act on his part that appeared disrespectful to the Board of Police or his superior officers, and he did not wilfully disobey. The reason he gave for not appearing for inspection on April 11th, was that he was excused in advance. He did not report April 20th at 6:30 to be measured for a suit for the reason that the hour was not specified, and he thought that he was to appear before going on duty. He said that he did go to Newark to be measured the day after he received the order. The night previous he was on duty and in the morning went home and went to bed. The order was given verbally to a member of his family and when he awoke it was too late to go to Newark and return before going on duty. He stated further that he looked for Sergeant Kiely at the time, but could not find him till the day afterward when he explained the matter.

Mr. Barrows then made a motion that the charges be dismissed. The motion prevailed.

Patrolman Flynn was present and after thanking the Council retired.

At this time Mr. Barrows presented a letter from Patrolman Vanderweg. This officer pleaded guilty to the charges preferred and apologized to the Mayor and the Board of Police for impudent actions. He said that he never felt nor intended disrespect for those gentlemen. At the time he was accused of being insolent, he claims he had a sore throat and was hoarse. In regard to appearing for inspection, he stated that he had no clothes to inspect and did not think that he was expected to appear. Mr. Vanderweg stated that he did not swear in the presence of superior officers, but before other patrolmen while off duty. In regard to his trousers being too high, he said that he now realized that it was his duty to obey, though his trousers were so arranged to prevent his stepping on them. He regretted the fact that he had caused any complaint, and stated that if given an opportunity he would obey the law in spirit and in letter.

In answer to the above, Mr. Barrows stated that there had been considerable comment in regard to the charges, and many people thought they were trifling matters, especially about the trousers. Mr. Vanderweg, he said, came before the Mayor and Board not willing to obey, and thought that the rules could be easily broken, but not so. If you go to school, he said, there are rules to obey, and its the same in business. Success, he further said, depends on discipline. Mr. Barrows then offered a resolu that Patrolman Vanderweg be suspended for thirty days without pay. The motion was carried, as was also another one by Mr. Barrows, that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Chief of Police. President See announced the result to the officer, and as he had nothing to say, he retired after thanking the Council.

The regular order of business was then taken up and the Clerk read a communication from the Corporation Counsel regarding the attachment suit of Arthur N. Pierson and J. G. Unkeper against M. Honan & Sons. It is said that in respect to the notice served on the City Treasurer by Pierson and Unkeper of their lien claim to the amount of $2,178.83 on moneys in the hands of the treasurer owing from the city to M. Honan & Sons, the lien claimants had failed to bring action within the required time and that subsequently they levied an attach- on said moneys by a suit brought in the Union County Circuit Court. M. Honan & Sons had filed a bond to the Sheriff with the American Surety Co., as surety, and entered their appearance to the action. The bond had been approved by Judge VanSyckle of the Supreme Court and thereby the claims are released and the moneys also released from any lien under the attachment. A letter from Frank Bergen, counsel for Pearson and Unkeper, accompanied the above opinions. It set forth that the clients do not claim lien on the moneys in possession of the city of Plainfield, claimed by Honan & Sons. Mr. Marsh accordingly suggested that the Council authorize the treasurer to pay the balance due M. Honan & Sons on account of bills previously ordered paid by the Council, for which warrants were ordered drawn. The suggestion was followed out on a motion offered by Mr. Dumont.

The Board of Education in a communication asked the Council to approve an act of the Legislature which gives them power to borrow money, issue bonds and incur indebtedness to the end that the board can secure $25,000 for the purpose of erecting a primary school building on Berckman street, between Midway avenue and East Second street, to accomodate the children.

The board claims that the present number of buildings are not sufficient for the increase of population, hence their request. They also stated that the law giving them such power is void, but the necessity for the building urges them to make the appeal. The matter was referred to the finance committee, and later Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the Council approve the above to the amount of $25,000 for the erection of the school building as specified above. The resolution prevailed. Mr. Fisk then moved that the resolution be spread on the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the president and secretary of the board. The motion was adopted.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported on the contract between the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the city, and suggested several changes. He was instructed to arrange a copy of the contract as suggested and return it to the Council. Assessor J. A. Hubbard in a letter stated that he was ready for the tax books as soon as the Council would supply them, and on Mr. Fisk's motion the clerk was instructed to purchase them. Mr. Hubbard also stated that it was important that Field, Columbia, Leland and Martine avenues and Rose street, be numbered, to facilitate matters in making assessments. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Mr. Frost presented a bill of M. Honan & Sons for 7½ per cent. reservation in their account with the city, and on motion of Mr. Westphal, of the auditing committee, the bill was ordered paid. The Council then adjourned.

FUNERAL OF DR. PAGE.

Last Sad Rites Over the Departed Yesterday Afternoon.

There was scarcely a person present at the funeral services of the late Miss Rebecca P. Page, M. D., held at the Friends' meeting house yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, that was not deeply affected.

The life of the departed, full of good works and kind actions, was brought vividly before each mind as the company of sorrowing friends gathered were given an opportunity for silent meditation.

The form of the departed lay peacefully in the casket, as natural as in life, while tokens of the high esteem in which she was held was placed on the casket in the form of beautiful flowers.

At the close of the service, after those present had looked for the last time on the face of their friend, Mrs. Winters offered a touching prayer in which she breathed the heartfelt feelings and sentiments of all.

Several very close and intimate friends affectionately kissed the forehead of the departed in passing by.

Interment was beside the decedent's late parents in the Methodist cemetery, New Brunswick.

The pall-bearers were: George Saunders, A. D. Mallinson, E. E. Runyon and Alex. Runyon.

JUSTICE VAN SYCKEL IS ILL.

There Will Be a Delay in the Trial of Cases in the Elizabeth Court.

Justice Van Syckel, of the Supreme Court, sent word yesterday morning that he was very ill and that his cases in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth would have to be postponed for a week at least. Judge Magie heard one case, that of Bogert against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, a suit for damages. The Grand Jury will be ready to report tomorrow.

Work of the Wind.

The heavy wind yesterday afternoon upset two jardineres at the home of Mrs. F. O. Herring, on Park avenue, and dashed them to pieces. They were valued at $50 apiece.

ALFRED ALUMNI GATHER

OLD COLLEGE CHUMS RENEW ACQUAINTANCES AND HEAR TOASTS.

The Reunion Held in the Parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church—Witty Points Made by the Speakers.

There is nothing like heat to quell enthusiasm, but it made no impression on the alumni of Alfred University as they gathered in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening for their annual reunion. The night was warm and the humidity was high, but the graduates came, chatted, joked and generally enjoyed themselves. Both sexes were represented, as Alfred University is a co-educational institution, and all were happy at the thought of an evening of reminiscences and conversation with their old comrades of college days.

There were about 125 of them present, members of the branch of the general alumni association, known as the one from New York and vicinity. They have heretofore met in one of the large New York hotels, but this year the invitation of the graduates in this city was accepted, and the enthusiastic party, for Alfred now and forever, gathered here.

The church parlors were specially prepared for the occasion. Besides the usual electric lights to illuminate the rooms, handsome banquet lamps with shades of purple and gold, the colors of Alfred University, were on small tables about the room, and on the refreshment table, in one of the side rooms, which presented a very artistic appearance.

An informal reception was held during the first part of the evening, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., president of the association, and his wife receiving the out-of-town guests. The light repast that had been prepared by the women of the church was served by the Plainfield graduates. Then came the speech making which was opened by Rev. Dr. Lewis, after a selection "The Primrose Flower," by the ladie chorus. He was to have introduced Rev. Booth C. Davis, the new president of the Alfred University, but the latter was unable to be present and sent W. H. Crandall, treasurer of the university, in his place. Dr. Lewis referred very lovingly to the two former presidents, Kenyon and Allen, and then called D. E. Titsworth to act as toastmaster. Mr. Titsworth made an excellent toastmaster and his remarks were witty and to the point. With one of his characteristic humorous speeches, he introduced Mr. Crandall. Treasurer Crandall responded to the toast, "Alfred University," and declared that the college depends on its alumni for its support. He spoke briefly of the progress at Alfred and the plans for the future.

Rev. F. E. Peterson spoke on "Milton College," and compared the college in Wisconsin to the position New England held in the United States one hundred years ago.

Arthur L. Titsworth answered to "Rutgers College," and told, in a very humorous way, why he went there.

After a vocal solo by Miss Susie Howell, of New York, Prof. Frank H. Green, principal of the Brooklyn High School, talked of "Amherst," and said it greatly resembled Alfred in the Christian manhood of its graduates. Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the public schools, compared the public school to a crucible where the traits of all the different natio nalities were united to form the American.

Rev. L. E. Livermore, president of the Board of Trustees, told something of the marvelous work of the original trustees and declared that the trustees deserved to be greatly appreciated.

Dr. Phoebe J. B. Wait responded to the toast of "The Gentlemen" and said that she was going to let them speak for themselves but told of her admiration for the true man.

"The New Woman" was a toast answered by Miss Sophie Reynolds and she stated that the new woman had just the same virtues as the old, with modern improvements and declared her toast to be "To the new woman; the same yesterday, better today and not to be improved upon tomorrow."

The election of officers was then held and resulted as follows:

President, Rev. Daniel Lewis; first vice-president, Prof. Frank H. Green; second vice-president, Joseph Titsworth; third vice-president, C. C. Chapman; secretary and treasurer, H. G. Whipple.

Dr. Daniel Lewis closed the speech-making by making a few remarks on "The Alumni." A vocal solo by Robert Gorton and another selection, a lullaby, by the ladies chorus, brought the meeting to a close.

The committee in charge of the spread consisted of Mrs. Robert Gorton, Mrs. A. T. Maxson, Mrs. J. L. Titsworth, Mrs. John P. Mosher, Mrs. F. A. Dunham and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth.

The decorations, which consisted largely of flowers and potted plants, were arranged by Miss Ida Randolph, Miss Grace Lewis, Miss Luella Clawson, J. M. Titsworth and Dr. Marc Clawson.

WOMEN WANT TO VOTE.

UNION COUNTY EQUAL SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION IN SESSION.

The Meeting Presided Over by Mrs. Aaron M. Powell, President of the Association. Extracts From Her Opening Address.

The Union County Woman's Suffrage Association met in the Y. M. C. A. building this morning in annual session, with the president, Mrs. Aaron M. Powell in the chair, who gave a most excellent report of the association. She said in part that the company was small but the cause was great. The association, she said, was organized May 10th, 1895, and there is now a membership of 38. The first work of the association was that of favoring an amendment to the State Constitution, which would give full school suffrage for women. Through the earnest efforts, tact, ability and patient persistency of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and by the devotion of those accompanying her, much was accomplished at the State capitol. Continuing, the speaker said that many favor school suffrage, but do not encourage full suffrage for women.

Others there are who endorse it in the quiet of their homes, who have not been made to realize their duty to stand for the principle publicly. Our movement suffers considerably on account of these facts, and we must labor and wait for results in this direction. Union county is not as far advanced in suffrage sentiments as some other localities, and much patient educational work needs to be done to awaken an interest in the subject.

Substantiating this last statement regarding Union county, Mrs. Powell read an abstract from a paper which gave an account of a recent Republican State convention held in California, at which time a resolution was adopted which favored an amendment to the constitution giving the elective franchise to men and women.

The lecture committee reported that $324 had been received from the lectures given during the past season, and that the association would net a little over $100.

Mrs. Child's, of Newark was elected President in place of Mrs. Blackwell, who now resides in New York.

This afternoon, from 3 to 5 o'clock, the State Association is holding their meeting at the same place.

THE PRIMARY UNION.

Sunday-school Teachers Give and Gain Instruction in Their Work.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union held yesterday afternoon. The lesson was taught by Mrs. Haff, while the subject of foreign and home missions was in charge of Miss Rocap. A discussion lasting about twenty minutes followed. An interesting feature was the reports made by Mrs. Powlison, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Baker, of the recent meeting of the Institute held at Newark. It was announced that next week the lesson would be taught by Mrs. Skillman, of New Brunswick, and a general invitation is extended to everyone interested to be present. The following week Mrs. Wagner, of Newark, will be in charge and an important business meeting will follow.

Exterminate the Beetle Bug.

Other towns have successfully dealt with the elm beetle, why should not Plainfield. The Town Improvement Association is sparing no pains to equip a thorough plant and undertake the work under explicit, expert advice. It depends upon the support of the community whether the work can be done. A minimum of 500 trees at $1 for two sprayings, must be secured by Friday, May 22d.

An Invitation Accepted.

The Rasores Club held their regular monthly meeting this morning at the residence of Mrs. Horace Kimball, of East Fifth street. There was the usual hour devoted to the discussion of current events and the reading of articles on various important subjects. It was voted to accept the invitation of the Quiet Hour Club of Metuchen, to meet with them on June 10th at Metuchen.

Overflow of Water.

In some mysterious manner the water in the raceway in the rear of French's mill overflowed the embankment last night and run out between the mill and the adjoining building into the gutter. A Daily Press representative reported the matter to John H. French who stopped the overflow by raising the gates at the mill.

—Tomorrow "only," Wednesday, May 20th, VanEmburgh & Son will sell a special line of lace curtains, all complete, with hardwood poles and brass trimmings. Lot No. 1, 3 yards long, 89 cents a pair; lot No. 2, 3½ yards long, $1.29 a pair; lot No. 3, 3½ yards long, $1.59 a pair.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Minnie Smalley Gives a Birthday Party to Her Young Friends.

An important event in the social life of the younger society of the borough took place last night, when Miss Minnie Smalley, of Somerset street, tendered her friends a reception, the occasion being her seventeenth birthday. The invited guests completely filled the handsome residence, which was prettily decorated throughout with choice cut flowers and potted plants. Many banquet lamps shed a mild glow of light over the handsome gowns of the young ladies.

Dancing was the principal feature of the evening, a pleasant interruption of which were the piano solos rendered by Miss Ida Randolph, of New York. Music for dancing was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Guttman. A delightful repast was enjoyed at midnight and about three o'clock this morning the reception concluded and the guests departed for their homes, wishing the young hostess many more such pleasant birthdays. Miss Smalley received a large number of gifts.

Among those present were: Miss Ida Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph and Mr. Weighart, of New York, the Misses Josephine Fritts, May MacLaughlin, Jessie Coddington, Jennie Simpson, Lena Smalley, Ida, Belle and Hattie Lewis, Maggie Summers, Mamie De Nise, Edith Miles and Etta Blatz; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baglin, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Smalley, Mrs. Summers, Mrs. Dayton, and Messrs. Jed Smalley, William Morrison, Harry Coddington, Will Cadmus, John and Will De Meza, Arthur Cannon, Edward Smith, William Kitchen, John MacLaughlin, Benjamin La Vere, Edwin Smalley, Frank Smalley, Frank Blatz and John Steiner.

FOURTH STREET EXTENSION READY.

The Trolley Car Will Hum Along This Thoroughfare Very Soon.

The delay in changing the guage of the street railway tracks is caused by the inability of the contractors to receive spikes. They are expected very soon, however. Car No. 2 was taken in today to have the new trucks placed under it. After this is done the car will be run on Fourth street till the new cars arrive, which will be about May 25th. A trial trip was made on Fourth street yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, and it was a perfect success. It took twelve minutes to make the return trip.

For the present the cars will be run under fifteen minutes headway, between 6 a. m. and 11:30 p. m., until the new cars arrive. It is hoped to have a car running regular on Fourth street by Thursday.

As soon as the spikes arrive the work of changing the guage will be started at North and Watchung avenues and pushed through to the other end. The Somerset street line will then be taken up.

A peculiar incident happened yesterday afternoon at the North Avenue station on the arrival of the 2:17 Philadelphia train from New York. The engine was in charge of the Chief Engineer of the road, and while the train was at the station the regular engineer stepped in the the telegraph office to send a telegram. It detained him a few minutes and the engineer in charge got the signal to go ahead. He thought the other engineer had jumped on the rear car, but such was not the case. Instead he was left here and it was found necessary to telegraph to New York and have the Chicago limited, which passes through this city at 2:45, stop and take him on to Wayne Junction where he could catch his regular train.

Saving the Elms.

Members of the elm tree committee of the Woman's Town Improvement Asssociation visited the campus of Rutgers College, of New Brunswick, yesterday, and saw Prof. Smith's spraying apparatus at work. The thrifty, luxuriant foliage of the elms is an evidence of the benefit derived from three consecutive years spraying. It is imperative to begin operations at once. The first spraying is meant to kill the beetles before their eggs are laid. They are busily at work now.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pair and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

DEATH OF GIDEON ALLEN

A RESPECTED AND WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN PASSES AWAY.

He Came to this City When a Young Man and Has Remained Here Ever Since, With the Exception of a Few Years.

In the death of Gideon Allen, of 35 Grandview avenue, which occurred this morning, North Plainfield looses a valued and highly regarded citizen, who since his birth has always been identified with the interests of the borough. Mr. Allen had been ill about six weeks, and toward the end he grew rapidly worse.

Gideon Allen was a son of the Daniel and Hetty Allen, and was born on a farm at Washingtonville seventy-four years ago. During his boyhood days he remained on the farm, but when he became a young man he secured a position with Jackson Pound, who kept a bakery where George Voehl now conducts the business on West Front street. He remained with Mr. Pound until he had learned the trade, and then went to Easton where he opened a bakery. He continued the business for several years, when he gave it up, and accepted a position as salesman with Ducker & Hetfield, Brooklyn bakers.

He held the position about thirty years, after which he retired to private life.

When a young man he married Miss Hetfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hetfield, of Scotch Plains, who is now living. Four children survive him. Mrs. Eugene Moore, Mrs. F. O. Smith, John and Howard Allen, also one brother, Eustice Allen, of Newark.

Mr. Allen was well known for his many excellent qualities and his upright method of doing business. For many years he was a faithful member of the First Baptist church and always attended the services. In politics he was a Republican.

The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late home, 35 Grandiew avenue.

FESTIVAL OF HOLIDAYS.

A Pleasant Affair Affair Arranged to be Held in Mt. Pleasant Chapel.

The management of the Mt. Pleasant Festival, which will be held Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, are fortunate in having secured Mr. Ingall's, of New York, who has a very fine phonographic outfit containing many new and choice records. He will use one of the latest exhibition funnels which will easily fill the chapel so that all can hear. Mr. Ingalls will be present Thursday evening.

Miss Carrie Laing, of Brooklyn, a popular and entertaining elocutionist, will give some of her amusing recitations both Thursday and Friday evening.

Conveyances will leave the the railroad station, North avenue, at 8 o'clock. All friends will be carried to and from the chapel free, provided they buy fifty cents worth of tickets, which are good for admission and any purchases at the festival.

A card mailed to John Tappen or D. W. De Forest at Plainfield post-office will insure you a seat. Many have already signified their intention of going.

PLENTY OF ILLUMINATION.

A Burning Outhouse Called Out the Fire Department Last Night.

The business portion of this city on West Front street was illuminated this morning at about 1:25 o'clock by a bright blaze. It was an outhouse, about fifty feet in the rear of O. M. Dunham's hat store, next to the Babcock building. An alarm was sent in from box 12 and the department turned out with unusual quickness. The fire was soon extinguished by a stream of water before the outhouse was consumed. It is parf of the Sebring estate.

The fire is supposed to have caught from a wooden cuspidor filled with sawdust in which a cigar or cigarette had smouldered for some time.

Fear the Franchise Will be Refused.

The Elizabeth City Council will meet this evening, at which time the Street Railway Company, of this city, will ask for a franchise to build a road on Westfield avenue, Elizabeth, to Netherwood, to connect with the line already established. They will ask for a franchise to lay tracks on Westfield avenue from North Broad street to Grove street, when the south side of the Central Railroad tracks will be used to Netherwood. It is believed that the franchise will not be granted, as part of the proposed road in on the county road.

David Angerbauer yesterday commenced his duties as driver of the steamer in the fire department.

Miss Mamie Madden has resigned her position as cashier in Boehm's dry goods store, owing to poor health.

FIERCE FIRES RAGE

Valuable Forests and City and Town Property Destroyed

LIVES ALSO LOST IN THE FLAMES

Several Firemen Crushed To Death Under Falling Walls in Washington—Heavy Losses Reported in Half a Dozen States.

Washington, May 19.—Fire swept away a whole block of commercial buildings opposite the Smithsonian Institute soon after 8 o'clock last evening. The lives of at least six firemen were crushed out by falling walls. The loss will exceed $200,000. The buildings covering the block adjoining the Centre Market constituted practically the entire commission and wholesale produce business of Washington, and while not of great value, their contents burned so fiercely that a great portion of the residents from all parts of the city were attracted to the scene of the conflagration. From 7 to 8 o'clock the city was visited by one of the most terrific thunder storms in years and it is thought lightning traveling on telegraph wires entered a Postal Telegraph sub-station and started the flames, which spread rapidly through the highly inflammable materials of the building on Louisiana avenue, Ninth, Tenth and D streets. In a few minutes, under general alarm orders, the entire fire department commenced its efforts to check the fire's spread, but exploding barrels of kerosene and gasolene drove them off and led them to direct their energies to preventing the flames from crossing streets to neighboring squares. While the firemen of No. 8 engine were working a hose through one of the old buildings the roof fell without warning, burying them in the ruins. The wrecked building at once began burning furiously and any attempt at rescue was beyond question. Not until an hour later had the flames sufficiently subsided at this point for the firemen to begin clearing away the debris. Then three men, Joe Mulhall, —— Donaldson and Kennedy, still alive but scorched and crushed beyond all hope of recovery, were taken out and removed to the Providence hospital. This morning the firemen came upon another body. Four others are still known to be in the ruins and are being searched for.

FIRES IN NEW JERSEY.

Destructive Conflagration at Waretown—Damage Near Egg Harbor City.

Toms River, N. J., May 19.—A great fire visited the town of Waretown, Ocean county, yesterday afternoon. The news that the town was on fire came from the telegraph operator in the railroad station, who summoned assistance. A special train started from Manchester, bringing volunteer firemen from that place. A number of volunteer firemen from this place, together with the fire apparatus belonging to the local department, also went to assist the stricken town. Farmers and business men also left their work to render assistance. At one time it looked as if the whole town would be destroyed. Many families are rendered homeless. The volunteers from the surrounding towns have made arrangements to care for the sufferers.

Great Damage in Galloway Township.

Egg Harbor City N. J., May 19.—Another damaging fire spread through Galloway township yesterday afternoon. A high wind greatly aided the spread of the fire. The fruit orchard, berry patches and vegetables on the farm of William Fridhover were burned, and the outbuildings on John Mentz's farm were destroyed. The fire spread fully six miles, destroying the house and outbuildings of William Hohnelsen, the barn of Henry Middlesdorfer and an unoccupied building of Christian Lawer. The damage to the huckleberry crop and timber aggregates a large figure, and the fire is not yet under full control.

Forest Fire Near Calais, Me.

Calais, Me., May 19.—Heavy showers have checked the fires which have been raging on all sides the past week. Hundreds of men have been fighting them the past four days to keep them from the settlements along the railroads and river. At one time there was almost a complete circle around the city, in some places the flames coming within four miles of the city hall. Unless a heavy rain comes very soon nothing but the river will check the spread of the flames.

North Reading's Big Fire.

North Reading, Mass., May 19.—Yesterday's fire was the worst that ever visited this town. Seven houses, two barns, a large mill and over twenty-five out-building were destroyed as the result of a brush fire. The houses destroyed were those of Henry E. Gould, Milo Gould, Irving Batchelder, Wm. Holt and Brown's large saw and grist mill, in the basement of which were fifty pigs.

Fires Raging on Seven Mountains.

Lewiston, Pa., May 19.—Forest fires on Seven Mountains, this county, have destroyed thousands of dollars worth of lumber, bark and wood, and the log camp of Kulp, Thomas & Co., whose railroad is burned and their locomotives and upper camp left in the heart of the fire with no means of communication with the outside world. Fears for their safety are entertained.

Damage by Forest Fires in Connecticut.

Winsted, Conn., May 19.—Forest fires have done $60,000 damage and are still raging in Colbrook, Chapinville, Lakeville, New Hartford and Torrington. One hundred men fought the flames in Chapinville yesterday and "Ravine Hurst," a summer hotel, barely escaped destruction.

NAHANT'S BIG BLAZE.

The Longfellow Cottage Among the Property Destroyed Yesterday Afternoon.

Lynn, Mass., May 19.—The resident portion of the town of Nahant was the scene of a disastrous fire late yesterday afternoon which destroyed five valuable summer residences, causing a property loss approximating $100,000. The wind was very high, the water supply inadequate and only vigilant efforts on the part of the firemen and citizens generally prevented the conflagration from being more disastrous than it was. The houses burned were all vacant but most of them had been put in readiness for the coming of summer guests. They were the Longfellow cottage where the poet spent his summer for many years and where the "Bells of Lynn" was composed and written. It was owned by Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet; two buildings on the Green estate, the Duncan and Cunningham cottages and the Russell cottage. In addition to these several other cottages were more or less singed and many rods of costly fence were burned. The fire started in the yard of the Longfellow cottage and is supposed to have been occasioned by a spark from the pipe of one of the carpenters or painters employed there.

Destruction in New Hampshire.

Concorn, N. H., May 19.—The fire that started yesterday noon in the woods surrounding Lake Walden was one of the fiercest ever known here, and it has burned over 1,000 acres of wood land and destroyed hundreds of cords of wood. The stately pines that sheltered the site of Thorean's hermitage on the shore of Lake Walden were destroyed, and the beautiful parkway owned by Mrs. W. K. Forbes was burned over. The extreme drouth of the month and the high wind made it impossible to do much more than protect buildings that were located near the wood, many of which were in danger, while some out buildings were consumed. Five separate alarms were rung at Concord and help came from Concord Junction, Lincoln and Roadmaster McNamama of the Fitchburg railroad sent a special train with sixty men from Waltham. The fire crossed Walden street, Sandy pond and the old Cambridge turnpike and burned through Lincoln to the Lexington line. Some of the principal losses in Concord are the estates of the late Ralph Waldo Emerson, Hon. George Derby and R. G. Wood.

4,000 Cords of Wood Burned.

Plattsburg, N. Y., May 19.—Four thousand cords of wood belonging to the Chazy Marble Lime company were burned yesterday.

AGAIN IDENTIFIED.

The Colonnade Hotel Suicide Now Said To Be Mrs. E. E. Hill.

New York, May 19.—"Mrs. Everett," the Colonnade hotel suicide, has again been identified, this time by reputable people known in this city who are positive that they are right, and if the identification by Felicien Fauconniere, the Frenchman, is not proven true at once the body will be given up by the morgue keeper to be buried as Mrs. E. E. Hill, wife of E. E. Hill, a musician of Brompton Roads, London. His professional name is Edgar Zerega, and he is said to be well known as a musician and theatrical manager. The identification was made at the morgue late last evening by lawyers J. Kantrowitz and M. Esberg. The former has known Mrs. Hill from childhood and Lawyer Esberg has seen her half a dozen times. These lawyers were assisted in the identification by ex-congressman Ralph Hill of Indianapolis, who is the father of Mrs. Hill's husband. Mrs. Hill herself was formerly Miss May D. Keith, daughter of Col. John A. Keith, a prominent citizen and real estate dealer of Columbus, Ind. Lawyer Hill came from Indianapolis yesterday after having received a cablegram from his son asking him to see if the body of the suicide might not be that of Mrs. Hill. Lawyer Kantrowitz said that Mrs. Hill had been to his office half a dozen times to see him. They were both born in Columbus, Ind., and had known each other since childhood. Mrs. Hill came to America five weeks ago. She seems to have held no communication with her relatives in the west since her arrival here and even Lawyer Hill does not know what made his son suspect that she was the Colonnade suicide. Felicien Fauconniere, the Frenchman who identified the body, still claims that it is that of Louise Lansberg. His story is regarded as most remarkable.

CZAR'S CORONATION

Second Day of the Three Weeks' Celebration at Moscow.

VISITORS CONTINUE TO POUR IN

The Emperor and Empress Received Last Night with Great Popular Enthusiasm—Li Hung and Yamagata Viewing the Sights.

Moscow, May 19.—This is the second day of the three weeks festivities attending the coronation of the czar of all the Russias, and every incoming train still adds to the great gathering of distinguished persons from all parts of the world already here. The chief event of the celebration so far was the arrival last evening of the czar and czarina and court from St. Petersburg. Long before the hour of their arrival, regiments of soldiers were massed about the Smolensky station. The governor general of Moscow met the imperial train at Kiln and accompanied it to the city. Only those who possessed tickets were admitted to the station. The platform was covered with red cloth and ornated with plants and flowers, large spreading palms forming an arch at the entrance to the royal apartments. On the platform could be seen the minister of war, a large number of generals and aides-de-camp, and numerous foreign princes and the Grand Duke Vladimir. The guard of honor at the station was composed of a detachment of cuirassiers, headed by the royal standard and the cuirassier band. Horse guards and dragoons were waiting outside the station to accompany the royal party to the Petroffsky palace.

Received with Great Enthusiasm.

At 5.30 o'clock the imperial train steamed slowly into the station. This special train which the czar had made for himself is fitted up with every luxury. The carriage, in which were the emperor and empress, stopped opposite the royal apartments. Their majesties walked down the platform, through the double line of princes and generals, but did not enter the royal apartments. Instead, the emperor and empress proceeded directly to the closed carriage awaiting them, which they entered with the governor general. The appearance of their majesties was the signal for prolonged hurrahs from the people gathered, led off by the long roar of the soldiery. The cuirassier band played the national anthem, and surrounded by the cuirassier guard, the carriage was driven off to the palace. Great enthusiasm was manifested during the whole of the short drive by the thickly massed people along the sides of the road. The palace was quickly reached and the emperor and empress alighted. The emperor looked well and the empress appeared to be in fine health. Her majesty was dressed in white and the emperor wore the colonel's uniform of the Probajensky regiment.

Horseshoers in Session.

Buffalo, May 19.—The Journeymen Horseshoers' International union is in session in this city. The meetings will continue until Friday. Fully 100 delegates are in attendance. The secretary's report for the year shows that there are seventy-one local unions with a membership of about 7,000. The report shows a balance on hand of $6 500.

Women

Who are nervous, weak, worn out with local troubles find pure blood, nerve strength, and perfect health in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We do not say the above to raise false hope. It has been the experience of many, very many women in those intensely trying periods which demand and consume so much force—those special physical trials we delicately indicate by merely using the words—Maid, Mother, Matron.

Like a confidential friend we suggest the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, a reliable blood purifier and tonic; it has helped many others and will help you.

"I was in poor health five years, broken down in strength, and appetite all gone. Local troubles and other weaknesses intensified my misery. Nervous sick

Headaches

dizziness, heartburn and pains in my back made me think I should never be well again. A friend prevailed upon me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I soon began to improve and in six months it restored me to better health than for years. I have found Hood's Sarsaparilla a grand medicine for all troubles peculiar to

My Sex

I am now strong and healthy and can do a good day's work. I stand by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it cured me after other medicines failed." MRS. LUE DIER, Carlinville, Illinois.

This and many similar cures prove that

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the One True Blood Purifier. All druggists. $1. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, carefully prepared. 25 cents.

Consumption—Collapse

in this disease is what physicians constantly are on the look-out for, knowing that it means the end. Just keep up the strength; keep the body nourished properly, so that waste of tissue is checked, and with proper medicines death is delayed indefinitely, or a permanent cure, as has been proved in thousands of cases is accomplished. To effect this much desired result, give the patient

Bovinine

Dr. W. E. S. Preston, House Physician of the "House of Rest for Consumptives," of Tremont, N. Y., says, "I have never known a case where the stomach has rejected Bovinine. In cases of collapse, so common among consumptives, we always use it." Bovinine being easy to take, and quick of assimilation and a wonderful food product, at once starts on its mission of creating strength, flesh and blood. It tones up the vital organs and by thus invigorating them, enables them to throw off disease and gives to the sufferer a new lease of life where such a thing is possible.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redy ing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

UNITED STATES Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896 Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

INNOCENT OF WRONG

Rev. Mr. Fuller Resigns His Ministry in the Episcopal Church.

REFUSES TO ACCEPT THE SENTENCE

He Demands Immediate Deposition and Abandons and Openly Renounces the Discipline of the Church—Cause of His Suspension.

Boston, May 19.—Rev. Samuel Richard Fuller, rector of St. Paul's church in Malden for several years, until suspended by the bishop of the diocese, refuses to accept the sentence imposed. In a letter to Bishop Lawrence he says: "I insist upon my good faith in every step taken by me, and upon my innocence of wrong, intended or committed towards the church or towards any individual. Therefore, I cannot submit to any condemnatory or disciplinary sentence whatsoever, without doing violence to my consciousness of integrity. Accordingly, I resign my ministry in the Protestant Episcopal church, and herewith, as in its canons provided, 'declare' to you 'in writing' my 'renunciation' of said ministry in said church and demand immediate deposition therefrom for the reason that I do hereby 'abandon and openly renounce the discipline' of said church." Rev. Mr. Fuller was charged with having violated the canons of the Episcopal church regarding marriage and was publicly suspended from the priesthood for two years by Bishop Lawrence. He was informed that if at the end of two years, he had returned to the performance of any ministerial duty without having proven his first wife guilty of adultery, he would return at his own peril. About fifty people, including a number of Presbyterians were present, and immediately after Bishop Lawrence had read his decision, Mr. Fuller read an elaborate protest. The committee who found Mr. Fuller guilty recommended his expulsion, but the bishop decided to deal with him as above. The specific charge was that of violating the law prohibiting the marriage of either party to a divorce while the other party is yet living, except in the case of the innocent party when the cause of divorce is adultery.

ALIEN CONTRACT LABOR.

An Important Question Answered by Justice Peckham.

Washington, May 19.—Justice Peckham has decided the following question certified to the supreme court of the United States from the sixth circuit court of appeals, in the case of the United States vs. Harry Laws: "Is a contract made with an alien in a foreign country (A. Seelinger at Dormagen, Germany, July 22, 1889) to come to this country as a chemist on a sugar plantation in Louisiana (belonging to Harry Laws), in pursuance of which contract such alien does come to this country and is employed on a sugar plantation in Louisiana, his expenses being paid by the defendant, a contract to perform labor or services as prohibited in the alien contract labor laws?" The supreme court answered no.

Goes Back to Prison.

Philadelphia, May 19.—Dr. John H. Durland, who was convicted in the United States district court in this city of using the mails to defraud, and who was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment in the county jail, was yesterday afternoon returned to the prison to finish his sentence. After Durland had been incarcerated for about a month he was released on proceedings from the United States supreme court until that tribunal could pass upon the case. The decision was against him.

Officers of the A. P. A.

Washington, May 19.—The following officers of the American Protective association were elected at the closing session of the supreme council: Secretary, W. J. Palmer of Butte, Mont.; treasurer, F. C. Campbell of Minneapolis; sergeant-at-arms, J. W. Ellis of South McAlester, Ind. Ter.; guard, W. B. Howard of Omaha, Neb.; sentinel, T. S. Hanson of Ohio; trustees, Allison Stocker of Denver, George Hester of Cleveland, O., and W. J. White of Richmond, Va.

Cannot Discriminate.

Washington, May 19.—Secretary Carlisle has sent to the senate a letter containing some observations on the Perkins bill to give the president power to meet discriminating duties against American commerce. "After careful consideration of this bill," says Mr. Carlisle, "I am impelled to the conclusion that it will be impracticable for this department to determine the excess of the direct or indirect bounty or premium on exports allowed by foreign countries."

Arrested as He Left State's Prison.

Auburn, N. Y., May 19.—Deputy sheriff J. K. Maitland of Cuyahoga county, O., arrested William H. Ellsworth of Bedford, a suburb of Cleveland, for forging a check for forty dollars in March, 1894, as he was discharged from state prison here last evening, after serving a sentence of two years for horse stealing, committed in Tompkins county, this state. Maitland and his prisoner left for the west to-day.

Separate Railroad Coach Law.

Washington, May 19.—The supreme court of the United States has decided in what is known as the "Jim Crow car case" of Plessy vs. Ferguson, that the statute of the state of Louisiana requiring railroad companies to supply separate coaches for white and colored persons is constitutional, affirming the decision of the court below. Judge Harlan dissented.

BAPTIST ANNIVERSARY.

Many Strangers and Delegates in Attendance at the Asbury Park Meeting.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 19.—Asbury Park is crowded with visitors and delegates to the Baptist May anniversary, which commenced last night in the First Baptist church. The meeting last night was the nineteenth anniversary of the Woman's Baptist Home Mission society, the president of which is Mrs. J. D. Crouse. An address was made by Miss Mary G. Burdette, sister of the famous humorist. She reviewed the result of the society's labors in the various states, and stated that New Jersey showed a growing interest, New York was not up to expectations, but the society was not discouraged; Pennsylvania had cause for rejoicing, but the greatest advance, she said, was in Wisconsin. The society has eighty-two stations and 130 missionaries. In Colorado 30,000 persons had an opportunity to attend church, while in 200 places visited there were no houses for religious worship. Miss Burdette favored statehood, even if it did make the work more difficult. The Chinese made little progress. Miss A. H. Barber, the treasurer of the society, made the closing address. The programme for to-day includes a devotional service this morning, followed by a review of the society's work on the Long Island branch by Miss Nellie T. Lazell. At 11 o'clock the open parliament on the Model Missionary society will take place. In the afternoon addresses will be made by Mrs. H. H. Ames, Mrs. M. V. Littell, Miss Maria Jones and Miss Augusta Seils. The society will conclude its programme this evening.

IF M'KINLEY IS NOMINATED.

His Friends in New York State Intend To Run His Campaign Themselves.

Buffalo, May 19.—President George E. Matthews of the New York state McKinley league made a significant statement yesterday. It indicated a purpose on the part of the McKinley managers in the event of McKinley's nomination to take the campaign out of the hands of the republican state committee and put it in the hands of the special committee organized for the purpose. Mr. Platt's open hostility to McKinley is said to be the reason for this contemplated move. In the course of an interview Mr. Matthews was asked what action McKinley's managers in this state would take in the event of his nomination. He replied: "McKinley's friends in this state will do whatever they deem for his interest regardless of the wishes of the parties who have heretofore controlled New York state republican politics." "And that means a provisional state committee, probably?" "It means just what I said—whatever is deemed for his interest." "At present," Mr. Matthews added, "McKinley's friends are getting acquainted with each other. There are so many of them that it will take quiet a time. And the number of them grows with every day."

Escaped Convict Surrenders.

Watertown, N. Y., May 19.—Convict Boyle, who escaped from Auburn prison last week and again escaped at Syracuse after being recaptured, gave himself up to the chief of police last evening. He says he has concluded that it will be better for him to serve out the remainder of his five years' sentence for burglary, six months of which he had served, than to dodge the police the remainder of his life. The Auburn authorities have been notified.

Postmaster Nominations Confirmed.

Washington, May 19.—The senate has confirmed the following postmaster nominations: Massachusetts—James L. Lincoln, East Weymouth; Charles E. Brandy, Sundwich. Pennsylvania—William Rodcarmel, Harrisburg; Benjamin Stewart, Birdsboro.

Death of an Old Physician.

Manchester, N. H., May 19.—Dr. Emil Custer died of liver trouble last evening. He was one of the oldest and most respected physicians of Manchester, having practiced here nearly half a century.

May 21—New Jersey Forestry Association meets in Y. M. C. A. Hall.
May 21—Cecilia Club concert at Y. M. C. A. Hall.

Among the names mentioned as candidates for the office of Sheriff of Union county on the Republican ticket, this fall, The Press is glad to notice the name of the present Under-Sheriff, L. W. Miller, of Fanwood.

There is no town in New Jersey where there is more enthusiasm or work in the aid of equal suffrage than in this city, and it is eminently proper, therefore, that this should be the meeting place today for the State and county associations of the supporters of the movement.

New Jersey was well supplied with startling news events yesterday. The forest fires in South Jersey, the attempt to lynch a Newark brute who unmercifully beat his children and the attempt to wreck a D.L. & W.R.R. train at Boonton, were three of sufficient magnitude to make up for a dozen other ordinary events.

"All's well that ends well," and so it is with the charges presented against the two policemen. The dignity of the city officials has been maintained, the recreancy of an officer has been punished, and the record of another one cleared of the blot of insubordination. The affair, regretable as it was for the reputation of the force, will result in a better understanding between all hands concerned. Incidentally, Lawyer Charles A. Reed is entitled to credit for the successful manner in which he handled the side of the officers.

Among the merchants who are unwilling to close on Saturday afternoons because of the heavy loss that it would entail, they say, there are some who favor a half holiday on another day, say Wednesday. The strongest reason, however, in favor of closing on Saturday is that it enables the employes to get away to the country or the seaside in time to spend one full day there during the hot weather and that means a great deal to those who are shut up in stores all week. Working until 11 or 12 o'clock on Saturday night makes most of them too tired to care about going anywhere on Sunday.—New York Tribune.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

He escaped with sundry bruises.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. FANWOOD.

Fanwood is the only township in the County of Union that has not sent at least one patient to the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, and this, coupled with the fact that the popular and genial Sheriff Kyte, is a resident of Fanwood, form the reasons for recognizing it as one of the most distinguished townships in the county. To Sheriff Kyte is probably due the credit for the excellent condition of affairs in his native town. The residents there have been following his leadership for many years, and while they continue to do this, the insane asylum will not number many Fanwood people among its patients. Dr. Westcott claims that this freedom from insanity is entirely due to his medical skill and as a result there is a serious contention between his friends and the admirers of Sheriff Kyte.—Summit Record.

HIS GREAT SACRIFICE

Weyler Pardons a Large Number of Political Prisoners.

HONORS BOY SOVEREIGN'S BIRTHDAY

Havana Cigarmakers To Celebrate the Order Stopping the Export of Tobacco. Result of Several Engagements as Given Out by the Government.

Havana, May 15.—Reports have been received from several districts of engagements between the troops and the insurgent bands. According to these the Spaniards have been uniformly victorious. This, of course, is news given out by the government. The total loss of the insurgents was twenty-three killed and one captured. The Spanish loss was two killed and three wounded. Among the latter are Col. Jul and another officer. The anniversary of the birth of King Alfonso, which actually occurred Sunday, and was celebrated yesterday. Captain-General Weyler liberated many political prisoners in honor of the occasion. It is stated that the cigar manufacturers and their employes will organize a procession to celebrate the action of Gen. Weyler stopping the export of tobacco. Gen. Vicuna has been attacked by yellow fever. His condition is serious. News has been received from the province of Santiago de Cuba to the effect that Col. Tejada has had a fierce engagement at Palmarito with the rebels commanded by Cebrico. The insurgents occupied a strongly fortified position, but were dislodged by the troops, who numbered 1,500. When the troops were returning to Palmarito the rear guard were repeatedly attacked by the rebels. The troops lost four dead and two officers and twelve soldiers wounded. Unofficial advices show that Col. Tejada's report is incorrect, and that the rebels forced the troops to retreat. The government losses are said to be much heavier than stated in the official report.

SUNK IN COLLISION.

The Steamer D. H. Muller Goes Down in Baltimore Harbor with a Cargo.

Baltimore, May 19.—The Merchants & Miners' line steamship Decatur H. Miller was run down and sunk yesterday afternoon in the harbor, off the foot of East Falls avenue, by the steamship Bowden of the Buckman Fruit company. The Bowden was bound from Port Antonio, Jamaica, with a cargo of bananas and the Miller was in tow of a tug, shifting from her pier at the foot of East Falls avenue to Canton, to discharge about 500 tons of general merchandise, consisting largely of rosin, cotton, oil and lumber. She was not under steam at the time of the collision and was helpless, save for the tug. A hole four feet long by four feet wide was knocked in the Miller's side amidships and she sunk in about ten minutes. The stories of the officers of both steamers vary, and each claim the other was at fault.

COL. COCKERILL'S REMAINS.

They Leave New York This Afternoon for St. Louis for Final Interment.

New York, May 19.—The body of Col. John A. Cockerill found a temporary resting place at least last evening in the vault in Kensico cemetery, after his friends in many fraternal orders had given to it the last rites and after it had reposed for a while in the Calvery Baptist church, where the religious ceremony was held. The remains will start on a journey again this afternoon which will have for its terminal St. Louis, where the body, after traveling thousands of miles on land and sea, will at last be consigned to the earth.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 19.—The contract for the extension of the wheel pits of the Niagara Falls Power company has been let to E. D. Smith & Co. of Chicago. The extension will accommodate seven new dynamos, and part of the power developed by them will be for transmission to Buffalo and other places. The contract price is understood to be about $1,000,000.

McCoy Wins on a Foul.

Boston, May 19.—The principal contest at the boxing entertainment in this city last night was the bout between "Kid" McCoy and "Mysterious" Billy Smith of Boston, fifteen rounds at 154 pounds. The fighting was somewhat spirited. McCoy was awarded the battle in the sixth round on a foul.

AN ORDINANCE

An Ordinance to regulate the use of bicycles, tricycles, and similar vehicles, and other road vehicles in the public streets.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles when in use on the public highways, streets, or places of the city are hereby required to have a lamp of such illuminating power as to be plainly seen one hundred yards, attached thereto and kept lighted between one hour after sunset and sunrise.

Sec. 2. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles shall carry a suitable alarm-bell attached to the handle bar of such machine, which, when rung, may be heard one hundred feet distant. That such bell shall be sounded as an alarm by the rider of such vehicle upon approaching another vehicle from the rear or upon approaching pedestrians crossing the street or upon the approach of another vehicle on the same street or on a street intersecting the street ridden upon.

Sec. 3. That no person shall ride upon any bicycle, tricycle, or similar machine upon any sidewalk within the limits of the City of Plainfield; provided that the term sidewalk as used in this ordinance shall be construed to mean such sidewalks only, concerning which the city has power to pass ordinances under and by virtue of paragraph V, Section 1 of Chapter 8 of the Public Laws of 1896; and provided further that this section shall not apply to the riding of any bicycle, tricycle or similar machine upon any sidewalk when necessary to ride upon such sidewalk in passing from private premises to the roadbed of any street, or vice versa.

Section 4. That every violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall render the offender subject to a fine not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5) for each offense, and that the Justice, Police Judge, Recorder or other Magistrate who may have jurisdiction over such offenses in violation of this ordinance, may impose such fine in his discretion, as he may think proper, not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5), for each offense.

Adopted by the Common Council May 11th, 1896.

Approved by the Mayor May 12th, 1896.

A. GILBERT, Mayor.

Attest—J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

a million killed

would make no impression on the number of the germs of consumption that exist in one affected lung. All germs are little enough, but those which cause consumption are very minute. Cod-liver oil won't kill them. We don't know a remedy which will. The germs float in the air and we can't keep from breathing them into our lungs. Then why don't all of us have consumption? Because a healthy throat, sound lungs, and a strong constitution won't allow the germs to gain a foothold.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, restores and maintains the strength, increases the weight, heals inflamed membranes and prevents serious lung trouble. This is why it is the food-medicine in coughs, colds, loss of flesh, and general debility.

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

The captain was as good as his word, and, aided by a light breeze which came as opportunely as if designed to assist in this errand of mercy, the Mary Peck cruised about in search of the flotilla. Nothing was seen of it, however, and when, after lying becalmed for two days more, her sails were again filled by the wind, her bow turned to the south, and once more she was headed for her destination. Long afterward it was learned that an English ship had rescued the occupants of the boats on the day following that on which the steamer burned, and had carried them to London.

As we drew into cooler latitudes Perez mended steadily, although, as may be imagined, his recovery was a tedious business. Yet, in view of his condition when he was hoisted to the deck of the Mary Peck, neither he nor I could find cause for complaint. For six weeks he was confined to his state room, and in that time I came to know him well and to like him exceedingly. Of himself he said little, but, bit by bit, I learned something of his story. His father was a Brazilian, but his mother was English, and the greater part of his youth was spent at English schools. Since attaining manhood he had lived near Rio, making an occasional trip to Europe. The lady in his charge on the homeward voyage which had been interrupted so disastrously was a cousin, who, after some years in Portugal, was returning to her own country. She was not very young, and her beauty was of the faded sort. In spite of the drawback that neither she nor Mrs. Peck was mistress of the other's tongue, the two women managed to strike up a great friendship and to comfort one another vastly in the days of great gales and high seas we encountered off the cape. But the ship fought her way through the storms of that stormiest of regions into the Pacific, and at last her anchor was dropped in Valparaiso bay after a voyage which, south of the line, had been prolonged far beyond her master's expectations.

There had been no opportunity to transfer Perez to a vessel bound for Rio, and perforce he had been carried to the Chilian port. On the day of our arrival, however, he and his companion bade us farewell and were sent aboard a steamer which, an hour later, bore them out of the bay. Our parting was that of friends who could hardly hope to meet again. Yet it was fated that a meeting should come, and, that, too, at an early date.

II.

Again the Mary Peck was plowing the waves of the Atlantic. Favoring breezes on the Pacific, a fierce but short-lived storm off the Horn, then a half gale which drove her at top speed along that roughest of ocean highways—such was the story of the beginning of her homeward voyage. But now the cape had been rounded and the ship was pressing northward toward warmer latitudes and less tempestuous seas. Everybody aft was in the best of spirits, as I well remember.

It was evening. Mrs. Peck and I were reading in the cabin when the captain left the deck and joined us. The hanging lamp showed drops of spray glistening on his cap and heavy jacket, and no wonder, for a strong, keen wind was sweeping up out of the southwest, and, though the ship was running before it, one could guess that her deck was far from dry.

"You two are looking cheery and homelike down here," said the skipper. "I tell you, a warm cabin's no bad place on a night like this. There's an edge to this breeze that, even if we miss half the force of it, cuts to the bone. How'd you like to be standing watch, doctor?"

"This is better, thank you," said I; "better for the present, at least. I dare say it won't be long before the deck will have the preference."

"Not if our luck holds. Do you believe in luck, doctor?"

"Yes, most firmly," said I. The question recalled most unpleasantly the tribulations of life on shore, which, for a little, I had shaken off, but to which a return was inevitable.

"And so do I," said the skipper. "Still, with Mary with us we can't meet any great misfortune. Old Ocean wouldn't be malicious enough to build up her health only to make her fate a shipwreck."

His eyes met his wife's for an instant; the look on the faces of the two revealed that, notwithstanding their wedding day was far behind them, they were still lovers.

"Take off those wet things, dear," she said. "Surely you can spare us a half hour. You're not needed on deck all the time."

"I'll be with you in two minutes," he answered, cheerily. His hand was on the latch of his stateroom door, when there came a shock which almost knocked him from his feet. A tremor ran through the fabric of the vessel. Then there were shouts from above and the noise of men running along the deck.

Mrs. Peck started from her seat, her hands clasped and her lips moving, though no sound came from them. I had sprung after the captain toward the campanion way, but he turned upon me fiercely.

"Look after my wife!" he cried. "Don't leave her, man! Back with you!"

And back I went, though it was little in my power to comfort her. Yet I strove to reassure her, as if a frightened woman could be cheered by an equally frightened man. Neither of us knew what had happened. In our ignorance we could only dread horrors none the less terrifying for the indefiniteness of them. So for many minutes we sat, pale and trembling at the prospect of dangers we knew not what. But the motion of the ship and the tell-tale compass showed that she was still speeding on her course, and after a time the fact began to revive our courage. At last—how long the interval seemed there is no need of relating—Capt. Peck rejoined us.

"What was it, Abner?" gasped his wife. "What was it?"

"Here, here, that won't do," he answered. "Don't worry. We're still afloat, and likely to keep afloat, which is more to the point."

"Then what has happened?" I broke in.

"We struck something. Just what, we don't know, but something quite awash, for nobody saw anything of it. Whatever it was, we must have sent it to the bottom. None of the men caught even a glimpse of the thing as we went over it."

"A derelict?"

"Perhaps. However, we're not badly damaged, so far as can be discovered. There's no danger."

With a great sigh of relief, his wife sank back in her seat. Her husband bent over her and kissed her.

"Don't let her get down-hearted, doctor," said he. "She's a brave little woman if she has only a chance. Remember, both of you, we're not sinking, but afloat in as sound a ship as ever was sent off the ways. And now I've got to go on deck again."

In spite of the confidence he felt, or assumed, there was little rest for us that night. Morning, to be sure, showed the vessel apparently uninjured, at least to unskilled eyes, though one could not help noticing that the faces of the mates were unusually grave, and that the men talked earnestly among themselves. The pumps had been going during the night, as I knew, and now, at intervals, the clank of them penetrated the cabin. Nevertheless the captain again and again declared that there was no danger, until by force of repetition he succeeded in allaying the fears of his wife.

We held the breeze for three days. Then followed a gale of 20 hours' duration, which left behind it an ugly sea. The next morning the pumps were going steadily. The cold had moderated sensibly, and from under the lee of a boat I enjoyed a pipe and watched the men at the brakes. After a little the skipper, who had been standing near the wheel, crossed over to me.

"Doctor," he said, "I've something to tell you. It is better for you to learn it now than to come at it after awhile by guesswork. We've changed our course and are headed for Rio."

"Then the ship's injury is greater than you supposed?" I asked, with all my old terrors aroused.

"Yes. We have been leaking forward ever since the collision. The pitching and rolling in yesterday's blow increased the trouble and made my duty clear. I want you to understand this and to aid me in keeping up my wife's spirits. Make her believe that seeking port for repairs is more of an extra precaution than a necessity."

"I'll do my best," I promised, and, though my success was doubtful, I honestly strove to aid the captain's designs. Of the anxious days of that run to Rio there is little to record; but, reach it as we did at length, with the pumps going, the men almost worn out and the ship showing a good deal less freeboard than she had displayed in the Pacific. We learned, soon after our arrival, that Perez was out of the city, and that it was uncertain when he would return. The work of repairs on the ship was pushed, for her master was desirous to lose as little time as possible. There were some cases of fever reported among the shipping, and once or twice I was called aboard vessels to prescribe for men lying ill of the disease. I doubt whether my ministrations had much effect, Yellow Jack being then more of a stranger to me than was the case somewhat later. While spending a day ashore I was seized by the fever. I was hurried to a hospital, there to fight my battle with the grim enemy. The struggle was so close, as I learned afterward, that probably it would have gone against me, had not Perez, returning to Rio, got news of my attack and secured for me all that money could command in the way of treatment and attendance; and when I was convalescent he took me to his fine estate in the highlands. The Mary Peck by this time was well on her way to New York, her captain easy in the knowledge that he had left his surgeon in good hands.

Of the weeks passed as Perez' guest I shall ever cherish a grateful remembrance. His kindness was unvarying, his generosity unlimited. He had obtained a very fair notion of my slender prospects, and gladly would have aided me to seek fortune in Brazil, had not the physicians strongly advised against my attempting to remain there. Accordingly, he was forced to content himself with arrangements for my passage home, which he decided should be made by way of England. He would have done more, and pressed upon me money, which would have been a welcome addition to my resources, had I not refused to increase my obligations to him.

"Obligations!" he objected. "Don't let me hear you mention obligations. Fate has brought us together twice. You think that on the second occasion you have become my debtor, but I know that on the first I incurred a debt to you which can never be liquidated. How would I have fared had I not received skillful treatment after the crew of your ship hoisted me out of the boat in which I had suffered tortures? It was the one chance in the hundred that the rescuing vessel carried a surgeon. There was fate in it; there was fate in the accident which drove the Mary Peck to Rio. It may be destiny that even for a third time we shall be of service the one to the other."

"I trust that if the opportunity comes it will be mine," said I; "but our lives promise to be spent far apart."

"Even so. But the chain of destiny sometimes links the most remote."

Evidently a feeling possessed him that our connection was not to end with the good-byes spoken on the steamer which was to bear me from Rio. He asked many questions about my plans, until from the answers he perceived that I was turning homeward almost without an idea of the manner of existence before me. Then the talk drifted to the sorry experiences of my professional career and to the errant character of my boyhood existence. He was a sympathetic listener to a description of the old village on the New England coast and the lonely house, surrounded by the marsh, which had been my favorite retreat. Under the spur of memory, I told him much of the abandoned dwelling and of its isolation.

"If ever I come to be a misanthrope," I declared, "let me retire thither, assured that I may remain undisturbed so long as I choose. Yet, if my mood changes, it will be but a step, and again I shall be among my fellows."

"Truly an admirable heritage," he observed.

"Indeed it is. The villagers take no interest in the old place. Though near them, it is out of their way, and there is no reason why they should visit it. They are not people of the sort to waste energy in tramping through salt bogs. A man who settled there might feel tolerably certain that they would not attempt to intrude upon him."

We were silent for a time, but at length I asked whether he might not visit the United States.

"It is hardly on the cards," he answered. "It is not probable that I shall quit Brazil for some time to come. I have interests to be guarded which would suffer in my absence. The country is on the eve of a revolution; the empire is doomed, and its fall cannot be long delayed. Under the surface there are plots and counterplots. I have striven to keep clear of them, and have succeeded, so far as active participation is concerned; but I have had knowledge of a number of them, and many of my closest friends are deeply involved. The nation's need is a strong, stable government. God knows how we are to obtain it, or what the history of the next few years will be."

Before we separated for the night an agreement had been made which afterward seemed curious enough, though at the time we entered into it with the utmost gravity. It was, in brief, that in case either had an urgent request to make of the other, and the request was made by letter, there should be used, either as a signature or appended to the writer's name, a symbol, a Greek cross with three dots ranged vertically to the right of it. Perhaps it was Perez' earnestness as we talked over the matter which prevented me from appreciating its strangeness. A little reflection might have persuaded me that we were wasting our breath, for it was difficult to understand how I, in my poverty and powerlessness, could ever aid one who possessed so much of the resources I lacked; but, under the influence of my friend's grave face and words, a pledge to heed his call was given as solemnly as if the alliance were one of equals.

The following day, a passenger on the steamer Bedouin, I leaned upon the vessel's rail and watched the Brazilian highlands growing less and less in the distance.

CYCLING COMMENT.

William Holmes, of East Front street, has purchased a new wheel.

William Shaeffer, of West Second street, is riding a new wheel, geared to 80.

Frank E. Woodruff, one of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company's employes, has accepted a position with the Jersey Wheel Company.

Three more Cleveland Swell Specials were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday for their rental department.

Wm. Littell, of Newark, rode to Plainfield Sunday, and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley S. Miller, of Orchard place.

George Gould, of the Potter Press Works, has received his new "Grasshopper" wheel. It is worked by levers instead of pedals, and geared at 80.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, won two more races at Chicago Saturday evening. The race meet will be continued this week.

A new cycle club has been organized at South Plainfield with 37 members. They all ride Crescent wheels purchased of the F. L.C. Martin Cycle Company.

Entry blanks for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet may be obtained at the clubhouse or from George B. Cobb, chairman of the racing board.

Mr. Bartlett, of the Gormully & Jeffrey Manufacturing Co., makers of the Rambler wheels, was a guest at the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company's salesrooms yesterday.

George B. Cobb, Jr., of the Crescent Wheelmen, is showing up in fine form this year and will probably be heard from in the neighboring race meets. Last year he rode under the Harlem Wheelmen's colors.

Another Jersey racing wheel was shipped to Chicago last night for the use of Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team. Eaton is making a great reputation for himself and the Jersey wheel at Chicago by his wonderful riding.

The cyclists of the Congregational church are going to enjoy a bicycle run next Saturday afternoon under the leadership of the Rev. C. L. Goodrich. The start will be made from the church at 4 o'clock. This is a new kind of sociable.

When Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, broke the world's record for a mile on a ten lap track last week for a second time, he won a purse of $150, which was offered by the promoters of the meet if he could lower his own record of 2:17.

A cordial invitation is extended to all Y. M. C. A. members to go on the run to Summit, Thursday night. A good time is assured, as the Summit Y. M. C. A. members are royal entertainers. The moon, just past first quarter, will make the ride a delightful one.

Charles Appley, Walter Appley and Clarence Bird, three of Elizabeth's crack riders, visited the Crescent Oval Sunday afternoon. Charles Appley is now training for the Irvington-Milburn race and promises to do some fast riding. He is in excellent condition.

Accidents prevented both Barnett and Carpenter, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, from doing anything in the ten mile road race at Philadelphia Saturday. Carpenter was prevented from riding while a tired rider ran into Barnett after he had ridden two and a half miles. His chances were excellent at the time of his upset. S. L. Cassedy, of Philadelphia, won the race from the four minute mark. A remarkable thing about his victory was that his wheel was geared to 108.

The Columbia Cycle Academy, of Plainfield, is no more. Joseph L. Wiseman, who has been the manager of the academy, has severed all connections with the Eldridge Bicycle Company and tomorrow will start business for himself. He will keep the academy at present and will represent several of the leading bicycle firms. Mr. Wiseman is quite a favorite with Plainfield people who remember his many acts of kindness, especially during the time of the Kirmess and the Firemen's Fair.

The Board of Governors and the Racing Board of the Crescent Wheelmen met last evening and considered the matter of furnishing water for the track. The Governors recommended that force pumps be used for supplying the water. They also endorsed the action of the Racing Board in giving the use of the track to only those that hold membership tickets or the track privilege tickets issued by George B. Cobb, chairman of the Racing Board.

Gus. T. Burglund, the new trainer and manager of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, has gotten the team out to the Crescent Oval for steady work. Barnett and Carpenter will train for track work and will probably ride next at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet. The riders will do their slow work in the morning and their fast trials in the afternoon. Burglund is a great acquisition to the team as he is one of the best trainers on the track today. He has had fifteen years experience and knows the peculiarities of all of the Jersey team, having had them under his care before.

AROUND THE BASES.

The young colored men of this city organized a baseball team last evening under the name of the "Fear Nots." They will be ready to play any good nine and arrangements for a game can be made with the captain, G. Peterson, 507 East Sixth street.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The boys of Washington Park are planning a great athletic meet to be held at Maltby's track next Saturday afternoon. Good prizes will be given in each event.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

The usual trotting matches will be held at the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Saturday. The Woodbridge horses and drivers will also be present.

Democrats, Be of Good Courage.

Democrats, do not be dismayed at the bluster of the Republican pretension and noise. In 1884 and in 1892 they made the same boast and claims as today, and yet the cause of justice triumphed and we elected Grover Cleveland on the promise of cheaper necessaries of life. This we have fulfilled. We have started the wheels of trade and extended our commerce almost to the ends of the earth. The justice of our tariff legislation is apparent to all students of economics, and to the head of every household as he buys the necessities for his family. Democrats, stand firm to Justice's cause.

Conferred a Degree.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., met last evening and conferred the Red Cross degree on one candidate. The committee of arrangements for the Knights Templar field day, which is to be held here the first week in October, was appointed. A delegation from the Temple Commandery of Metuchen was present and thoroughly enjoyed the spread and smoker that followed the meeting.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The First Year in Their Own Building Shows Enlarged Work—Reports of Committees and President's Address.

The first year of the Young Men's Christian Association in its new building has been an eminently successful one, and the Association has shown itself perfectly able to run itself in its enlarged sphere of work. All this was clearly shown at the annual meeting of the Association held last evening.

Early in the evening, from 7 till 8 o'clock, the officers and committeemen of the Association were tendered an informal banquet in the small hall on the second floor. A bountiful repast was served by some of the members of the Women's Auxiliary, after which the guests adjourned to the main hall to digest more weightier subjects. The committee in charge of the spread consisted of Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. A. B. Beers, Mrs. Harry Manning, Mrs. Frank T. Clawson, Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. Rankin, Miss Jennie Demarest and Miss Carrie Dewey.

The annual meeting of the Association should have been held on May 14th, the night of the Choral Society concert, but on account of the concert the meeting was adjourned to last evening when a goodly number of interested members gathered in the assembly hall to hear the reports of the work of the last year and plan for the future of the Association.

President W. D. Murray called the meeting to order, with Secretary A. B. Beers in his usual position. The meeting opened with Scripture reading by George R. Cornwell, after which Ira W. Travell led in prayer. The reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting followed, and then the president, on motion, appointed a nominating committee consisting of S. P. Kimball, H. C. Munger, W. F. Oliver, George Fuller, Harry Manning and J. H. Leggett. The committee began its labors immediately in another room, while the Association listened to the different reports. An evidence of the steady growth of the Association was shown by the first report, that of the membership committee, which had fifteen new members to propose. They were all elected into the Association, provided the committee approved of them.

The religious work of the Association is really the most important, and the report of the committee in charge of that department was a very interesting and encouraging one. It was read by the chairman, A. C. LaBoyteaux. The report stated that the year had been a successful one. The Sunday afternoon meetings for men were particularly successful on account of the large attendance and the helpfulness that had been done. The average attendance through the summer and winter had been one hundred and four. These meetings have been addressed by prominent men from this city and elsewhere, while music of different kinds has formed a pleasant feature. They have been self sustaining, while some of the collections have been given to the speakers to devote to their mission work. There have been several Bible classes.

The one taught by President Murray has had an average attendance of eight. The gymnasium bible class, taught by D. A. McPhie and T. E. Hazell has had an average of seven, while the evangelistic Bible class for non-Christian men has been attended on the average by twenty at each meeting. It was taught by A. C. LaBoyteaux, E. R. Taylor, F. C. Harder and others. This report and all the rest were accepted and filed.

Another very important branch of Y. M. C. A. work is the educational part and the new building has greatly increased the opportunities in this line. Before reading his report, Stephen Cahoone, chairman of the educational committee, awarded a number of certificates to members of the different classes for progress in study and faithful attendance at class. As the different courses are completed, diplomas will be given. The report told at length of the progress that has been made during the last year. A new mechanical course, lasting three years, has been introduced and was attended on the average, by twenty-two members. Eight of the members of this class passed the searching State examinations and qualified themselves for the State standing. The average attendance at the bookkeeping class was twelve, while the German class had an average attendance of seven. The Spanish class was organized in December with twelve members and continued with an average attendance of nine. Among the Y. M. C. A.'s of New Jersey, Plainfield's association stands second in the number of scholars in her educational department and third in the number of different subjects taught.

In the director's room a Bible reference of one hundred and fifty volumes has been opened but the regular library is practically useless. In the reading room there are forty-seven different magazines and papers on file. The report of the treasurer, H. O. Newman, was encouraging. It showed that the year had been started with a balance of $22.58 in the treasury. The sum of $6,518.85 has been received during the year, about one-third of which comes from the membership dues and the rest from rents, subscriptions and the like, making a total of $6,541.43. The expenses of the association have been $6,523.52, leaving a balance of $17.91 in the treasury. There is, however, an indebtedness of $500, which is over balanced by assests of about $900 from unpaid dues, subscriptions and rents. President Murray then made a short statement regarding the building debt which has been reduced to about $11,000, less the allowance on the property of the association to be given for the extension of Watchung avenue.

President Murray, as head of the association, made a general report on the association during the last year and it was listened to with great interest. His report was as follows:

One of the signs of the times is the growing consciousness on the part of men that "No man liveth to himself." Societies for improving the condition of the poor, builders of model tenement houses, numberless vacation funds and similar movements, even among men not professedly Christians, are proving the truth of Drummond's statement that the great factor in life today is "the struggle for the life of others." And in no department of society is this truer today than among that most promising of all classes, young men. Our own Association is a part of the great movement, and we have labored on through another year trying to show that we are our brothers' keeper. We are conscious of coming far short of what might have been done, but we feel that we can render a good report to the many kind friends who have made this work possible.

This report covers our first full year in our new building, and we believe that the enlarged work accomplished and the larger number of men influenced for good, justified the investment of so much money.

The treasurer's report will, of course, show an increased expense, the total being $6,523.52, of this sum $2,756 was received from membership dues, the balance from rents and subscriptions.

We have demonstrated, too, that a building such as ours is useful, if not necessary, in a city as large as Plainfield. This is clearly shown by the number of Christian and philanthropic organizations which have found here a convenient meeting place. The following, not connected with our work, have used the building, without charge, during the past year: Children's Home managers, King's Daughters, Medical Society of Union county, Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union, Parliamentary Club, electricity class for young men, pastors of the city, Princeton Alumni, Yale Alumni, Relief Association, Rasores Club, Town Improvement Society, and various unions and committees of the Y. P. S. C. E. Some twenty entertainments have been given in our hall, of which six were given by us to our members without charge.

The report of the educational department is to be reported by Mr. Stephen Cahoone, the chairman of that committee, but for completeness I may say that five classes were conducted in penmanship, mechanical course, German and Spanish stenography, bookkeeping, and with a total enrollment of 113 students.

In like manner, the religious work of the Association, the most important of all our work, and without which we would have no reason for our existence, will be reported by Mr. LaBoyteaux, the chairman of the religious work committee. We have been deficient in one department of this work, viz: Bible study. Our Association has had an enviable reputation in the past for training Christian workers, and this has been due to the large place the Bible has had in our work. During the past year, for some reason unknown to us, it has been exceedingly difficult to organize classes for Bible study. In this connection it is interesting to remember that within the past few years, through our efforts, eight men have been led to devote their lives to some form of Christian work.

Work for boys continues to be an unsolved problem, though the solution has been manfully attempted this year. We have a junior department with ninety-seven members who have their own rooms and who are entitled to the privileges of the gymnasium twice a week. Twenty-eight religious meetings have been conducted for the boys, with an average attendance of thirty-three: a Bible class was also held part of the year, and also a class in vocal music. But this is very little, when we think of the vast possibilities locked up in the boys. We propose, however, to keep at it, and perhaps it is not a bad sign that we are not satisfied with what we have done.

For the first time in our history we have had the services of a trained physical director, and the wisdom of having such a man has been demonstrated. Under Mr. MacPhie, evening classes were organized to meet the needs of the members, classes for boys were conducted and a very successful business men's class met three times a week at 5:30 p. m. Besides the class work we were able, through the bicycle section, to arrange a number of good runs to neighboring towns, and through a committee on baseball a successful nine was maintained. A bowling team was also put in the field. Mr. MacPhie left us in March to fill a larger field in Massachusetts, and we consider ourselves fortunate in having been able to secure the temporary services of one of our members, Mr. C. W. Nichols. We have engaged C. E. A. Haywood, of the Springfield school, as physical director, his services to begin September 1st.

As was expected, the gymnasium has been the most attractive part of the building, and the bathing and bowling facilities have been duly appreciated. The city authorities have recognized us by sending some prospective policemen to undergo a physical examination.

Owning our own hall, we have been able for the first time to give our members, free of cost, a series of seven elevating entertainments. We can do but little to attract young men away from the degrading shows which all too frequently visit Plainfield, but there is a chance to do something and we propose at least to make the effort. This year we were materially aided by one of our public-spirited citizens who believes in this work and who bore the expenses connected with the course.

The work of the reception committee has been enlarged with the enlargement of our home, and the members of that committee have taken advantage of every opportunity to show young men that we believe in sociability and amusement. In this work success has attended the committee's efforts because of the unselfish service rendered by the ladies. They have ministered in the spirit of John the Baptist, and their aid has done much to make the building homelike and attractive.

We have done some missionary work during the year in assisting the Association at Somerville and Westfield. We have also assisted at various district conventions and at the State convention, and had representatives at Mr. Moody's Northfield School. As an Association we have contributed to the State work and to the International committee and the Springfield school.

But it is almost impossible to put on paper the various items of work which the Association undertakes. Much of it can never be written in the language of the earth. Of course a large part of this is personal work and falls on the general secretary. He is generally the one through whom the Association touches needy men. This is especially true

A FESTIVAL OF BLOSSOMS

SUCCESSFUL EVENT OF THE WILLING CIRCLE, KING'S DAUGHTERS.

A Barren Room Changed Into a Place of Beauty, Graced By Charming Girls, and Filled With Good Things.

As the weary commuter made his way up Park avenue last evening he was attracted to one of the stores in the Hart building, just above Fourth street, by the sound of merry voices inside. A peep in the door disclosed a bower of flowers with charming waitresses flitting about serving ice-cream and cake to the many patrons.

It was the "Festival of Blossoms" given by the Advance Circle of King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church. The windows were filled with potted plants, while the room itself was handsomely decorated with pink and white bunting, draped and festooned about the ceiling and chandelier, and a profusion of wild flowers and vines, arranged in bouquets and fastened to the curtains and snowy table cloths. Pink shades on the electric lights and the piano and banquet lamplight softed the bright light and added to the charming effect. The lemonade table, in one corner, was a perfect bower; Miss Katherine Glen was in charge. The other large table was devoted to home-made cakes and candies. Mrs. William E. MacClymont and Mrs. Garretson looked after the candies, while Mrs. W. A. Coddington and Mrs. McClintock had charge of the delicious cakes.

The ice-cream deserved special praise as it, too, was home-made and not to be excelled. It was made by Mrs. Joseph Haynes, while she and Mrs. Howard A. Pope, president of the Circle, looked after the serving of it. The waitresses were the Misses Etta Blish, Aletta Bedford, Pansy Herring, Cressie Maag, Estelle Smalley, Mabel Pruden, Lizzie Bittenbender and Estelle Bittenbender. Miss Blish had a general superintendency of this department. The potted plants in the windows were sold by Mrs. Jennie Abbott and Miss Scarborough.

The money raised is to go for the benefit of the city nurse. The decorating was done by the members of the Circle, with Mrs. W. A. Coddington, as chairman. E. R. Hazen and Joseph Haynes also kindly assisted in preparing the room.

HONOR FOR A. SALTZMAN.

Chosen President of the State Exempt Firemen's Association.

A distinguished honor was conferred on Plainfield this morning at the State convention of the Exempt Firemen's Association in session at Hackensack, when Auguste Saltzman was chosen president of that organization for the ensuing year. The following delegates were present from this city: T. O. Doane, D. W. Littell, Eugene Laing, Wm. A. Woodruff and G. Thorn.

Keep the Dogs In.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Do not the people of Plainfield think that they may some day have an experience with mad dogs, the same that the citizens of West Hoboken are having now? This city is full of dogs, mostly curs, running loose. Plainfield is being beautified by the fences being taken down, and those who have nice flower beds are much annoyed by the dogs. Why are they allowed to run loose to destroy flower beds or to bite some one? Subscriber.

A Bicyclist Hurt.

Edward Maynard, the Park avenue barber, had a serious fall from his wheel last evening which confined him to his home today. He was riding near Scotch Plains with George Randolph, who blacks boots in Maynard's tonsorial parlors, when Randolph's rear wheel and Maynard's front wheel came together with the usual result. Maynard was thrown and his hands and knees badly cut and bruised.

Mrs. Ballington Booth to Talk.

Mrs. Ballington Booth, of the American Volunteers, will address a parlor meeting to be held on Thursday afternoon, May 28th, at 3:30 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Francis Wood, 313 Franklin place.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

RIDING WITHOUT LIGHTS

AN UNLUCKY CORNER FOR WHEELMEN LAST EVENING.

Seven Bicycle Collisions Occurred at the Corner of Park Avenue and Fourth Street—Machines Were Wrecked.

The need of an ordinance compelling bicycle riders to attach lanterns to their wheels at night was very evident last evening when seven accidents occurred in the vicinity of Fourth street and Park avenue, all of which were caused by one of the riders not carrying a lantern and then attempting to "scorch."

The most exciting of all was the collision between the Punnett Companion and a colored "scorcher" without a light. F. L. C. Martin and ex-Judge W. A. Coddington were riding along the middle of Park avenue on the double machine with lamp lighted. Suddenly there was a crash and a colored individual, leaving his wheel in front of the Punnett, soared away to land on the roadbed with a sickening thud.

He had been hustling along Park avenue with head down and minus a lamp. His machine was badly wrecked while he was painfully bruised and cut. The Punnett and its riders were not injured in the slightest.

As Mr. Martin was a bicycle dealer, the unlucky colored rider suggested that Mr. Martin repair the damaged wheel, but the offer was declined with thanks.

The other tumbles were not very serious, usually resulting in bruises and a damaged front wheel. They were all caused by someone riding at a rattling pace without a light. Among the victims were Arthur Wills, Frank McInerny and Ralph Tolles.

Life on Bicycle Row, as that part of Park avenue is sometimes called, was quite lively, repairing men and wheels who came to grief in the neighborhood.

This morning, Frank Pangborn struck a sewer bump, while trying to evade a wheelwoman and his front rim suddenly became very tired and laid down, while Pangborn shot over the handle bars into space. He escaped with sundry bruises.

GRAND JURY FINISHED.

A Presentment Brought Against the Elizabeth Officials.

The Grand Jury completed its work this morning, and brought in three presentments, one against the officials of Elizabeth charging them with failure to enforce the observance of the Sunday laws. The presentment inclues Mayor Rankin, Chief of Police George C. Tenny and others.

Police Justice Neil was presented for exacting inadequate bail for serious cases and an excessive bail for lesser crimes. As an instance was cited the bail of $26,000 in the case of John Max Reiner, editor of the Herald, accused of libel, as oppressive. The Justice was also censured for failing to send the docket of the Police Court to the Grand Jury. The tax collectors of Westfield township were presented for the illegal collection of taxes. Forty-two indictments were found.

Burned His Hand.

W. S. Benton, the cashier for A. M. Griffin, met with a painful accident recently while lighting a match. He held in his hand a box of matches which can only be ignited on the box. He struck one and the spark flew into the box setting the rest of them in a blaze. The result was that his left hand was terribly burned in the palm and he is now unable to use it.

Entertained the Firemen.

David Bodine, of Somerset street, entertained the members of Warren Engine Co., No. 1, at his home last evening, in a most pleasant manner. A bountiful supper was served which all thoroughly enjoyed. Owing to the illness of Mrs. Bodine the programme was slightly changed.

Special Excursion Rates.

On May 24, 25 and 26 the Central Railroad of New Jersey will sell special excursion tickets to Pittsburg, Pa., good to return till May 30, inclusive, on account of the National Convention of the Prohibition party, for $10.50 for round trip from Plainfield.

Purchased a Residence.

J. S. Schoonmaker, of West Eighth street, has purchased the residence of C. T. Kissam, of West Eighth street. Extensive alterations will be made and the house will not be occupied before next spring.

To See Practical Work.

The elm tree committee of the Town Improvement Association will visit Central Park in New York, tomorrow, and witness the operation of the spraying apparatus of Prof. Southwick.

—The Lotus Glee Club concert will be held on Monday, May 25th.

AGAINST THE WOODMAN'S AX.

Jersey Men and Women Who Want the Forest Interests Preserved.

Prof. Halstead, of Rutgers College, will speak at the meeting of the State Forestry Association in the Casino tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The High School chorus will sing and there will be a discussion. Many prominent scientists will be present. In the evening B. E. Fernow, Chief of Division of Forestry at Washington, D. C., will give a lecture at 8 o'clock. In the lobby will be an exhibition of photographs of injurious insects.

A chorus of between fifty and sixty pupils of the High School will sing at 4 o'clock under the leadership of I. W. Travell. Miss Mabel Maxson will accompany the chorus. The programme follows: "The Brave Old Oak"; "Voices of the Forest"; "Song of the Skylark"; "Hail Columbia."

The prominent guests who will be present, and where they will be entertained are as follows: H. I. Budd, Mt. Holly, Commissioner of Public Roads, by D. W. Pond; William H. Whitting, editor of The Times, of Philadelphia, by Craig A. Marsh; Mrs. A. J. Brooks, of Camden, by Mrs. Frances Wood; F. R. Meier, of Mahwah, by Walter E. Stewart, of 526 West Seventh street; Miss Susan W. Lippincott, of Cinnaminson, by A. M. Powell, of East Sixth street; Prof. J. C. Smock, State Geologist, of Trenton, by Mrs. Dexter Tiffany; B. E. Fernow, of Washington, D. C., and Prof. John Gifford, of May's Landing, by Mrs. E. D. McCarthy; Joseph Jones, of Camden, by John Dalziel; Prof. Halstead, of New Brunswick, by Mrs. C. L. Case; Hon. Augustus W. Cutler, of Morristown, by J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street. Other distinguished guests will be entertained by B. J. Shreve, Alex. Gilbert, W. D. Miller, Wilson Smith, Mr. Middledith and L. V. F. Randolph.

The committee of arrangements trust that there will be a generous response from the Plainfield people to entertain the out-of-town guests.

Friday the delegates will take a trip to the Palisades on one of the Pennsylvania Railroad tugs which has been offered free by the company.

ORATORICAL CONTESTS.

Prizes in Gold to Be Offered for the Best Declamation.

The weekly drill of the cadets will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in the school yard under the direction of Captain George Edwards. The company feel the absence of their captain, Volney F. Green, who has been confined to his home for the past week with illness. In Captain Green's absence First Lieutenant George P. Smith has taken his place. The company will parade on Decoration Day. A full attendance is expected.

On Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock a special meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi Society was held for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for the coming oratorical contest to be held in the near future. Wilbur F. Cornwell and Charles Noble were appointed a committee empowered to make necessary preparations. The prize to be contested for is one consisting of $10 in gold, and is offered for the best original declamation produced by any young man of the school. The prize is offered by two young men, graduates of the High School and former members of the society.

The senior class have completed their advance work in Geometry, and are now making a thorough review of the book in preparation of the final examination on that subject. Every scholar is busy brushing up and scraping off the rust from their minds in order to meet their examinations with confidence.

Yesterday morning the school spent some time in practicing the music which will be sung at the meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association in the Y. M. C. A. Hall tomorrow afternoon. Governor Griggs will be present and deliver an address.

SOON TO PASS THEIR THIRD YEAR.

Sons of Veterans Talking of Having an Anniversary Picnic.

The members of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, at their meeting last evening, talked over and completed their arrangements for the celebration of Decoration Day. On Sunday evening next the Camp will accompany the G. A. R. to the Congregational church, at which time Rev. Charles L. Goodrich will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

The question of celebrating the third anniversary was discussed, and it is quite likely that a trolley trip will be arranged to some convenient point where a picnic will be held. The affair will take more definite shape a little later on. The Camp is now in a flourishing condition and is growing. After the meeting the firing squad had a drill.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

REPORTS MADE ABOUT THE PROGRESS OF THE CAUSE.

Committees Appointed to Look After the Various Departments of Work—Some of the Prominent Women Present.

The State Woman's Suffrage Association met yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. building, at which time a good sized audience was present. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall presided, and sitting beside her were Dr. M. D. Hussey, of this city, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Irving Angels, of Passaic, recording secretary. After the reading of the minutes, reports were given by the delegates to the National Convention held at Washington, last January. Dr. M. D. Hussey and Mrs. Laura H. VanCise, of Summit, were the delegates. Their reports were both very encouraging and interesting. This was followed with a report by Dr. Hussey on the passage of the school suffrage amendment by the Legislature. Mrs. A. B. S. Pond and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell gave excellent reports of the progress being made in Colorado and California along the line of woman suffrage. Chairmen for the various committees were appointed as follows: School Suffrage, Mrs. Rebecca Hawes, Hohokus; Parlor Meetings, Mrs. Madge S. MacClary, Rahway; Laws Relating to Women, Miss Mary Philbrook, Jersey City; Distribution of Literature, Mrs. A. B. S. Pond, Plainfield; Suffrage Work in the W.C.T.U., Miss Laura E. Holmes, Clarksboro.

The following membership committees were also appointed: June, Mrs. S. F. Haff, Mrs. A. B. S. Pond, Plainfield; July, Mrs. A. C. Child, Elizabeth, Mrs. Rebecca Hawes, Hohokus; August, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Plainfield, Mrs. Esther M. Poole, Metuchen; September, Mrs. Draper, Dr. M. D. Hussey, Plainfield; October, Mrs. Irving Angels, Passaic, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Plainfield; November, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall. Plainfield. Dr. Hussey was continued on the committee of county organization.

It was stated that New Jersey had contributed $150 to the national organization fund, also that the State Association had received $50 from the Union County Association. Miss S. W. Lippincott reported the organization of an association at Moorestown, which was in a flourishing condition.

Among some of the out of town delegates present at the meeting were Mrs. J. D. DeWitt, of Bellville, president of the Essex County Association; Mrs. A. Pond, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Ella B. Carter, Newark; Mrs. E. S. Wilde, of Glen Ridge; Miss Mack, of Newark; Miss S. M. Watts, secretary of the Essex County Association. The meeting was brought to a close about 5 o'clock, and an adjournment made to December.

The case of Pearson against Bohl was adjourned till next Tuesday, owing to the illness of the plaintiff.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

PRAISES THE TURKS

Clara Barton Speaks in High Terms of the Sultan and Porte.

HAVE AIDED IN THE RELIEF WORK

All Her Requests Granted and Suggestions Favorably Acted Upon—Government Offers To Supply Seed to the People in Need of It.

Washington, May 20.—Secretary Olney has received a letter from Miss Clara Barton, in which, referring to rumors that she was prohibited from distributing relief in Asia Minor except under direction and control of the Turkish authorities and from lists of persons furnished by Turkish officials, she emphatically denies that any members or officials of the Turkish government have ever tried in any way to direct or control her distributions. She adds: "Sir Philip Currie has done and is doing splendid work in facilitating the labors and distributions of the heroic missionaries; the Anglo-American operations, through consuls and missionaries, and in a general way our own efforts. But our greatest successes are due to the untiring efforts and sound judgment of our legation officers, through whom we are working, and also for the reason that both palace and porte have confidence in the singleness of our purpose and the integrity of our personnal. As the Turkish government is thoroughly convinced that there is no political significance attached to our visit; that we have no sectarian interests to serve and certainly no radical prejudices, there have been no requests which they have not favorably acted upon. Our every desire has received respectful attention, careful consideration and cordial concession.

Kindly Interest of the Government.

"The latest evidence of kindly interest in our work, shown at both palace and porte, has just been brought to us by Mr. Garigulo, first dramogan of our legation, and is as follows: 'If our men find that the people are in need of seed for planting, they are to apply to the governor of the place for it. If he cannot furnish it they are to telegraph us, and upon our request the porte will at once issue the necessary orders for the seed. In going from place to place, if our men find people who are anxious to plant their fields but are afraid to leave their homes for that purpose, they are to inform us of such by telegraph, and upon our request ample protection will be ordered by the porte.'"

TO ABOLISH HOUSE OF LORDS.

Formation of an Advanced Radical Section in the Commons.

London, May 20.—A manifesto, signed by Henry Labouchere and eighteen other radical members of the house of commons, has been issued. It announces the formation in the house of an advanced radical section, which will devote itself to promoting radicalism among the voters of the country, primarily centering its efforts on the abolition of the house of lords and generally to make parliament a democratic body.

No Pardon for McKane.

Albany, May 20.—The statement was made at the executive chamber last evening that there were no grounds for the revival of the report that Gov. Morton was giving serious consideration to the pending applications for the pardon of John Y. McKane, who is in Sing Sing prison. Nothing has developed of late in the McKane case to warrant the belief that it is likely to receive executive attention.

Indicted for Diamond Smuggling.

Philadelphia, May 20.—The grand jury in the United States district court has brought in true bills of indictment against Herman Keck, a diamond merchant of Cincinnati, Capt. Frank Loeswitz of the American line steamer Rhynland and "other persons to the grand jury unknown," on the charge of attempting to smuggle 563 diamonds into this port.

Postmaster Nominations Confirmed.

Washington, May 20.—The senate has confirmed the following postmaster nominations: Maine—F. N. Noyes, Gardiner; James Hudson, Guilford; S. B. Guthrie, Gorham; C. E. Parker, Phillips. Rhode Island—J. H. Keslin, East Greenwich.

Free Silver and Boies.

Dubuque, Ia., May 20.—The representatives of the democracy of the Hawkeye state in convention to-day will declare for free silver and present Horace Boies as Iowa's candidate for the presidential nomination.

Disbarred Lawyer's Appeal.

Erie, Pa., May 20.—The supreme court of Pennsylvania is in session here, and among the appeals before the court is that of William Shoemaker, the disbarred Holmes lawyer of Philadelphia.

Cotton Mills to Shut Down.

Salem, Mass., May 20.—The Naumkeg cotton mills have posted notices that from June 1 until further notice No. 5 mill will be closed, and that the other departments will run but four days a week.

North's Horses and Dogs To Be Sold.

London, May 20.—All the horses that belonged to the late Col. North, with the exception of Iddesleigh, and all the dogs, with the exception of Fullerton, will be sold at auction in July.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, May 20.—Treasury gold reserve is down to $112,310,106, $36,900 being the withdrawals yesterday.

AFFAIRS BEFORE CONGRESS.

Immigration Bills in the House—Nothing Important in the Senate.

Washington, May 20.—The house is again to-day considering the several bills reported from the committee on immigration looking to the imposing of additional restrictions upon foreigners desiring to settle in this country, but it is not probable, from present indications, that any of them will be passed. Speeches were made by Messrs. Morse, rep., Mass., in favor of the bill imposing an educational test; W. A. Stone, rep., Pa., in favor of the bill requiring consular inspection at the port of departure; and Buck, dem., La., in opposition to any additional restrictions whatever. The house has confirmed the right of W. C. Owens, dem., to the seat he occupies as a representative from the seventh district of Kentucky, which had been contested by George Denny, rep. The message of the president vetoing the bill to pension Caroline D. Mowatt was laid before the house and referred to the committee on invalid pensions. In his veto message the president said: "If she is to be again pensioned because her second husband does not survive her, the transaction has more the complexion of an adjustment of a governmental insurance on the life of the second husband than the allowance of a pension on just and reasonable grounds." There is nothing of general importance before the senate today. Only two general appropriation bills remain to be acted upon—the fortification and the deficiency bills—and one of these may be taken up late this afternoon.

VETOED BY GOV. GRIGGS.

Sixty-nine Bills Passed by the Last Legislature Killed.

Trenton, May 20.—Gov. Griggs has filed in the state library sixty-nine bills which were passed by the last legislature. This action is of the same effect as a veto and the bills are dead. Among them are: Committing the state to an appropriation of $270,000 for an armory at Newark; providing for the establishment of a colony for epileptics; prohibiting the sale or gift of cigarettes to minors; providing for an asylum for the blind at Englishtown; Wildes' handpicking huckleberry bill; Voorhees' nationalization bill; Sharp's history bill; providing that honorably discharged veterans should be given preference in the matter of employment on public works; requiring non-residents to take out licenses for hunting game in this state.

TO SECURE A GREAT METEORITE.

Negotiations for a Steamer To Conduct Peary to Greenland.

St. Johns, N. F., May 20.—Negotiations are being conducted here by Capt. John Bartlett, commander of the arctic steamer Kite last summer, to produce a steamer to take Lieut. Peary, the famous explorer, north next month on an expedition to secure the immense iron meteorite lying near cape York, Melville bay. Lieut. Peary tried to bring the meteorite home last year, but did not have apparatus strong enough. He will take a complete outfit this time. The project for another expedition under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania is believed to have collapsed.

MOWATT PENSION BILL VETO.

Congressman Sulloway Would Put the President on Short Rations.

Washington, May 20.—Caroline D. Mowatt, the beneficiary of the pension bill vetoed yesterday by the president, is a constituent of Congressman Sulloway, and resides at Manchester, N. H. The congressman has sent her the following telegram: "I regret to inform you that President Cleveland has vetoed the bill giving you a pension. In a Christian spirit, and with a desire to create within him a spark of patriotism, I wish for the remainder of his life he might receive such treatment and rations as our soldiers had at Andersonville."

His Remains Found in the Ruins.

Watertown, N. Y., May 20.—The remains of Martin Cheeseman, who perished while removing goods from a burning house at Gouverneur yesterday, were found in the ruins of the building several hours later. He was 87 years old and leaves a wife and five children.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

Financial Affairs of the Presbyterian Mission Boards.

NOT ON THE VERGE OF BANKRUPTCY

Debts of the Home and Foreign Boards Passed over to the Million-Dollar-Fund Committee—Banks Willing To Advance Loans.

New York, May 20.—Detail statements of the financial affairs of the Presbyterian boards of home and foreign missions have just been given out by the treasurers of the two institutions. These statements come properly before the general assembly which meets at Saratoga to-morrow, but their publication is made to-day because of the widespread interest created by the efforts of the Memorial Fund committee to raise a million dollars to lift the back indebtedness of the boards. Last year the foreign board reported a debt of $174,770.54, while the debt of the home board was more than twice that sum, viz: $364,850.05. Added to this were debts of other boards, making a total deficit in the treasuries of the church boards of charities of $600,000. Dr. Robert, in speaking of the home board's debt, stated that the contributions to the treasury had fallen off so materially as to cripple the board in its work of the year. He declared that it was impossible to borrow another cent to meet the wants of the board. The idea created by this statement in the public mind was that the two great charity boards of the Presbyterian boards were practically bankrupt. This idea was strengthened by the criticisms of the action of the boards in erecting an office building at Fifth avenue and Twentieth street, upon which a great mortgage was placed and a great charge incurred for interest and taxes paid and rentals lost.

Brighter View of the Case.

The statement given out to-day brightens this view of the case considerably. At the end of the year the treasurers of the boards wrote off their deficits, passed their debts over to the million-dollar-fund committee, and started the year 1896 with clean accounts. The estimated expenses of the new year were greatly reduced and the boards and secretaries started in to meet the conditions with hope and spirit. They moved into the new building, which was completed last year, and made urgent calls upon the churches for help. At the same time the million-dollar-committee made a great effort to gather in enough money to clear off the burden of back debts which rested upon the resources and property of the boards. A big meeting at Carnegie hall, at which President Cleveland presided, was arranged, and similar efforts in other cities were made. The result is that little more than one-third ($350,000), of the sum set before the million-dollar-fund committee has been raised. Of this sum $92,357.58 was passed to credit of the foreign board's deficit, leaving the sum to be carried as back debt by that board $76,770.46. The home board having a larger debt received a large portion of the million-dollar fund, or $199,750.10. Other contributions reduced this back debt to the sum of $169,509.51. These two sums of back debt will be reduced by further payments of $25,000 and $50,000 in round numbers respectively, but that will come in next year's accounts. They stand to-day as stated: back debt for the two boards about a quarter of a million dollars.

Foreign Board's Surplus.

The foreign board's receipts for the year ending April 30, 1896, reach the sum of $885,391.78, a gain of $19,682.41 over last year's receipts for the same period. The reduced expenditures of the year enabled the treasurer of the board to close his books with a surplus of $30,535.32, which, subtracted from the back debt, reduces that sum below $50,000 nominally and $25,000 actually. In this connection Treasurer Bullis states "that there never has been a time when the pay of a missionary, charges for transportation or other debts of the board has been delayed five minutes by the officers. Nor has there been a time in the history of the board when it was not possible for the treasury to avail itself of credit with the New York banks to the extent of an extra $100,000 if that sum was required. Our bills at the end of the earth are received and cashed as readily as those of the best Wall street bankers."

Schofield Discharged from Custody.

New York, May 20.—William Schofield, 55 years old, the Armonk hotel keeper, who was arrested on the 16th inst. on a charge of having murdered his wife, has been discharged, there having been no evidence to implicate him.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896 Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

THE SHAKERS' IDEAS OF MEDICINE.

Now a days when a man goes to his doctor, he is usually told that he has some unheard of disease with a long name, and when he leaves the office he does not know whether it is St. Vitus Dance or consumption that is gradually undermining his health.

It is therefore refreshing to talk with the Shakers, for their very simplicity commands confidence and respect, and we have the further satisfaction of knowing that they have devoted themselves to the study of disease and its cure for more than a hundred years.

The venerable old man whom the writer saw was only too glad to discuss his pet subject. He said that strange as it might seem, very few doctors realized that three-quarters of the most prevalent diseases were all attributable to faulty digestion.

He then went on to say that a child of average intelligence knows that putrid meat or decaying vegetables are poisonous, and must be avoided, and yet these same foods, even if taken into the stomach in the freshest possible condition soon decompose unless digested and absorbed.

In such cases the resulting poisons enter the system, when aches and pains, weakness and debility soon follow as a natural consequence.

It was recognition of this that led the Shakers to devote their energies to the perfection of a product which would stimulate the digestive organs and assist them to perform their proper work.

The first symptom of disordered digestion is loss of appetite, and the Shaker Digestive Cordial is wonderfully efficient in supplying any deficiency in this respect, at the same time it relieves all distress after eating. Furthermore, as was carefully explained by our venerable friend, it is absolutely harmless.

Better evidence of the Shakers' confidence in it could not be found, than in the fact that they have placed 10c sample bottles in the hands of all druggists, assured that if once tried it will produce such immediate and marked benefit that it will be continued.

We are trying to better this business by giving better dry goods, better serving, better everything. It is to our gain to serve you right and should there be a wrong, we are always ready with your money back if you want it.

STARTING A NAVY

Cubans Believed To Be in Search of a Gunboat.

OFFER MADE FOR A PILOT STEAMER

The City of Richmond, Now Being Overhauled at Baltimore, Probably Another Filibuster—Spanish General Vicuna Dies of Yellow Fever.

Baltimore, May 20.—Capt. John Hebb, president of the Maryland Pilots' association, has been approached by a person interested in Cuban affairs with an offer for the association's steamer Pilot. It is suspected the Cuban revolutionary party would like to get her to fit out as a gunboat, for which purpose she is admirably suited. She is practically a small ocean steamship, roomy and speedy. By plating her with armor she could be easily converted into a formidable gunboat. The Pilots' association will sell her if enough money is offered for her. The steamer City of Richmond, now being overhauled here for alleged freight business among the Florida keys, is another vessel which is under suspicion. It would not surprise many if some morning soon it is found that she has slipped off during the night for the "Florida freight business." Considerable anxiety is felt here for the Baltimore steamship Laurada, which sailed over a week ago from New York with two young Baltimore society men aboard bound for Cuba to aid the insurgents.

In Memory of Jose Marti.

New York, May 20.—The council of revolutionary clubs held a public meeting last night in Chickering hall in momory of the death of Jose Marti, the Cuban patriot, who a year ago yesterday was killed by the Spaniards at Dos Rios. The hall was well filled with Cuban patriots and sympathizers with the struggle for liberty. There were many pretty dark-eyed girls in the audience who heartily applauded every allusion made to the memory of the dead patriot. The addresses were in Spanish.

Gen. Vicuna Dies with Yellow Fever.

Havana, May 20.—Gen. Vicuna was attacked by yellow fever a few days ago, and despite every effort sank rapidly and died last night.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Over 1,000 Visitors at Asbury Park To Take Part in the Anniversaries.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 20.—Something over a thousand visitors are here to take part in the Baptist anniversaries, which begin to-day and last a week. Two thousand others are expected before to-morrow. The new committee rooms which Senator Bradley has constructed under the Auditorium were thronged last avening. The local reception committee had its hands full and twenty young ladies were kept busy enrolling names of delegates and visitors. The American Baptist Publication society convention was called to order by President Crozer at 10 o'clock this morning. There will be reports of committees and other routine work and an address on "Denominational Literature." Young peoples' hour and "Sunday School Work" will be the features of the afternoon session. In the evening the Rev. James Larsen of Michigan, Frank D. Hall of North Dakota and Rev. S. N. Vass of Georgia, will be the speakers. The Publication society will give way to the American Baptist Missionary union on Friday and reports and discussions on Missions and mission work at home and abroad will continue until Monday, when the American Baptist Educational society will celebrate its eighth anniversary with a series of meetings extending over two days.

Confirmed, Then Reconsidered.

Washington, May 20.—The senate in executive session last evening confirmed the nomination of Dominic I. Murphy to be commissioner of pensions and then reconsidered its action, because of opposition to the nomination of Gen. Dana to be first commissioner of pensions. There is no opposition to Mr. Murphy and his nomination will soon be confirmed.

Concession to Americans in Corea.

Washington, May 20.—John B. Sill, United States minister to Corea, has reported to the state department that a concession to build and operate a railroad between Seoul, the capital, and Chemulpo, its seaport, has been granted to an American syndicate. Mr. Sill says the Japanese government acted friendly towards Americans during the negotiations.

Punishments in the Navy.

Washington, May 20.—After careful examination the president has approved the report of a naval board appointed to prepare a code of uniform punishment for naval offenses, and hereafter the navy will enjoy with the army the advantages of uniformity in the sentences that may he imposed by court-martial for offenses of a similar character.

Ohio Democrats Instruct for Free Silver.

Springfield, O., May 20.—The democratic convention of the seventh congressional district adopted without a dissenting vote a resolution instructing the delegates sent to Chicago to vote for free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 without regard to the action of any other nation.

To Be Elevated to the Peerage.

London, May 20.—In the distribution of birthday honors upon the occasion of the queen's birthday, May 24, the following gentlemen will be elevated to the peerage: The Marquis of Granby, Right Hon. Edward Heneage and Col. Edward Donald Malcolm of the British army, retired.

FORESTS IN FLAMES

The Losses Around Sandwich Will Run into the Thousands.

CRANBERRY BOGS PROBABLY RUINED

Great Destruction in the Adirondacks—Upwards of Thirty Fires Raging and Many Costly Cottages and Summer Hotels in Danger.

Sandwich, Mass., May 20.—The terrible forest fire which devastated such a large amount of property in and around Sandwich only a month ago, was at the time considered the worst ever heard of on the cape, but the Tremont conflagration which started at Kelly's saw mill Monday afternoon has surpassed even that terrific fire in the amount of damage done to property. Starting at the above point, it was driven by a northwest wind at a terrific rate in the direction af Parker's mills and then toward White Island pond and Half Way pond, the most valuable cranberry land in the world at present. It has covered an area of land more than twenty miles long and from three to six miles in width, and totally destroyed an immense amount of valuable woodland. The loss cannot be estimated with any degree of accuracy to-day, as the men sent into the cranberry district to flood the bogs have not yet returned and it is feared that they have had hard work to escape the fury of the flames with their lives. The big trees and thick underbrush have had no rain to moisten them for months and have burned like kindling. No reports have yet been received of any lives lost. A number of dwellings have been destroyed. The loss to cranberry bogs alone may reach hundreds of thousands of dollars and this would mean want to many homes which are wholly dependent on the cranberry business for support. The thunder storm which came up last evening about ended the disastrous conflagration.

Lancaster's Fire Out.

Clinton, Mass., May 20.—The extensive forest fire which commenced Monday morning and raged in the vicinity of Spectacle pond is now about out. The Lancaster fire department got it under control after it had destroyed the houses, barns, hennery, etc., on the Samuel Rugg place. Between 2,000 and 3,000 acres of woodland was burned over, including a large amount of valuable sprout land. The loss will be well in the thousands. It was the biggest fire that Lancaster ever experienced, and in fighting the flames several hundred gave their services.

Still Burning at Calais, Me.

Calais, Me., May 20.—There was some sprinkling of rain last night, but the forest fires reported from here are still burning and the damage will be heavy.

FIRES IN ADIRONDACKS.

The Flames Spreading Rapidly and Much Valuable Property Is in Danger.

Gouverneur, N. Y., May 20.—Forest fires are raging to an alarming extent along the edge of the Adirondacks. At night the southern sky is aglow and upwards of thirty fires are reported. The fires have not only cleared the ground but have burned down into the muck to a depth of three feet in some places, and are likely to break out again at most any time during the summer. In some of the burning districts there has been a general call for men at $2 per day to fight the fires, and employment would be given to many more than can be secured. The wind was terrific yesterday, and swept the fires through the woods to a considerable distance. The worst fire reported is near Oskegatchie, three miles from Star lake, and unless it is checked is threatens to reach that popular summer resort and fears are entertained for many cottages and the costly hotels there. Several residences have already been burned.

German Catholic Congress.

Pittsburg, May 20.—The open meeting of the German Catholic congress of Pennsylvania, held in Carnegie hall last evening, was largely attended. Letters from Cardinals Gibbons and Satolli, conveying blessings and good wishes were read. Resolutions setting forth the aims and objects of the Catholic congress were unanimously adopted. The "Te Deum" closed the exercises. After mass this morning a closing business session was held and at 2 o'clock this afternoon the delegates will be banquetted.

Concert Master Clifford Schmidt Dead.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 20.—Clifford Schmidt, who was for a number of years concert master under Thomas, Damrosch and Seidl, died at the Seney hospital last night from injuries received Saturday evening by striking his head against a trolley pole. He was born in San Francisco in 1861, and studied the violin under Messart in Paris, and in the conservatory at Leipsic. He also received lesson for two years from Joachim in Berlin.

Mt. Vernon Won over by Democrats.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., May 20.—The municipal election in this city yesterday resulted in a victory for the democrats, who elected their entire ticket, reversing the normal republican majority of 150. The victory for the democrats is ascribed to the Raines law and local issues.

Mrs. Nicholas Hussey Dead.

Albany, May 20.—Mrs. Nicholas J. Hussey, wife of Nicholas J. Hussey of the National Commercial bank of Albany and a sister of Eugene D. Wood, died here yesterday.

Bismarck's Famous Hound Dead.

Friedrichsruhe, May 20.—Prince Bismarck's famous hound Tyras II. died yesterday from old age.

Martin P. Grey, of Camden, has taken his seat as a Vice-Chancellor.

Be considerate of the overworked clerk and give him a half holiday on Saturday.—New York Press.

If nothing more, a grand fusilade of words is being conducted by McKinley's opponents, and all the while McKinley remains silent. Between the demands of the east and the west, widely divergent as they are on the vital money question, the Ohio Napoleon knows not which way to jump.

There is a vacant berth in the State Prison, and a half dozen men are after it. It is head centre keeper, made vacant through the death of Colonel Jacob VanHouten. Those contesting for it are ex-Chief of Police John Fitzgerald, of New Brunswick; ex-Assemblyman Jonathan Goble and ex-Assemblyman John F. Kerr, of Harrison.

There is trouble brewing in the Republican State Committee which is likely to crop out when the time comes to effect a permanent organization. Among many of the delegates there is a strong disposition to depose Franklin Murphy, of Newark, as the executive head, and in his place elect either John Kean or Elias S. Ward. Mr. Kean says he is in favor of the retention of Murphy, and yet if a change is really demanded, why "Barkis is willin'."

Among the bills passed by the last Legislature, and which fell by the wayside on their way to the Governor's desk to be approved or vetoed, was the yellow envelope bill of Assemblyman Reed. Assemblyman Codington's anti-cigarette bill, inspired by Mrs. Coard, of this city, was also sent to the death-chamber by the Governor's failing to act on it. The Governor did not allow his approval to go on much freak legislation, one notable example of which was the Wildes huckleberry bill.

The meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association at Plainfield on Thursday next will deserve much credit if it enlarges public interest in the growth of trees and the preservation of the forests of New Jersey. The great forest fires in South Jersey, which not only desolate the wooded districts, but threaten the towns and villages and destroy the isolated dwellings in their paths, will doubtless emphasize the words of the lecturers and add points to their arguments. These forestry meetings are usually very interesting, and without doubt the one at Plainfield will be of advantage and instruction to all who attend.—Elizabeth Journal.

KILLED ON THE RAIL.

A P. and R. Railroad Conductor Loses His Life at Bound Brook.

James Nolan, a conductor on a through freight train on the P. and R. Railroad, was killed last night at Bound Brook while cutting cars between the station and the roundhouse. As the first section passed him, he went to cross the track and caught his foot in the guard rail. He was unable to extract himself before the rear section run him down. His head was almost severed from the body and death resulted instantaneously. His body was shipped to Philadelphia where he and his wife resided. He was fifty-seven years of age and had been railroading for thirty years.

WALL CAME DOWN WITH A CRASH.

The Town Rooms Building at Westfield Wrecked, But No One Hurt.

A few minutes past 8 o'clock Monday night people in the vicinity of the corner of Broad and Elm streets, at Westfield, were startled by a loud crash, and the next instant the end of the brick Town Rooms building slid into the cellar that is being excavated for W. W. Gilby's new store.

The front part of the building, containing Gilby's store, was burned out sometime ago, and the walls were taken down. As the walls of the Town Rooms building seemed to be solid and in good condition the contractor did not think it necessary to take them down, and went on with the work of excavating the cellar for the new building without bracing the adjoining wall. The Township Committee has been holding meetings in the rooms as usual, the last meeting being held there Saturday night. Had the wall given way in the daytime, when the workmen were in the cellar, there would undoubtedly have been serious loss of life. As it was no one happened to be near the building at the time the wall gave way.

The heavy township safe, containing the township papers, is standing on the second floor, where the wall gave way, and the entire building is now so wrecked that it is dangerous to go near the safe.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Grace M. E. church will hold a strawberry festival Thursday and Friday evenings, June 4th and 5th.

FOR AND BY YOUNG MEN

of such phases of our work as securing situations for men, directing them to boarding houses, answering letters concerning them and giving them letters of introduction as they are leaving town. Numberless letters about young men have been received during the year and many men have been conversed with about personal religion. All who have shown any desire to lead a Christian life have been referred to the pastor of the church of their choice. The sick have been visited, letters written to doctors and medical aid secured, the hungry have been fed, the naked clothed, and the stranger has been received and made welcome. Places where young men are to be found, as in the different shops, have been visited many times in the interest of our work.

If it would not be out of place I might recite in this report some of the incidents which have occurred during the year, but we are striving to lift men for their own sakes, not for the sake of the Association, and therefore many things which have encouraged us must be left unsaid. But I can say that the selfsacrifice and devotion of Mr. Manning, our general secretary, has over and over again inspired us, and it is the earnest wish and prayer of all the officers of the Association that we may be able to keep him for many years to come.

The nominating committee made its report and presented the following nominations: President, W. D. Murray; vice-president, E. L. Bonny; recording secretary, John Valiant; treasurer, H. O. Newman; directors E. R. Ackerman, G. H. Batchelor, George A. Chapman, C. E. Boss, Stephen Cahoone, George S. Clay, George R. Cornwell, D. E. Titsworth, T. E. Hazell, A. C. LaBoyteaux, R. A. Radford and Nelson Runyon. They were all unanimously elected and President Murray made a few remarks on the year that had closed and the one that had begun. Many people, he said, had claimed that even when the Y. M. C. A. had their building they would not be able to run it successfully. The contrary has been conclusively proved. Mr. Murray spoke about his long term as president and remarked on the fact that the next year would make ten. This was, he thought, long enough for any man to hold the president's office. One of the members suggested that he make it twenty years and another that he give ten years notice before refusing re-election.

There was a general good feeling among the members, especially after hearing the reports, and after unanamously passing a vote of thanks to the newspapers of Plainfield for their many kindnesses, the meeting adjourned and there was a general handshaking among the members.

An exhibition of the work of the different classes in Plainfield and Newark and also of the wood and metal work from Cornell University, the same as is hoped to be introduced into the Y.M C.A., was made. The members visited this exhibit and spent some time examining them.

MURPHY WAS OUSTED.

Directors of a Collection Agency Depose the Manager, Who Protests.

Internal dissensions have sprung up in the New Jersey Merchantile Agency, which makes a business of collecting bad debts for merchants, and has offices in the Prudential Building, in Newark. The agency has a branch in this city. At a meeting of the concern on Monday John A. Murphy, the manager, was deposed.

The company was incorporated in January of this year by Murphy, Francis W. Knowles, a lawyer, and H. F. Freyling, a clerk in the latter's office. The capital stock was fixed at $25,000, the par value of shares being $100. Murphy was made manager, and Knowles counsel and treasurer.

Recently there were charges and counter-charges of unsatisfactory financial management between Murphy and Knowles, but these things were set at rest by a production of books and vouchers by both parties Still dissatisfaction existed, and Murphy's deposition came on Monday. He protested against this action, and appeared in the office yesterday ready for business as usual. Later he engaged counsel to contest the matter and secure what he claims as his rights.

Late yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Mr. Knowles, all of Murphy's effects were moved from the office into a corridor of the building, while a Police Headquarters detective stood near to prevent possible trouble. Murphy, however, did not put in an appearance.

—The case for debt of Anton Stebor against R. F. M. Chase, which was to have been given a hearing yesterday afternoon, was adjourned for a week.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

REVOLUTIONARY HEROES' GRAVES.

A Patriotic Society to Appropriately Distinguish Them by Marking.

It is proposed by the Elizabethtown Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution to appropriately mark the graves of Revolutionary heroes buried in Union County; and, as it is somewhat difficult to locate all these graves, the committee in charge of the matter requests that all descendants of soldiers or sailors of the Revolution, Members of Congress during that war, or signers of the Declaration of Independance, whose ancestors are buried in Union County, and the location of whose graves is known, will communicate with the committee, giving full names of such ancestors and location of their graves. This request is not confined to members of the G. A. R, but to all descendants of Revolutionary ancestors in this county. As the Society expects to mark some of the graves on July 4th of this year, and others as soon as possible thereafter, it is hoped that all who are interested will communicate without delay with the chairman of this committee, Walter B. Timms, 128 Catherine street, Elizabeth, N. J. The markers are designed especially for this object and have been used on some 1,500 graves in the State of Massachusetts.

MYSTERIES OF THE LOUVRE.

Vague Stories of Imperial Crime Reach the Outside World.

Everyone who has "done" the Louvre will remember the low-pitched and somewhat gloomy halls in which are stored the treasures of Egypt. Beneath these lie yet more darkly mysterious vaults, inaccessible to the public, though approached by a wide and handsome staircase, such as would lead one to imagine that it communicated with apartments of some importance. Yet one finds at the bottom nothing but broad passages disposed in the form of a cross, and without any sign whatever of door or window.

A recent examination, however, of the solid walls gives experts reason to believe that the masonry is more recent than the rest of the structure in this, the oldest portion of the fortress palace. M. Vaugneux, a well-known critic, believes that many of the bodies of victims killed in the revolution of 1830 were immured here, and that the government was afraid to reveal the facts when the remains of their comrades were collected beneath the Colonne de Juillet.

On the other hand, M. Blondel, the architect of the building, and M. Normand, the secretary of the Society for Protecting Parisian Monuments, hold the opinion that these subterranean passages led to the oubliettes into which Catherine de Medicis cast those who were unfortunate enough to incur her hate or fear. A judicious exploration would clear up the matter, and settle, too, several doubtful points as to the foundations of Lescot's original citadel. Unfortunately, the annual grant does not provide for any such archaeological research, and it would be necessary to appeal for funds to the generosity of the chamber.—London Chronicle.

FROG AND TOAD JONAHS.

Yarns Accepted Not Without Doubt by Amateur Naturalists.

Most persons when they hear a naturalist tell about peculiar doings by birds, animals, or reptiles grin and ask about big fish. One tale, which no one but naturalists seems to believe, was told in the Forest and Stream recently by Allen Chamberlain. He says he heard a cry down in Florida such as a distressed frog makes and found that a blacksnake was swallowing a frog. When the frog was out of sight the snake was shot through the head and the frog was liberated. At first it was stupefied, but was soon as lively as ever. Within 20 years the same paper has recorded at least a score of just such instances, reported by as many individuals, who gave their real names and addresses, and who declared they had seen the stupefied toad or frog come to as from a trance, hop about as if dazed, and at last go away as lively as ever.

S. D. Kendall, in the Forest and Stream for June, 1892, told about a mother quail which in trying to protect her young got within reach of a rattlesnake. The snake was killed in the act of swallowing the bird. When released the bird was for some time stupefied, but after awhile recovered enough to stagger off. On the next day she was all right and caring for her chicks.

POLLY IN A FIX.

His Piece Was as Applicable One Time as Another.

A showman at a fair possessed a beautiful parrot which accompanied him everywhere on his peregrinations through town and country, and excited the admiration of the gaping crowd by its capital imitations of the showman's voice and tones when inviting the public to step into the booth. One day the faithful creature broke its chain and escaped into a neighboring plantation. Soon a number of men and boys were on its track, but before they had gone far they heard a loud noise caused by the shrieking of birds in the wood. On arriving at the spot whence the sounds proceeded they found poor Poll perched on the withered branch of a tree, bereft of most of its feathers and surrounded by a flock of screeching crows that were mercilessly pecking at it with their beaks. Notwithstanding this pitiable state of affairs the crowd of seekers could not refrain from laughing as they heard the poor victim scream out at the top of his voice: "One at a time, gentlemen! Don't crush so, please! Take your time! There's plenty of room!"

How He Took It.

An exchange tells a story of a Scotch minister whose physician ordered him to drink beef tea. The next day, when the doctor called, the patient complained that the new drink made him sick.

"Why, sir," said the doctor, "that can't be. I'll try it myself."

As he spoke he poured some of the tea into a skillet and set it on the fire. Then, having warmed it, he tasted it, smacked his lips and said:

"Excellent! excellent!"

"Man," said the minister, "is that the way ye sup it?"

"Of course. What other way should it be suppit? It's excellent."

"It may be gude that way, doctor, but try it wi' the cream and sugar, man. Try it wi' that and see hoo ye like it."

A New Strawberry.

A San Diego man has produced a strawberry plant which, unlike the ordinary plant, bears fruit of a large size and delicious flavor on a running vine, and not almost directly from the roots, much after the manner of bearing of squash or melon vines. It astonishes a horticulturist to see bunches of ripe strawberries growing on a slender runner which shoots out from a parent stem.

Small Pensions.

A late decree of the queen regent of Holland awards to the widow of a prison-keeper a pension of 19 florins (not quite eight dollars) annually, while another widow has 13 florins showered upon her every twelvemonth.

THE ROOT OF EVIL.

Fable of the Farmer and His New-Found Riches.

One day, states the Detroit Free Press, a farmer, who lived for years in peace and quietness and was well-spoken of by all who knew him, found a pot of gold as he was digging in a field. In great rejoicing he carried the treasure to his house and told his wife the news, and in a day his good luck was known to 100 people. His wife promptly decided to buy a piano and have a new house, and when the old man didn't think much of this scheme she upbraided him for his selfishness, and went about in the sulks. His three sons suddenly decided that they would blossom out as Jim-dandies and work no more, and his two daughters howled for diamonds and silks. A deacon called and wanted him to give $500 to the African heathen; he was asked to establish a foundlings' home; his mother-in-law demanded a brick house and new carpets and his ten sisters and brothers arrived and wanted the spondulix to make a trip to Europe. Neighbors who had loved him now referred to him as a stingy old varmint, and men who had asked him to be a candidate for town supervisor sent him word that they'd snow him under if ever he ran for office. In a fortnight he found himself without friends and mixed up in a score of broils, and, taking the gold to the river, he dumped it in and exclaimed:

"That over which I rejoiced has brought me only sorrow, and durn my pictur' if I want any more of it!"

Moral—Riches do not bring happiness, but he ought to have licked the whole crowd and invested that money in four per cents.

AH CHOW'S MISTAKE.

Took the Trolley for the Steam Railway Train.

Ah Chow, a Chinaman with a limited knowledge of this country, its ways and its language, started from Berkley, Cal., to ride the few miles into San Francisco, recently. He had been instructed where to take the train; but he made a mistake, and instead of boarding the regular steam railroad train he took an electric car that passed the same corner. It happened to be a car of the loop line that runs between Berkeley and Oakland, going one route and returning another. He made the complete circuit once, but made no effort to get off the car. The conductor thought the scenery charmed the celestial, so said nothing, but collected his fare a third time as the car went on its second trip to Oakland. Eight times Ah Chow made the circuit of the line, paying his nickel with cheerfulness every time the conductor asked for fare. Then at the end of the eighth trip the conductor called a policeman and Ah Chow was taken before a police judge for examination as to his sanity. The interpreter in the court soon discovered the reason of Ah Chow's peculiar doings, and with the court's permission accompanied him to San Francisco.

EPITAPH ON A WATCHMAKER.

Curious Inscription Seen on a Tombstone in an English Graveyard.

The following curious inscription to the memory of George Routleigh, a watchmaker by trade, occurs in the churchyard at Lydford, Devon: "Here lies, in horizontal position, the outside case of George Rutleigh, whose abiding in that line was an honor to his profession. Integrity was his mainspring, and prudence the regulator of all the actions of his life. Humane, generous and liberal, his hand never stopped till he had relieved distress. Sincerely regular were his motions. He never went wrong except when set agoing by people who did not know his key. Even then he was easily set right again. He had the art of disposing of his time so well that his hours glided in one continual round of pleasure and delight till an unlucky minute put an end to his existence. He departed this life, November, 1802, wound up in hope of being taken in hand by his Maker and of being thoroughly cleaned, repaired and set agoing in the world to come."

Snakes for Iceland.

Iceland has from time immemorial enjoyed a strange immunity from reptiles. This seems to have grated upon the nerves of two German naturalists, who, emulated by the same spirit which induced the Chicago contractor to send in an offer to the town council of the Italian city of Pisa to straighten the leaning tower which is the principal attraction of the place, are now devoting their energies to introducing reptiles into Iceland. They have already experimented with frogs, both Danish and Prussian, and as the pioneer service of these humble handmaids of the biologist has proved successful, a cargo of able-bodied snakes is about to be dumped on the island, unless King Christian sees fit to resist this altogether novel form of German invasion.

The Moon and Stammering.

Nature publishes from a correspondent a curious fact which it vouches for. The correspondent says: "It was accidentally observed by a stammering friend of mine, during the months of May and June last, that on moonlight nights he stammered more than on dark nights, and when he slept exposed to the rays of the moon during the month of June he found he stammered the most on days succeeding full moons, while a day just after the new moon, and a day before, he had not a single attack of the fit."

Absent-Minded Professor.

Prof C—— had gone to spend the evening at a friend's house. When he was about to leave it was raining very heavily, wherefore the hostess kindly offered him accommodations for the night, which he readily accepted. Suddenly the guest disappeared, nobody knowing what had become of him, and the family was about to retire for the night when Prof. C—— walked in, as wet as a drowned rat. He had been home to fetch his night shirt.

WORK AND WEAR.

Repairs to Machinery While in Motion.

How Waste May Be Prevented and Energy Maintained.

If a machine works, it must wear out. It matters not whether it is the common plow of the field or the most complicated printing press. Work means waste. It is certain that these machines would last much longer if they did not wear out. Then only some accident would necessitate the purchase of new parts.

The human body is a complicated piece of machinery which is constantly at work. There is not an activity of the body, from the movement of a muscle to the digestion of food, which does not cause waste. Physiology teaches that we are constantly being supplied with new material to take the place of that which is worn out.

When the body is debilitated by disease, how quickly it could be built up, provided we could only allow all the parts complete rest. But, of course, this is impossible, for the changing of the foods into the various organs and tissues of the body means work, and this work means waste. However, we can aid the body in its work and save it much labor.

We can take especial care to use only those foods which are easily digested, and yet are highly nourishing. When it is necessary to add some valuable food which is also a medicine, as cod-liver oil, then we can save the body an immense amount of work by digesting the oil before giving it. How can an oil be digested? If you will consult some work on physiology you will learn that an oil is digested when it is broken up into minute globules, so small that high powers of the microscope are necessary to see the little drops of fat. When the oil has been digested in this way it is called an "emulsion."

This is why Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites is so easily borne by delicate stomachs, does not cause diarrhœa, and never produces gas in the stomach. When persons are ill, the digestion is also weak. But Scott's Emulsion is already digested, hence the body is not obliged to expend strength in preparing it for absorption. You at once see the advantage of Scott's Emulsion over raw cod-liver oil. It also contains the hypophosphites which every one recognizes as such strong tonics to the nervous system.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trademark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

III.

The Bedouin, her size and accommodations considered, had but a small number of cabin passengers. All told, there were hardly a score, including six or seven women, who were invisible save when the sea was at its smoothest. Even when they joined the rest at dinner we barely filled two tables. Among the men were two or three Englishmen, a half-dozen Brazilians, a Frenchman and two Germans. The women apparently represented almost as great a variety of nationalities. Only two of them had any claims to youth. In the matter of beauty the average was low. The most ardent of wooers of old buccaneering days, when suits were pressed with rare dispatch, would have turned a very St. Anthony at sight of such an array of elderly femininity as the Bedouin presented.

The two girls, however, were of uncommon attractiveness. One was a Brazilian maiden, a fine brunette, with a figure inclined to the statuesque in its outlines. The other, so nearly as I could discover from an occasional glimpse of her in the course of the first two days of the voyage, was a slender, graceful girl, brown-haired, and neither very dark nor very light of complexion. She was traveling in company with an older woman, attendance upon whom kept her fully employed for 48 hours out of port. Then, as the weather was fine, the pair appeared on deck and joined the party under the big awning aft. Each carried a book, but it was noticeable that, while the elder read steadily and rapidly, with the business-like air of a hardened devourer of novels, the girl often dropped her book upon her lap and let her gaze stray across the wide expanse of blue water. Seemingly she took little heed of her fellow-voyagers, a group of whom were chatting not a dozen feet from her. It was an excellent opportunity to study her without her knowledge—as I believed; and the longer I watched the young woman the more interested in her did I become.

She was slender, as has been said, and carried herself so erectly as to appear taller than she really was, her height being, in fact, but a trifle above the average of her sex. Her forehead was broad, and her hair worn low upon it. Her features were good. The nose was straight and finely chiseled, the chin delicately rounded. Her mouth was larger than the canons of art demanded, and now and then the lips were set in a line which indicated no lack of firmness. It was not a stubborn mouth, however, even when the thoughts of its mistress seemed to be least pleasant. The face was inclined to paleness, relieved by a faint, flickering color which came and went on her cheeks, even as she sat watching the sea. The eyes gave her strongest claim to beauty. They were clear, dark-brown eyes shaded by long lashes.

As a whole, the face was attractive, but it was no easy task to class its degree of pulchritude. Absolute beauty it did not attain; "pretty" was clearly not the adjective to apply to it. "Handsome" seemed to be closer to the truth, though even that word did not quite satisfy my judgment. But I did not ponder long over the point, for I soon found myself fully decided that the girl was, in appearance at least, a very charming young person.

Burroughs, a British youth with whom I had struck up an acquaintance in the smoking-room, crossed the deck to her chair, and talked with her for perhaps a quarter of an hour, the novel-reader merely looking up from her book on his approach and promptly returning to its perusal after answering his greeting. I envied Burroughs' acquaintance with the girl, although neither he nor she seemed to derive any great entertainment from their somewhat intermittent conversation. Once she sent a quick glance in my direction, and I guessed that the youth had reached me in going over the list of passengers. I prayed that he might be charitable in his comments.

Strolling into the smoking-room that evening, I found most of the male passengers were assembled. Two games of cards were in progress, with a fringe of spectators looking over the players' shoulders. After a few minutes Burroughs appeared, and dropped upon the cushioned bench beside me.

"Not playing, eh?" said he. "Don't you admire the sport?"

"Not particularly," I answered. "Are you going to take a hand?"

"I like to, generally," said he, with a laugh, "but I'd rather do something else just now."

"Smoke, for instance?" I suggested.

"Not exactly," he answered, with a sort of embarrassment in his tone. "By the way, wouldn't you like to meet your fair compatriot?"

"Who is she? I had supposed myself to be the only North American on board."

"Miss Dorothy Gray. If you happened to notice, you saw me talking to her this afternoon. She's with her aunt, Mrs. Loring—met 'em in Rio, you know. I told her who you were, and she'll be glad to see you. Come along, that's a good fellow."

"Why this haste?" But I rose without delay, as he might have observed, had he not been busy with his own schemes.

"It's something like this, you know," he went on. "That splendid creature with a name I can't pronounce is with Miss Gray now, and until I get somebody to look after the little Yankee, you know, I can't have the splendid creature to myself. I don't speak much of her lingo, you see, and she can't make even a stagger at mine, and so our conversation is rather embarrassing before a third party, don't you know? I'm counting on you to help me out."

"Lead the way," said I. "I'm a willing sacrifice."

In five minutes I found myself talking to Miss Gray, while at a little distance Burroughs and the fair Brazilian were progressing famously in spite of the lingual limitations. Still farther away the buxom mother of the splendid creature was playing a discreet chaperon and discoursing with one of her countrymen.

There was a glorious moon overhead, and the steamer ran smoothly over the tranquil sea. These details come back to me far more distinctly than the words of folly, commonplace, or wisdom we may have exchanged. Probably we talked of the ship, the officers and the passengers, of Brazil and the United States, and, last, but not least, of the beauty and charm of the night. The girl had something white and fluffy thrown over her head, and her light jacket was buttoned about her trim figure, for the evening air was cool, in spite of our latitude. The moonlight was kind to her, as it is to many of her sisters, and had I attempted to revive my afternoon's opinion of her face, my new finding, I fear, would have been far less severely critical.

In that first evening I came to like her exceedingly. There was nothing of the coquette in her; in fact, there was hardly a touch of frivolity. She seemed grave rather than gay, although one got from her no suggestion of a morose disposition. In short, there was something in her manner to bring to mind the self-repression one often notes in persons long accustomed to close attendance upon an exacting invalid. As it happened, she came rightfully by this air, inasmuch as her aunt was a chronic sufferer for the health which she believed herself to lack. With this aunt Miss Gray had been traveling for several years.

When she bade me good night I gave an hour to tobacco and Burroughs, who chattered enthusiastically about the flower of Brazil. Incidentally, he explained that he had met Mrs. Loring and her niece but once before the Bedouin sailed, and that he knew next to nothing of them.

"The old lady's a queer one, though," he added. "If you confess that you're a doctor she'll make your life a burden, you know. Shun her, old chappie, shun her."

Events proved that, even had I been disposed to accept his advice, it would have been extremely difficult to put it into practice. Mrs. Loring gave me no option in the matter. No sooner did she discover my profession—and that she did speedily—than she sent for me. I found her propped up on pillows in her berth, with a novel in one hand and a fan in the other.

"So kind of you, Dr. Morris, so very, very kind," she began—"so kind to come so soon. Really, I was in despair, yes, in abject despair, until I heard that you were a physician. I am so ill, so miserably ill, doctor, and the ship's surgeon misjudges my case so terribly. Would you believe it—can you believe it?—he actually tried to humbug me into thinking that I was well, perfectly well. And I—I—"

She fell back upon her pillows, as if overpowered by the remembrance of her sufferings. Yet in a moment she was again sitting up and pouring into my ears a torrent of words. She was a tall woman, thin, though not emaciated, very nervious, and one of the most voluble persons it was ever my fate to encounter. Her age was not far from 45 years.

In spite of her repeated assertions that she was very ill, and the evident faith she put in them, it was clear that Mrs. Loring might as well have been on deck as in her state-room. An undue indulgence in certain triumphs of the ship's pastry-cook, and an overtaxed digestion, would explain her ailment to the satisfaction of anybody but herself. The surgeon's view of the matter, expressed rather brusquely, had served to convince the lady that he was a brute. Perhaps had she been a lone traveler she might have had occasion to put me in the same category; but, with one thought for her and two for her niece, I listened patiently to the tale of sorrow and agony.

"Well, Mrs. Loring," said I, when the opportunity came, "I think I have diagnosed your case. With your cooperation, we'll have you well again long before this voyage is over. I'll prepare some medicine which I think will be effective. I shall have to ask you to put yourself on a restricted diet, in order that the delicate chemical changes which I count upon the medicine to produce as an aid to the digestive ferments may progress under the most favorable conditions. The dose will be a teaspoonful just half an hour before each meal. So accurately calculated are the effects that I must ask you to follow the directions to the minute. The slightest variation in the time may utterly destroy the efficacy of the drugs."

"Oh, you may rely upon me, doctor," she cried, delightedly. "I understand you perfectly—yes, perfectly. To the minute, to the very minute, the medicine shall be taken. Oh, doctor, doctor, it is a comfort, such a comfort, to see that you understand my trouble so thoroughly—yes, so thoroughly. Now, that surgeon—"

But I bowed myself out of the state-room, and hastened in search of the official medicine-man, who, it must be admitted, learned with entire satisfaction that another had assumed charge of Mrs. Loring's case. Moreover, he cheerfully assisted in the preparation of the medicine for her use. It was warranted to be harmless; it tasted much as if a little sugar had been dissolved in a generous quantity of water. As it met the patient's craving for doses, however, and as she was up and about again in the course of a few days, it may be said to have accomplished its benevolent purpose.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Albert Simmonds has purchased a new wheel.

Mrs. Skillman, of Park avenue, has purchased a new wheel, which she enjoys very much.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company has just received two large crates of Volt tires. The Volt tire is manufactured at New Brunswick.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received yesterday a shipment of seven Cleveland Swell Specials and four Crescent racers.

Wm. Townsend, of Myrtle avenue, is riding a new Cleveland Swell Special that he purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The Newark Cycle Board of Trade was formed last week, and Frederick J. Keer, of the Keer & Martin Cycle Company, was elected president.

John J. Shotwell, of College place, is on a business trip along the Jersey coast, representing Curtis M. Thorpe, the well known dealer in mantels.

J. J. Kenney, the well-known shoe-dealer, has a new Hunter wheel, and was testing its running in company with Sergeant Kiely yesterday afternoon.

All cyclists of the Y. M. C. A. are cordially invited to attend the league run to Summit tomorrow night. The start will be made from the Y. M.C.A. building at 7 o'clock.

While Miss Marguerite Coriell, of Fairview avenue, was riding her wheel a few days ago, she slipped and fell, damaging her wheel considerably. Fortunately Miss Coriell was not injured.

Fred Barker, the well known night operator at the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company's exchange, has accepted a position in the repair department of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Ernest T. Hand, of Westfield, who rode so successfully for the Crescent Wheelmen last year, is planning to go on the track again this year. He will open the season at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

S. Clinton Crane, of Columbia Law School, rode out to this city yesterday and spent the day at his home on East Second street. While coming through Roselle he had a gash of over an inch long cut in his rear tire by running over broken glass. The only repairing material he had was tire tape, but by the use of brown paper and tape he managed to repair the tire so that he was enabled to ride to Plainfield.

On approaching sandy places in the road at a rapid gait, the handlebars should be firmly grasped and the front wheel should be kept perfectly straight, or a spill may result. Riding on narrow side paths also requires a good deal of care to prevent accidents. There are times when through inattention the wheel becomes partially overbalanced and seems determined to run down the side of the enbankment, and sometimes, in spite of all an expert rider can do, it will succeed. If it is seen that the wheel is going off the bank, unless the enbankment is too high, it is best to turn the wheel squarely down it, as should it slip off sideways there is great danger of a broken pedal and a hard fall.

Chief Consul Robert Gentle of the New Jersey division of the League of American Wheelmen, in a talk with a Sun reporter, said that the Executive Committee has decided to allow the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey to handle the State division meet this year. It will likely be held during the latter part of June or early in July. The cycle path from Trenton to Asbury Park, Mr. Gentle says, will be formally opened on July 4, but no steps have been taken to have any special demonstration upon the occasion. The wheelmen of Union county intend to construct a nine-mile path, connecting with the Trenton-Asbury Park road, leading to Lakewood. The New Jersey division of the L. A. W. is now in a strong financial condition, having $1,500 in its treasury and rapidly adding to its membership.

The Crescent wheel still seems to be a "good thing" in the hands of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Comyany and the sales are very rapid. Among the latest purchasers are Mrs. J. D. Siegfried, Thomas Walsh, of Metuchen; Henry H. Bohl, Charles R. Skillman, George E. Marx, T. H. Pittis, Winslow Carson, Henry Bradley and W. F. Moore. J. Sorenson has one of the new Crescent racers. The Cleveland Swell Special is still as popular as ever. Among the latest to purchase the Cleveland are Mrs. N. P. Rogers, George Tobin and James R. Knowlton, two.

Elston French, of Somerset street, received his Fowler wheel yesterday.

Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, has purchased a new wheel.

It is probable that C. M. Rydell, of this city, and Monte Scott will be in the back mark bunch men in the Milburn road race.

Two cyclists, employes at the Scott Printing Machine Works, collided on East Fifth street today noon while riding home to dinner. Both wheels were damaged considerably and one of the riders sustained an injury to his knee.

Jay Eaton and the Jersey wheel still continue in their victorious career at Chicago. There were no races Monday, but last evening Eaton rode in the one-mile open and finished first. He telegraphed to Plainfield that "the Jersey is champion."

AROUND THE BASES.

The Phillies have slacked up in their good playing and are now in sixth place.

Bonner is now playing with the Wilkes-Barres of the Eastern League, at second base.

The New Yorks seem to cling to the bottom of the ladder, in company with St. Louis and Louisville.

Heckman, formerly of the Crescents, is playing a good game for the Metropolitans in the Atlantic League.

Shortstop Jennings, of the Baltimores, is putting up a great game this season, and bids fair to be on top in this position.

The Louisvilles are bracing up and playing a much stronger game under new management. They surprised people by defeating the Phillies two games last week.

Mercer, of the Washington team, is leading the pitching so far. He has eight victories to his credit, with only one defeat. In this defeat only four hits were made off of him, which nine times out of ten would win a game.

The Plainfield Athletic Club will put the following team in the field this year for out of town games, viz: Mumford, catcher; C. Sutphen, pitcher; M. Sutphen, first base; Swalm, second base; Firstbrook, third base; Sprowl, shortstop; Muir, left field; Lederer, centre field; C. Sutphen, right field.

WITH ROD AND GUN

The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of this State has made arrangements for the publication of a monthly report of its doings. All persons interested in the protection and propagation of fish and game can obtain free of charge copies of these reports by sending word to Charles A. Shriner, Fish and Game Protector, Paterson.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The athletic association of Rutgers College has arranged an interscholastic relay race for next Friday afternoon. The High School has entered a team and trials will be held this afternoon to pick the team. The team will consist of four men.

YALE FLAG BURNED.

New Haven Officials Say That Only Old Glory Can Float over the Green.

New Haven, Conn., May 20.—The Yale flag was burned yesterday afternoon by order of the city authorities. At daybreak a huge banner inscribed Yale '98 was found floating from the flagstaff on the green. It had been placed there by the Yale scientific freshmen and a guard of policemen was stationed to see that it was not disturbed by sophomores. A fireman scaled the flagstaff and cut down the flag. It was burned by City Auditor Brown, who said: "Only the American flag can float from that mast."

AT THE TRAPS.

Yesterday's high wind made shooting difficult and irregular and many of the crack shots of the Climax Gun Club failed to score high in consequence at the club shoot held at the club grounds on South avenue yesterday afternoon. There was a good attendance and the matches were exciting. The rain, of course, put a stop to the proceedings, but beside the regular club match, there were two team shoots and two sweepstakes. The results of the different events were as follows: Club shoot, J. M. Taylor, 24; C. Smith, 23; A. Woodruff, 22; D. Darby, 22; Schortymeyer, 22; R. Trust, 21; T. Brantingham, 21; S. Terry, 19; W. Terry, 18; C. Lambert, 11. Team shoot No. 1, 15 targets. First team: Schortymeyer, 13; Darby, 13; Clarence, 6; total, 32. Second team: C. Smith, 10; Woodruff, 10; W. Terry, total, 24. Team shoot No. 2, 10 targets. First team: Schortymeyer, 9; Darby, 8 and Clarence 5; total, 22. Second team: C. Smith, 7; Woodruff, 7; C. W. Terry, 7; total, 21. Sweepstakes No. 1, 10 targets: Schortymeyer, 10; Brantingham and Taylor, 9; Trust, 8; C. Smith and Darby, 7. Sweepstakes, No. 2, 10 targets: Branningham and Schortymeyer, 10; C. TO BE CREMATED TO-DAY.

New York's Coroner Satisfied That the Colonnade Hotel Suicide Was Mrs. Hill.

New York, May 20.—The body of "Mrs. Everett," the Colonnade hotel suicide, will be cremated to-day, the coroner being satisfied that she was Mrs. Hill, and he therefore turned the remains over to Mr. Hill, father of the woman's husband. Congressman Pence and Mr. Hoard made affidavits as to the identity of the body. Lawyer Hill received a cablegram from his son, the husband of the suicide, saying: "Always desired cremation. Please have that done. Am writing to you to-day."

Becker and Creegan's Fight for Liberty.

Newark, N. J., May 20.—Judge Kirkpatrick has allowed a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Charles Becker and James W. Creegan, alleged to have swindled the Nevada bank of San Francisco out of $20,000. The writ is returnable on Monday when San Francisco detectives are expected to appear and identify the prisoners.

Buffalo Carpenters' Strike.

Buffalo, May 20.—There is no material change in the carpenters' lockout since yesterday. A number of employers have conceded the demand for eight hours, but a number of others have discharged such of their men who refused to work nine hours.

HIS WATCH WAS GONE.

G. THORN HAS AN EXPERIENCE WIT LIGHT FINGERED GENTRY.

Jostled in a Big Crowd, Mr. Thorn Has a Valuable Gold Watch Deftly Taken From His Pocket by a Pickpocket.

Hackensack has been immortalized in song, but even if it had not, it is likely that G. Thorn, of this city, would remember the town from which, as runs the rhyme, came the man "with the little bunch of whiskers on his chin." Mr. Thorn visited Hackensack yesterday as a delegate to the State meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, and after a day of pleasure he underwent an experience with a pickpocket that he very much regrets. There was an immense crowd in attendance at the convention, and late in the afternoon every train leaving the place was crowded, people surging back and forth at the station in the endeavor to board the cars and get seats. After the train had started, Mr. Thorn put his fingers to his watch pocket intending to observe the time. Much to his surprise he found the timepiece missing. Then he remembered that while boarding the train he had been particularly jostled by an individual, who afterwards jumped off the car and ran up the track. At the time, Mr. Thorn thought the stranger's actions rather odd but he was not suspicious of his being a victim of the light fingered gentry. But putting two and two together, Mr. Thorn concluded that his watch was running faster than the jeweler who sold it figured that it would, and that he would never see it again. The watch was a valuable one, not only on account of its cost, but because of its associations, it having been presented to him on one of his birthdays by his wife.

FORESTRY ASSOCIATION IN SESSION.

Many Prominent People at the Convention in the Casino.

The Casino of the Union County Country Club made a very appropriate appearance this afternoon at 3 o'clock when the New Jersey Forestry Association met there. The hall was decorated with plants and photographs emblematic of the preservation of the forests, and in one place hung prominently a picture of the Palisades showing the devastation wrought by the quarrymen. In the lobby was an exhibition of German mottoes used in foresters' stations and schools, leaf charts, specimens of wood, including a large block of California redwood, photographs of typical trees and forest scenes.

The pamphlet relating to forestry were loaned by the Town Improvement Association. In addition to the list published in The Press yesterday, the following prominent people are present at the convention: J. F. Hall, editor of the Atlantic City Daily Union; Mrs. J. F. Livingston, Bound Brook; George F. King, an expert for Tiffany & Company, of New York; James R. Croes, member of the New York Palisades Commission; Miss Ray Gifford, May's Landing; Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Newell, of the United States Geologic survey; Mrs. George T. Heston, of Newton, N. Y.; George H. Whittle, Bay Ridge, N. Y. The meetings are oped to all persons.

LOSE THEIR SOFT BERTHS.

Chancery Copyists to Be Paid Salaries and to Work in the Office.

The reorganization of the Chancery's Clerk's department on the basis of economy and reform has led to the dismissal of thirty female copyists. Each copyist retained at home a large bound volume, which on being filled was placed in the vault of the office. The work was pleasant, could be done at the leisure of the copyists and for which she received compensation ranging from $25 to $35 per month. It was found that this was an expensive way of getting copying done, and also very inconvenient for the office.

The new Clerk, ex-Senator Thompson, could not see the utility of such a plan and decided to make the change. All the copyists have turned in the books to the Clerk, and he now announces that in future the work will be done by persons who will be regularly attached to the office, who, instead of being paid so much per folio, will receive a regular monthly salary.

SWEET MUSIC AND PLEASANT CHAT.

A Delightful Event Given for the Benefit of the Church of The Redeemer.

The Soiree-Musicale given by the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer, under the direction of Walter Arnold Hudson, last evening, in the Babcock building, was socially and financially a success. The rooms were not large enough to seat all who were present and many were obliged to stand. The programme was a select one, and each number was given perfectly. Owing to the death of Mr. MacClymont's uncle, he was unable to appear, and Miss Lillian Nicholl, of Scotch Plains, kindly took his place. The programme was as follows:

Paderewski—"Legend No. 2" ..... Piano
Miss Lillian Nicholl.
Spicker—"A Dream of Spring" ..... Tenor
L. S. Bond.
Cantor—"As the Dawn" ..... Soprano
Miss Florence A. Stevens.
Abt—"O Calm and Lovely the Evening Bells." Trio
Misses Stevens, Runyon and Kline.
Chaminade { a. "Piece Ramantique" } Piano
MacClymont { b. "Romanza" }
Miss Nicholl.
Fisher—"I Wait for Thee" ..... Contralto
Miss Florence Kline.
Chaminade—"Ritournelle" ..... Soprano
Miss Elma H. Runyon.
Flotow—"May Gentle Sleep Fall O'er Thee." Quartette
Misses Stevens and Kline and Messrs. Bond and Hudson.
Mrs. B. T. Barnes ..... Accompanist

After the musicale, all adjourned to another room where the women served cream and cake. The rooms were tastefully decorated in an attractive manner by Mrs. Townsend, Miss Thompson, Miss Brown, Miss Hasbrouck, Miss Faber and Miss Storm. The refreshments were looked after by Miss Davis and Mrs. W. E. Brock, while the following served as waitresses: Miss Clapp, Miss Barlow, Miss Hull, Miss Horne, Miss Phillips, Miss Faber and Miss Hasbrouck, and the committee of arrangements consisted of Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Stevens.

Co-Workers With A. Saltzman.

Besides the election of Auguste Saltzman as president, which was reported in The Press yesterday, the following officers were chosen by the State Exempt Firemen's Association: Vice-presidents, J. J. Foster, of Gloucester; J. C. Hayes, of Trenton; W. F. Hartman, of Perth Amboy; J. E. Stiles, of Morristown; George Zimmerman, of Carlstadt: Henry Mills, of East Grange; John Zeller, of Guttenburg and W. M. Oakes, of Bloomfield; secretary, Elias K. Leslie, of Trenton; treasurer, Thomas Leather, of Trenton. An effort to advise legislation for an increase of the percentage tax upon foreign insurance companies doing business in New Jersey was defeated after debate.

An Escaped Convict.

Sylvester Egerton, a desperate character, known as "Blacky the Bum," has escaped from the Middlesex county jail, where he had been confined for the past three months serving a sentence for breaking and entering. The prisoner was employed in the culinary department and escaped by scaling a wall some time during the day. His escape was not made known until a late hour yesterday afternoon. This is the ninth prisoner to escape from the jail within a year.

Ninger Pleads Guilty.

Emanuel Ninger, of Franktown, N. J., in the Criminal Part of the United States Circuit Court, at New York, yesterday, pleaded guilty to having made and passed counterfeit bills and was remanded until May 29 for sentence. Ninger was captured on March 27, after having eluded the government officials for years. His counterfeits were made entirely with the pen.

Like the Bishop.

A certain Bishop was taken to task for being egotistical beyond what was consistent with the humility of his profession. "It is not egotism, brethren," he cried. "It is the consciousness of superiority." Same here. Peck often speaks of the quality of his goods, but it is not egotism. It is conscious superiority.

Additional Team at the Headquarters.

F. A. Pope, of Park avenue, has placed a fine new team of horses at fire headquarters for the use of the engine. They will be in charge of David Anguerbauer who will use them to the watering cart. Whenever needed they will be brought in. The expense of the the team and driver is paid by Mr. Pope.

Thieves Around Metuchen.

The country residence of Edward Morris, President of the Oak Tree Bottling Works, was entered Tuesday night by thieves. A pocketbook containing $38 was stolen, together with a watch charm and clothing. The Robins "Homestead Farm" adjoining was also entered, but little was stolen.

Who is Going to Settle?

A representative of the city officials has visited the local restaurant men and solicited bids from them for furnishing the midnight lunch to the police force. One man's bid was $90. Who is going to pay for it?

THE HOME OF COLD CASH

PLAINFIELD HAS THE FINEST BANK BUILDING IN NEW JERSEY.

Every Convenience is There That Mind and Mechanism Can Make—A Special Alcove for Ladies—Burglar-Proof Vaults.

Plainfield can now claim to the honor of having the finest and most complete bank building in the State of New Jersey. The new building of the First National Bank, is, although not the largest, the one that deserves that title, and today it was opened to the public, and they were given a chance to see what a modern, up-to-date bank is like. The bank will be taken possession of by the large corps of clerks in a few days, and will then be opened regularly for business.

Those that remember the old bank will not recognize it as it looks at present. Mowbray and Uffinger, the New York architects, have completely remodeled the entire building, interior and exterior, and designed all of the vaults, metal work, bank fixtures, etc., and have superintended the work of construction. They were put at a disadvantage by the narrowness of the building, which is only 22 feet wide, but have so arranged the space that every inch is utilized, and yet nothing is crowded. The building is 90 feet long and four stories high. The first floor and basement will be occupied by the banking department, while the second, third and fourth floors will be devoted to commodious offices, all of which are well lighted. The front needs no description, as it is a prominent object to all who pass through the business section. The material used is Dover marble, the same as in the Washington Arch in New York and the Metropolitan Club building. This work was executed by Messrs. Barr, Thaw & Fraser, of Hoboken. The brick and terra cotta used in the front came from the Staten Island Terra Cotta Company's works. The basement is devoted to the large storage vault for old books, and the steam heating boilers are in a special vault under the sidewalk.

The banking floor is entered directly from the street. The high marble counters on the right enclose the employes of the bank and limit the progress of the visitors. The directors room and the safe deposit vaults are in the rear of the building. The immense plate-glass window to the right of the entrance opens into the cozy little office of the president. Then behind the marble counter, with its metal and glass-work above and hidden by heavy green silk curtains, comes first the cashier, then the paying and the receiving teller and six bookkeepers. Between the spaces devoted to the tellers is an alcove especially for the use of the lady depositors so that they need not stand in a line with the other depositors. This is something entirely new in banks. A large mirror, a necessary feature to a special ladies department, is placed in the back of the alcove. In the rear of the main room is the lobby to the safe deposit vaults and two safe deposit alcoves, behind which is the immense vault and the director's room. The two vaults, the money vault by the cashier's desk and the safe deposit vault, are two of the most complete in the State. The money vault is built so as to be almost impenetrable and is clear from the walls so that those in charge can see on top, below and on all sides. A separate foundation of extra heavy masonry, laid in massive concrete and Portland cement, supports each of the vaults. They are the largest and heaviest in the State having a total weight of seventy-two tons of chromie steel. In the safe deposit vault are three hundred and forty-four boxes of various sizes, with several large storage closets for silver.

The room is tinted a pale cream color with gold decorations.

During the daytime the light enters through a skylight of opalescent cathedral glass in the ceiling, a light-shaft running through the centre of the building, and at night, both gas and electric lights are so arranged as to flood the room with brilliant illumination.

The interior work, all of imported Sienna marble, and the handsome mosaic tiling in the general passageway, is the work of Batterson & Eisele, of New York. The interior furniture, including the counters and metal work, was arranged by William Schwazwalder and Company, of New York. The Central Gas Fixture Company, of New York, supplied the gas fixtures, and the ornamental plaster work was done by H. Sinclair's Sons, of New York. The vaults were made by the Remington & Sherman Company, of New York.

The contracts for the principal work of remodeling of the building were held by the following: Mason work, J. P. Emmons; carpenter work, Pearson & Gale; iron work, W. T. Kirk; electrical work, A. T. Phillips; plumbing, Addis & Son; painting, Marsh, Ayers & Company; and steam heating, Wells & Newton Co., of N. Y.

The bank is open for the inspection of visitors today. and all who call will be shown its many new and novel features. Tomorrow will be special ladies' day.

SUED FOR HIS WAGES.

Edward Drake Was to Get $4 a Week, But Only Received $2.

The case of Edward Drake against Albert Brown was tried in Justice Mosher's court yesterday afternoon. Lawyer Kirch represented the plaintiff and Lawyer Angleman the defendant.

The plaintiff was hired by Mr. Brown at his blacksmith shop on Richmond street for the sum of $4 per week as wages. Drake worked there for two months, but he only received $2 per week and he brought action to recover $29.75 back pay.

The case was argued briefly and finally went to the following jurors: George Whitlock, Harry Connett, J. L. Piper, Frank Vosseller, J. G. Platzer and Randolph Dunham, Jr. They were out forty five minutes and when they returned they gave the plaintiff a verdict and allowed him $20.

The defendant will probably appeal the case, as he claims that Drake did not perform his work satisfactorily.

And the Band Plays On.

Councilman George H. Frost is meeting with a ready response among those whom he has approached to contribute to the expenses of the free open air band concerts this summer. Four prominent men have contributed $200 and the remaining $200 or $300 will easily be raised. It is the plan to have the concerts held at different points in the city on Tuesday nights so that all residents may have the pleasure of enjoying them without going too great a distance. It is likely that a portion of them will be held near the Babcock building and thus attract trade for the merchants.

Saturday is Pleading Day.

The prisoners indicted by the Grand Jury will be arraigned to plead Saturday morning. There are three indictments, it is said, against John M. Reiner for criminal libel out of the twenty-six complaints made against him by Mayor Rankin. Ten prisoners held in the county jail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury were all discharged, having escaped indictment. Among the number was Thomas Barry, held on a charge of causing the death of "Big Jim," found dead near the New Jersey Jockey Club grounds.

A Talented Man Here.

Among those present at the State Forestry Association meeting are Mr. and Mrs. George Frederick Kunz, of New York, who are guests of A. S. Patterson. Mr. Kunz has a world-wide reputation as a scientist in the lines of mineralogy, geology, natural sciences, antiquities and precious stones. He is the author of many valuable works, among which his "Gems and Precious Stones of North America," take high rank. He is a member of most scientific societies of Europe and America.

Compound Locomotives More Serviceable.

The new compound engine, No. 457, will soon be placed into service on the Royal Blue line. It is believed that the compound engines will take the place of the bicycle engines on the Royal Blue, as the latter have not proved the great success predicted for them, owing to the fact that there is only one driving wheel and in starting the wheels slip too much.

Entertainment at Hope Chapel.

An entertainment will be held at Hope chapel next Thursday night by the Young People's Society. A pleasing literary and musical programme has been arranged and some talented entertainers will be present. Refreshments will be served after the entertainment.

Widening the Guage Delayed.

A Daily Press representative in conversation with Contractor L. W. Serrell learned that the work of changing the guage of the street railway tracks would not be commenced till next week. The delay is caused through the inability to secure a machine which is needed in relaying the curves.

A May Nuptial Event.

The wedding of Miss Bettie B. Davis to Fred Dunham will take place tonight at the bride's home, 537 West Fourth street. The Rev. P. S. Gibson will officiate. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

CHASED BY A BLACK BULL

TWO PLAINFIELD BICYCLISTS HAVE AN EXCITING ESCAPADE.

Tom Smith and Al Simmonds Stop by the Roadside to Rest and Become the Object of Attack of an Ugly and Ferocious Bull.

The farmers who live on the Springfield road beyond Scotch Plains, were treated to a novel and exciting race yesterday. The limit men were two well-known young men from this city and the scratch man was not a man at all, but a large black bull. Thomas U. Smith of Westervelt avenue, and Albert P. Simmonds, of Watchung avenue, were out riding yesterday on the road in question. They stopped for a few moments rest and sat down on the bank beside the road. Their quiet was suddenly interrupted by a roar and a large black bull, with the proverbial fire shooting from his eyes, suddenly made directly for the young men. It was too late to reach the bicycles and speed away on wheels, so they sought safety in flight by foot. The bull evidently thought that the riders needed exercise and determined to give them some. After the first surprise, Simmonds' fighting blood rose and he made a stand. He threw several stones at their four-footed pursuer, but the latter tossed his head and bellowed the louder. The bull's horns came entirely too near for comfort and deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, the young men resumed their retreat in a hurry.

They took to the fields and the bull, apparently greatly enjoying the fun, followed. Then the chase became exciting, for his majesty, the bull, caught sight of the red on the Jersey wheel button that Smith wore, and his bullship evidently determined that it was a direct flaunt at his dignity. The mountain, not very far away, looked like a good place to leave the bull, and toward that point the runners fled. It was a glorious contest to watch, but entirely too near being gory to suit the interested parties. At last they reached the woods and succeed in dodging their pursuer. They went through the woods, finally reached their wheels, and scorched away until they put several miles between them and their contestant. The respect of the young men for bulls is increased.

Made Business for Hackmen.

The rain storm which came up suddenly yesterday afternoon made business lively for the hackmen. At one time there was not a hack to be seen about the North Avenue station, while crowds of people were waiting for some sort of a carriage to convey them to their homes.

A Home of Their Own.

Notwithstanding the many rebuffs which the Church of the Redeemer members have met with in the movement for the erection of their own house of worship, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, pastor of the church, last night, told a Press reporter that the edifice would be built this year.

Tea and Cake Sale.

The Altar Society of St. Stephen's church will give a tea and hold a cake sale tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Guion, 319 Carleton avenue, from 3 until 6 o'clock. The proceeds of the sale will be devoted to the purchase of vestments for the choir. Twenty-five cents will be received at the door.

To Address the Alliance.

Rev. George A. Francis, pastor of the Westfield Baptist church, has been announced to address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance next Tuesday evening. Mr. Francis was a pupil of the late Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., of Boston, and is a very earnest and powerful speaker.

A War Cry Meeting.

A "War Cry" meeting has been announced for this evening at the Salvation Army, 116 West Second street. A special issue of that paper will be on sale, and facts and figures in relation to the number of papers, etc., printed throughout the world, will be given.

Street Extension to Be Made.

Michael Udhal signed a contract today for to extend Watchung avenue from Codddington avenue to the Hudson property. Mr. Udhal will commence work tomorrow if the weather permits.

Tomato Can Cemetery.

The Borough Council has a committee out searching for a suitable place for a dumping ground and a tin tomato can cemetery.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. REVISION OF TARIFF

Sherman's Substitute for Gorman's New Bond Issue.

LIVELY SESSIONS IN BOTH HOUSES

Proposed Change of Rules in the Lower Branch Brings on a Bitter Debate —Votes on the Immigration Bills Causes Surprise.

Washington, May 21.—The fortification bill, passed yesterday by the senate, leaving but one appropriation bill—the deficiency—yet to be acted upon, carries nearly $11,000,000, about $5,000,000 more than it carried when it passed the house, the principal item of increase being $3,115,000 for gun and mortar batteries. With the exception of Senator Gorman's amendment there was no controversy over any of the provisions of the bill. But that amendment produced a very heated discussion. Senator Gorman proposed to authorize the issue of $100,000,000 of treasury certificates of indebtedness, bearing 3 per cent. interest, in order to meet the expenditures called for by the appropriation bills of the present session, the aggregate of which he placed at $600,000,000. The amendment was opposed by Senator Sherman, who declared that never before had such a proposition been made in a time of profound peace, and he argued that the proper course for the senate to pursue was to take up the tariff bill passed by the house in the early part of the session, leave off the free silver amendment which the senate had attached to it, and then pass it with such amendments as might be deemed wise, including a tax on tea and coffee. He said that he would tear up all the appropriation bills rather than make such a confession of bankruptcy. Senator Gorman argued that the deficiency in the treasury could not be met in any other way than that which he proposed, but the amendment was laid on the table by a vote of 42 to 9. The conference report on the river and harbor bill will be considered this afternoon. The only question that was not settled by the conference was the one relating to the deep sea harbor in southern California.

House of Representatives.

The vote by which the house yesterday passed the immigration bill requiring an educational test and the bill intended to protect the lake cities from Canadian competition was a surprise to even the most sanguine advocates of the measures. Some of them, however, are slightly disappointed by the action of the house in refusing a record of the votes by yeas and nays. An absorbing topic to-day among members is the sensational debate precipitated by the presentation of an order from the committee on rules setting aside Thursday and Friday (private bill days under the rules) for the consideration of measures reported from the committee on labor. It was opposed by several members, among them Mr. Walker, rep., Mass., who vehemently denounced the "leaders," and declared that their "reign" would come to an end with this congress, and that in the next congress rules would be adopted by which business could be transacted or that nothing would be done. He declared that the house was pursuing a policy which prevented the government from paying its honest debts, a policy which he denounced as a shame and a disgrace such as no other country in the world labored under. "Although I have been a member of congress for eight years," he exclaimed, "I get no more consideration than a dog." Mr. Mahon gave notice that in the next session of congress no bills would be passed by unanimous consent, but that they must all take their chances on the calendar. While Mr. Dalzell, rep., Pa., was defending the new rule, Mr. Walker remarked: "Demagogy won't go," whereupon the former shouted: "I will not suffer myself to be interrupted by the impudence of the gentleman from Massachusetts." The new rule was then adopted. The message of the president vetoing the bill to pension Lydia A. Taft was read and referred.

ANOTHER BIG ELECTRIC PLANT.

St. Lawrence Rapids To Be Harnessed for Power for Montreal.

Montreal, May 21.—The Lachine rapids of the St. Lawrence are at last to be utilized. For some time past work has been prosecuted on a large wing dam, which runs out for more than a thousand feet into the St. Lawrence river. A fall of water is secured by means of this dam sufficient to develop at the low water season about 15,000 horse-power. This water power is to be transformed into electricity. Plans are completed for a plant that will generate 12,000 horse-power, to be transmitted to Montreal for use there in lighting the city, operating the street railroads and for any and all other lighting and power purposes.

MacDonald's First Victory Abroad.

New York, May 21.—The Paris correspondent of the American Wheelman cables that Ray MacDonald, a member of the American team, won his first race yesterday at the Brussels track. The race was an international one mile affair and the American won easily. He is fast improving, and is reputed to be in even better condition than Johnson.

Wheelmen Suspended.

Philadelphia, May 21.—The L. A. W. racing board has suspended from all track racing for sixty days from May 13 the following for competing in unsanctioned races: Oakford, '98; Breewort, '98; McMurty, '98; Hill School, Pottstown, Pa. The suspension placed upon John C. Henderson, Lewiston, Pa., has been removed.

IOWA DEMOCRATS.

Plans of the Leaders Carried Out to the Letter by the State Convention.

Dubuque, Ia., May 21.—Carrying out the programme of the leaders of the majority element, as announced in the dispatches yesterday, the democratic state convention declared for free silver in the most radical terms; presented ex-Gov. Horace Boies to the democracy of the nation as a candidate for the presidential nomination, and instructed the delegates-at-large and the district delegates, three of the latter be ingadherents of the sound money doctrine, to vote as a unit. It was the most turbulent convention in the history of the party in this state. The majority report of the committee on resolutions was barren of any reference to President Cleveland or his administration, while the commendation of the chief executive attached to the minority report was voted down by nearly three to one. In a measure, however, this may be taken as due to the fact that it was appended to a sound money resolution, for it was noticeable that the caustic comments upon the administration made by Permanent Chairman Carr evoked but scant applause from the silver men, while his declarations that the financial policy of the adminstration was not that of the democratic party, and that the party had been betrayed by its chosen leader, was received with silence.

SAYS SHE KILLED GIBBS.

Buffalo Police Scoff at the Confession of Minnie Allen.

Buffalo, May 21.—The confession of Minnie Allen, the Waupun, Wis., prisoner, in which she claims to have killed Montgomery Gibbs, the young lawyer for whose murder Sadie and Clarence Robinson are confined in Auburn prison, is scoffed at by police officials here. The woman's story of the shooting corresponds with the known facts, but the police say any one who had ever read about the murder could concoct a similar story. Assistant Superintendent Cussack, who has just returned from the Waupun prison, says the woman is a notorious thief and liar and a morphine fiend of the worst kind. He says he is convinced that she never saw Gibbs. When he asked her to describe Gibbs she said he was short and stout with a black moustache, whereas he was over six feet tall and never wore a moustache or whiskers. Cussack believes the woman is insane.

OPENED HER FATHER'S GRAVE.

Evangelist Ensign's Wife Believes She Must Assist in the Resurrection.

Utica, N. Y., May 21.—The wife of evangelist James E. Ensign left her home in this city Saturday evening and returned to her former home in Rose, Wayne county. Sunday morning she commenced digging on her father's grave and continued that work all day and yesterday, when she was discovered. Her father has been buried about twenty years, but Mrs. Ensign was possessed by the hallucination that she must assist in the resurrection of his body. She tore the earth from the grave with her hands and had reached and broken through the outside box when discovered. She is now in a very exhausted condition, and is being cared for by friends. Her husband is well known throughout this state, as he has conducted evangelistic meetings in many towns and cities.

My

Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance—that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place—being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." MISS ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

is experienced in this slow and dangerous disease, when the patient's strength is properly maintained until the crisis is passed. Don't force the stomach and other organs already weakened by sickness to wear themselves out in a vain attempt to obtain nourishment from improper foods. Feed the sufferer with milk and that great food product. It is absorbed immediately into the system with the least possible effort on the part of the various organs. Besides making new flesh and blood, it strengthens all of the vital centres, enabling them to expel existing poisons. It is a germicide, and antidotes the fever microbes. In addition, its benefical effect on the ulcerated condition of the bowels, so common in this disorder, is marvellous.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

HEATED CONTEST ON

Race for Moderator in Presbyterian General Assembly.

DR. WITHROW LEADS THIS MORNING

Supported by the Liberals and the Western Commissioners—Efforts of the Opposition To Combine Against Him. "Fighting Elder" Present.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 21.—The Presbyterian general assembly convenes here to-day and the usual preliminary wire pulling and electioneering in the interest of the several candidates for moderator has already vigorously begun. Not to mention several minor aspirants for the honor who are barely in view above the horizon, there are three expectant candidates, Dr. Monfort of Cincinnati, Dr. Withrow of Chicago and Dr. Breed of Pittsburg. The friends of these three men are working to the limits of their capacities to secure the honor for their candidates. Buttonhole arguments, geographical combinations, college friendships and old associations are being worked openly and publicly. Except for the clerical appearance of so many of the workers, the scene resembles an ordinary political convention town on the eve of the event. Each candidate has a number of imported talkers from their several towns who can be called upon when a doubting commissioner needs light on the merit, or demerits, rather, of an opposing candidate.

Withrow the Favorite.

Mr. Withrow of Chicago seems to be the favorite candidate this morning. He has the advantage of divided opposition, the ultra-conservatives being unable to decide or unite upon either Dr. Monfort or Dr. Breed. As pointed out a few days ago in these dispatches, while Dr. Withrow is known as a conservative man on the questions that have disturbed the church for the last five years, and is the candidate of the liberals, on account of his well established reputation as a conservative he has also been adopted by the moderate men of the east, who oppose the other leading candidates as extremists. Added to this strength is that of the commissioners from the west, who have come on charged with the responsibility of putting a western pastor into the moderator's chair. It outweighs all other considerations. They want a conservative, but more than that they want a pastor who understands the needs of the hard-working western pastor. Most of the western pastors are now or have been home missionaries, and they want a man who can appreciate the needs of the west, when viewed as a mission field.

New Yorker Will Nominate Him.

One train came in last night with a hundred trans-Missourian commissioners. Most of them were conservators, but they were all free to say they were for Dr. Withrow. Much surprise was expressed when it was learned that Dr. Withrow's name was to be presented to the assembly to-day by a New York pastor. Dr. Monfort counted upon most of the New York delegation and the more moderate conservatines, four or five in number, were counted for Dr. Breed. But it was stated this morning that Dr. John R. Davies of the Fourth Avenue church, New York, would make the nominating speech for Dr. Withrow. The New York delegation was at once the object of attack by the friends of Drs. Monfort and Breed. Dr. Davies is a new man in the assembly. He came from Tyrone, Pa., three years ago to fill the pulpit of Dr. Howard Crosby, and he was counted as one of the conservative party in the New York presbytery. He owes his election as a commissioner to his conservative associates in the assembly and none were more astonished at this news than the New Yorkers.

Conference of the Opposition.

Efforts are being made now to dissuade Dr. Davies from this purpose. The New York delegation met together to labor with him. What the result of this may be may not develop until this afternoon when the business of electing a moderate begins, for Dr. Davies is a man of few words but great firmness. The friends of Drs. Monfort and Breed were also together in a secret conference, trying to compound their difference. In the judgment of the old campaigners here, one of these two men must withdraw to accomplish the defeat of Dr. Withrow. Both men say that they are in the race to stay; neither is disposed to withdraw in the interests of the other.

Criticism of Financial Management.

Commissioner Thomas McDougall of Cincinnati, known as the fighting elder of the Presbyterian church, is here as commissioner from his presbytery. He won his distinction in the trial of Dr. Briggs at Washington, and ably has he maintained it to the present day. He is always ready for a ruction on behalf of the Presbyterian church. He has plans now with reference to this assembly that cannot be carried out in peace and quietude. He means to renew his cricticisms of the financial management of the home and foreign mission boards of the church, and of the real estate speculations on Fifth avenue, New York. He began preparing for this as soon as he was chosen a commissioner.

Australian Cricket Eleven Coming.

Philadelphia, May 21.—The secretary of the Associated Cricket clubs of Philadelphia has received a cablegram from the manager of the Australian eleven, which is now in England, announcing their acceptance of an invitation to visit this country in the fall. They will play their first match in this city with the All-Philadelphia team on September 18, 19 and 21.

DR. GILMAN ADMITS IT

May Accept Superintendency of New York City Public Schools.

CONSIDERS IT A RARE OPPORTUNITY

The News Throws Trustees of Johns Hopkins University into Deep Commotion and They Will Endeavor To Induce Him To Remain.

Baltimore, May 21.—The trustees and faculty of the Johns Hopkins university, and Baltimoreans generally, were greatly surprised by the publication of a report that President Gilman's name was being used in connection with the position of superintendent of schools of New York. Dr. Gilman was in Washington when the story reached here, attending a meeting of the Venezuelan commission, of which he is a member. In his absence the trustees of Johns Hopkins university pronounced the report without foundation. They asserted that New York school superintendency is a small matter as compared with the presidency of Johns Hopkins university and that a New York offer, by whatever pecuniary inducements it might be accompanied, would have no attraction for Dr. Gilman. Later in the day Dr. Gilman returned to Baltimore and threw the university trustees into deep commotion by admitting that he had some correspondence with certain members of the New York board of education. He added that in his opinion the opportunity now open in New York was one of the most extraordinary that has occurred in the history of the country. The use of Dr. Gilman's name appears to have been due solely to the circumstances that at this particular juncture with the new education law just passed, the headships of the schools of Greater New York would afford an opportunity of almost incalculable service to the system of public school education throughout the United States. But even so, Mr. Gilman's friends will make every effort to keep him at the head of the university he has built up and which is the object of his pride and devotion.

BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

First Day's Sessions Well Attended—Officers for the Ensuing Year.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 21.—In spite of the cold rain the three meetings held by the Baptist Publication society on the first day of the convention were well attended. At the evening session Rev. James Larsen of Michigan, Rev. I. N. Vass of Georgia and Frank D. Hall of North Dakota delived addresses. The following officers were elected: Samuel A. Crozzer of Pennsylvania, president; A. J. Rowland, D. D., secretary; J. G Walker, D. D., recording secretary; Col. C. H. Bauer, treasurer, and Edward Goodman, Illinois; Joshua Lovering, Maryland; Rev. George E. Horr, Massachusetts, and J. W. Sarles, D. D., New Jersey, vice-presidents.

NOTHING TO SAY AT PRESENT.

Platt Says He May Reply To Miller's Buffalo Interview Later On.

New York, May 21.—Both Mr. Platt and Speaker Fish returned to the city last evening. Mr. Platt, when seen this morning, was disinclined to talk, either concerning the reason of his visit to Gov. Morton or concerning Warner Miller's Buffalo interview, in which he said that half the New York's delegation would go to St. Louis favoring McKinley's candidacy. Mr. Platt intimated, however, that he might have something to say about this latter feature later on. Speaker Fish was equally non-committal.

Cuban Spaniards Indignant.

Havana, May 21.—The Spanish residents of Havana are highly indignant over the allusion to Queen Regent Christina as a "cruel monarch," alleged to have been made during a recent speech in the United States senate by Mr. Morgan. All of the newspapers here protest strongly against the use of such language.

Want the Bermuda Overhauled.

Colon, May 21.—It is reported here that the Spanish government has requested the Colombian authorities to overhaul the filibustering steamer Bermuda should that vessel be found in Colombian waters. The British authorities here threaten to make a strong protest against such an action and the gunboat Cordova is detained here awaiting developments.

Ung Fong To Be Deported.

Boston, May 21.—Ung Fong, a Chinaman, was before the United States district court yesterday, charged with being unlawfully in this country, and the court held that he should be deported to China. The Chinaman's attorney appealed from the decision and Ung will remain in jail until the United States supreme court passes on the question.

Granite Cutters Strike.

Barre, Vt., May 21. — Nearly 100 union granite cutters of Marr & Gordon and E. L. Smith & Co., are on strike owing to the alleged employment of a number of non-union men in violation of the agreement made last winter. The strike is not yet general among local shops.

To Join Striking Carpenters.

Buffalo, May 21.—The members of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners have decided to join their fellow workers of the Brotherhood of Carpenters in the effort to enforce an eight hour day.

Seersucker Strike a Failure.

Lewiston, Me., May 21.—The strike among the seersucker weavers at No. 3 Bates mill is generally considered at an end. The strike was a failure.

A curious thing about statesmen on the fence is that they generally have an eye on some post or other.—Philadelphia Times.

The Town Improvement Society of Plainfield is offering prizes for the best-kept back yard. The inference from this, it is said, is that the front yards are all daisies.—N. Y. World.

At the time Editor Reiner's bail was fixed at $13,500 for the charges of libel preferred by Mayor Rankin, The Daily Press was the only paper in the State to insist that it was too much, not that it was in sympathy with Reiner, but because it believed the amount to be excessive and extraordinary. The action of the Grand Jury in making a presentment against Justice Niel for demanding excessive bail proves that The Press was right.

The records of this State in regards to Governor's vetoes and bills which have failed to become laws during the last ten years, seem very incomplete. According to the printed minutes of the Legislature, the veto messages of the Governors numbered as follows: In 1895, 18; 1894, 15; 1893, 6. The index of the minutes for 1892, 1891 and 1890 shows no veto messages by Gov. Abbett. Gov. Green's veto messages were: In 1888, 11; 1888, 22; 1887, 2. In 1886, at the end of Gov. Abbett's first term, he wrote 21 veto messages. The following is the number of bills marked "vetoed" in the records of bills kept by the State Librarian: 1895, 12; 1894, 25; 1893, 49; 1892, 55; 1891, 56, 1890, 23; 1889, 22. The number of laws signed in the last ten years was as follows: 1895, 434; 1894, 354; 1893, 292; 1892, 296; 1891, 285; 1890, 311; 1889, 297; 1888, 237; 1887, 182; 1886, 279. Gov. Griggs has so far signed 217 bills and has 5 remaining for action in his hands. He has vetoed 69 bills.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A Piece of Steel the Cause.

Geo. Fiering, driver of the chemical engine, has had a very peculiar though painful experience. For the past three weeks he has suffered intense pain over the right eye, but he could discover no cause for it. Last evening he called on Dr. Adams and an examination was made. The doctor made a slight incision and discovered a very small particle of steel which was removed. Mr. Fiering has no knowledge of how the substance entered the skin. The eye suffers considerable pain yet as a result of the operation.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—B. Fosgate, the architect, is going to take rooms in the Harney building.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel will hold a sociable tonight.

—The wiring for the Dunellen extension of the trolley was about completed today.

—A concrete walk is being laid on West Front street in front of the Jackson building.

—The Missionary Society of Hope chapel held a meeting in the chapel at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

—The members of the W. C. T. U., will furnish bouquets for the G. A. R. veterans on Decoration Day.

—John Cory, of West Front street, has had a fine concrete walk laid around and in front of his house.

—The first floor of the new City National Bank building has been lowered to the level of the sidewalk.

—L. W. Serrell, of West Front street, is having his front porch enlarged, which makes a great improvement.

—The Sunday school of the East Third Street mission will meet hereafter at 3 o'clock instead of 2:30 as heretofore.

—Street Commissioner Meeker and his men are now busy making an outlet for water on Spooner avenue, near Fourth street.

—The Christian Endeavor meeting at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening will be of special interest to all who attend.

—"Blue and Gray" number. See the late George F. Root's "Message of Peace" in Truth Saturday. All trains and newsstands.

—The interior of A. D. Thompson's house at Netherwood is being handsomely decorated by Woolston & Buckle, of North avenue.

—The American Volunteers will hold an ice-cream festival and special meeting at Reform Hall on Decoration Day evening at 7:45 o'clock.

—Fine crushed stone is being placed on West Front street, along the Dunellen extension of the trolley. The horse roller is being used along the above street getting it in shape to use the cars.

—Persons in arrears to the city for taxes are notified by Delinquent Tax Collector Bird to settle their bills on or before June 2d, or he will by law be compelled to advertise their names in the city newspapers on that day.

—After the completion of the trolley extensions the cars will be run till 12 o'clock midnight. A car will leave the city line at Dunellen at that hour, and if there are any passengers, will take them where they want to go.

—The Jersey Wheel Company have a very fine stock of Spalding's goods, including golf sticks, balls, croquet and tennis sets. Everything in the sporting goods line can be found at the above place in endless varieties.

—The iron fence which stood for years in front of the First Methodist Episcopal church, has been removed, and the two gas lamps will be placed near the curb. The changes add greatly to the appearance of the church.

—The announcement by a Plainfield exchange that Lawyer John A. Frech had decided to open an office in that city was somewhat premature. It may be said, however, that he has been offered inducements in that direction. —Somerset Messenger.

—People living on East Second street in the vicinity of Watchung avenue, are complaining about the constant squeak made by the windmills in the rear of the buildings on North avenue. A drop of oil would no doubt remedy the difficulty.

—The question is being asked why the city doesn't place the old hook and ladder truck in the West End where it is needed. The truck was put into good condition at an expense to the city, and is now standing idle in the rear of Gazelle engine house. The Council should not hesitate to take some action in this matter.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. The Young Christian Workers in Session at Trenton.

The fourth annual conference of the New Jersey State Epworth League was opened in the Central Methodist Episcopal church in Trenton yesterday and will be continued today. Edgar B. Moore, State president of the league, called the conference to order and welcomed the 500 delegates, a large majority of whom were women.

The report of Secretary F. J. Lovett shows that there are 712 chapters in the league, with a total membership of 43,099. Of these the Newark conference has 243 senior chapters, with 12,651 members, and ninety-six junior chapters with 4,354 members. The New Jersey conference has 212 senior chapters with 17,837 members, and 116 junior chapters with 8,755 members. The total amount of money collected by the League during the year was $22,809.52. The various chapters are classified into eight districts as nearly as possible conforming to New Jersey's Congress districts. Superintendent of the Junior Epworth League Work S. H. Thompson, of Camden, reported an increase of thirty-one chapters and 919 members during the year.

The nominations offered by the Nominating Committee follows: President, F. J. Lovett, Newark; vice-presidents, W. R. Winters, Burlington; Lavinda S. Murphy, Freehold; Professor W. H. Russell, Merchantville; R. B. Cleveland, Elizabeth; corresponding secretary, George W. Scarborough, Pennington; reading secretary, W. E. Taylor, Jersey City; treasurer, George C. Baker, Camden; superintendent of junior work, S. H. Thompson, Camben; Advisory Board. E. B. Moore, Elizabeth, member-at-large; Lewis Potter, Woodbridge; Landley Clayton, Paterson; Robert N. Collyer, Bayonne; Charles W. Qulick, New Brunswick; Maurice Ely, Trenton; H. L. Titus, Camden; S. M. Fox, Milleville.

Silas D. Drake to Reside at Bound Brook

Several capitalists from Philadelphia and Trenton have induced S. D. Drake to locate his real estate office at Bound Brook, in connection with his other offices at other places, to operate and handle real estate for them on the Central Railroad and Lehigh Valley Railroad. Mr. Drake will reside at Bound Brook after June 1. He says there is a great future for real estate in that section, on account of the opening up of the trolleys from Plainfield to Bound Brook, and the great railroad centre at Bound Brook.—Elizabeth Journal.

A Pleasant Event.

A pleasant party was tendered by Mr. and Mrs. James Flynn to their daughter, Miss Nora Flynn, last night, at their home in the West End. A large number of guests were present, among them being the Misses Mary Pendor, Margaret Ryan, B. Reville, N. Lawler, M. Lawler, M. Reville, M. Cottor, Lizzie Keefe, Nora Flynn, Lizzie Flynn, A. Higgins, Messrs. P. Mack, J. Scott, D. Keefe, M. Keefe, P. Lawler, C. Walsh, W. Shannon, C. Shannon, F. McInerney, E. Kline, J. Kiely, M. Higgins, J. Monahan, Mr. and Mrs. Geoller and Mr. and Mrs. Flynn.

Twenty-five Years a Choirmaster.

On Sunday next William R. Cock will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his service as choirmaster of Grace P. E. church. Such a long term of faithful service is well deserving of special notice. It should be given as a just reward to him who has so freely bestowed his time and labor for the improvement of the music of church. Very seldom, and never without a good cause, has he been absent from a Sunday service or a weekly rehearsal during the quarter of a century.

Fire Laddies Have a Good Time.

The members of Engine Company No. 2 enjoyed a little outing last night. They met at the fire department headquarters and then Randolph's stage carried them to Taylor's Hotel where a spread was served and the evening was spent very pleasantly. Part of the evening was spent in the bowling alley where two teams, composed of the firemen, fought out a most exciting battle of the pins.

—Iona Council, D. of P. met last night. Only routine business was transacted.

PRESERVE THE COUNTY ROADS.

Mayor Thomas Young, of Fanwood, Discusses the Question.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—If there is anything of which New Jersey has reason to be proud, it is the magnificient system of county roads which run through nearly all of its northern counties, and of these Union county, the pioneer, still holds the lead.

The amount of hard cash which these roads have cost the people runs up well into the hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of dollars. They are great attractions in bringing into the State as permanent citizens, people who delight in riding, driving or wheeling, thereby adding to the assessable property and materially assisting in the repayment of their cash.

Quite recently a giant monopoly under the name of "Consolidated (or some other) Traction Company," has come among us and is rapidly swallowing up the entire system of roads; and like all other "grabs" want everything in sight, without compensating in the slightest degree for anything.

They are now trying ro get the county road from Plainfield to Elizabeth. If there is any doubt about the utter destruction and ruination which the trolley will bring to the county road, all that is necessary to convince any unprejudiced person is to visit a point opposite the Netherwood station, where for a few hundred feet a track has been laid in the middle of the macadam road.

Trolley roads are good things in their place and a benefit to the general public in many instances, but they should under no circumstances be allowed to get pessession of the county roads or any others without paying for the privilege.

The county road is not the only one between the points named, but it is probably graded in a more satisfactory manner and that may be the reason for their wanting it.

I understand the Board of Freeholders is opposed to the "iniquitious grab," and are not likely to allow it to be consummated, but the people ought to give them such a rousing and hearty approval that they will have the general public behind them.

Thos. S. Young.

HANDICAPPED BY ACCIDENTS.

Facilities of the Electric Light Company Restricted by Breakdowns.

The saying that misfortunes never come singly seems to hold true in the case of the Plainfield Electric Light Company at the present time. Last Saturday evening they had a fire, and during the first part of this week the shaft of their largest engine broke and then one of their large dynamos was stopped temporarily by the burning out of the armature.

The loss of so much power was felt in the evenings and it was found necessary to shut off several of the further street circuits, including Fanwood and a portion of North Plainfield, until later in the evening when not much current was needed on the house circuit. It has been necessary to do this for several evenings, but their workmen have been hard at work trying to repair the engine and it is hoped that it will be ready this evening.

Transvaal Prisoners Sentenced as a Matter of Form.

FIFTEEN YEARS EACH FOR LEADERS

The Sentences Will Probably Not Be Put into Effect—Immediate Liberty and Short Sentences for the Other Prisoners.

London, May 21.—A dispatch from Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of the Cape Colony, has been received by the government in which it is announced that the Transvaal authorities have reached a decision in the cases of fifty-nine of the members of the reform union who were recently convicted in connection with the conspiracy against the South African republic and who were sentenced to imprisonment, fine and banishment. A number of these prisoners will be released immediately and others will be given their freedom at the expiration of three months, while a part of those still remaining in custody will be allowed to renew their requests for a cancellation of their sentences after five months shall have elapsed, and four of the condemned men will be given the same privilege at the end of the year from the date of their sentences. That portion of the judgment of the court imposing a fine upon the convicted men will stand, but the banishment clause will be suspended provided the prisoners give their word of honor not to interfere in future in the politics of the republic.

Their Sentences a Matter of Form.

As regards Col. Frank W. Rhodes, Lionel Philips, George Farrar and John Hays Hammond, the leaders of the Johannesburg reform committee, who were condemned to death for high treason against the Transvaal, Gov. Robinson's dispatch says their sentences have been commuted to fifteen years' imprisonment, with a provision for their future commutation. These cases will be considered by the executive council of the Transvaal next week. Gov. Robinson further states that he learns that the commutation of the sentences of the four leaders in the reform movement to imprisonment for fifteen years was merely a matter of form, as it was necessary to impose some sentence upon the prisoners immediately, and the sentences will probably not be put into effect.

Americans Among Them.

The government has received the names of the prisoners whose sentences have been commuted. The men who are to be released at once are nine in number. Among them are the Americans H. J. King, Capt. Mein and Butters. Those who are to be released after three months number nineteen and include F. R. Lingham, an American. Among eighteen who are to serve five months before being allowed to renew their requests for their release are the Americans V. B. Clement and J. W. Leonard. The four who are to serve a year include Hamilton and S. W. Jameson, brother of Dr. Jameson. The cases of four others have not been considered by the executive council, owing to the fact that the prisoners have not as yet presented any petition for a reversal or commutation of their sentences. These include the American Sampson. The list received by the government contains the names of five others, but in which group they belong is not definitely known. The name of J. S. Curtis of New York does not appear upon the list.

EDMUND DRURY'S DEATH.

The Drowned Man a Well-Known Actor and Formerly Lived in Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 21.—Owen D. Jones, 30 years old, whose body was recovered from the bay at Brooklyn, N. Y., yesterday, was known all over the country as Edmund Drury, an actor of tragedy and strong melodramatic parts. He was the son of a wealthy Wilkesbarre family, his father being Thomas Jones, a retired builder of this city. Jones acted with Kate Claxton for two years as Pierrie, the cripple, and made a big success in that part. He joined the Couldock company in "Hazel Kirke" and played opposite to Effie Ellsler. About six years ago as Richmond to George C. Milne's Richard III. he made another big hit in this city, and had several offers to star in Shakespearian drama. During an engagement here Jones met a Miss Richards, who had a fortune of $70,000 in her own name. She fell in love with him, and in spite of the remonstrance of her people, married him and went on the stage with him in small parts. He was making $100 a week at the time, and the two were happy together until the drinking habit took possession of the man and he and his wife parted. Jones' death was accidental. He fell off the dock about a week ago.

A Great Battle.

Do consumptives recover? Yes, thousands of them. Even after the disease has a firm hold? Yes, no doubt about it. After cavities have been formed and hemorrhages have occurred? Yes, even then. If the system is too weak, the disease will probably conquer, but if the body can be reinforced there is a fair chance for a winning fight. For twenty years, thousands have testified how they gained the victory.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites is still coming to the rescue. Out-door life, fresh air, and good pluck are of immense value. But in addition to these the body must be supplied with that peculiar kind of fat which is found only in cod-liver oil; combined with valuable medicinal agents; and there must be the tonic effect which comes from the hypophosphites. It is a great battle, and a great victory is often gained.

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Compan

In the meantime Miss Gray and I were getting on famously. We walked the deck together, we hazarded small bets on the steamer's daily run, and we shared in the somewhat limited list of mid-ocean amusements. While the moonlight evenings lasted we gave the Queen of Night every chance in the world to exercise her mischievous sway; but for once, at least, her powers failed. I do not mean to suggest that our conversation was always coldly matter-of-fact. A vein of sentiment ran through it at times, but on the whole we kept well within the bounds of everyday friendship, which for two young persons placed as we were approached the remarkable. There were confidences exchanged, to be sure, or, to speak more precisely, she heard a good deal of my experiences and hopes and she confided to me a little of hers. It may be that the difference was due to the subtle power she possessed of arousing in others faith of the sort which leads to such confessions. Thus it came to pass that she acquired a fairly accurate idea of the life I had led and of the problems which confronted me, while I learned only the outlines of her story. Her parents were dead, and for the last dozen years she had been with her aunt, who was a childless widow. Never the possessor of vigorous health, Mrs. Loring had gradually worried herself into the conviction that she was a mere physical wreck. Having no home ties, and being able to indulge in a liking for travel, she had devoted herself to journeying about in quest of a cure. She and her niece had visited most of the noted cities of Europe, had spent two winters in Northern Africa, and now were voyaging back to England after a short stay in Brazil.

With the exception of a storm encountered north of the line, the Bedouin met fine weather, and, after a good passage, steamed slowly into the Thames. I have only a clouded recollection of the scene when we went ashore, though perhaps the most vividly recalled incident is the impressive farewell of Burroughs and his inamorata, by force of circumstances more pantomime than dialogue. Mrs. Loring and her niece were bound for Paris. My way lay westward.

"So sorry to lose you, doctor—so sorry," Mrs. Loring declared. "Actually, really actually, doctor, I believe you understand my trouble better than anybody else I ever met—and oh, Dr. Morris, I have met so many! It makes me shudder, sometimes, to think of them all. But now we're going to Paris, dear Paris—Dorothy, don't let that cabman handle that valise so carelessly! The government shouldn't permit such men to have cabs. Yes, as I was saying, Paris is so delightful, and it would be so pleasant if you could be there with us. Dear, dear! he's dropped it just as if it were a stone! Dorothy, please do caution him. Now, doctor, we must say au revoir; not good-by, you know, for we shall meet again, really we shall, but au revoir. And I'm so grateful to you! I really can't tell you how grateful I am. You must send us your address, doctor, and we'll send you ours; and when we go back to America we shall see you again. Oh, I know we shall. Goodness gracious! he's got the bag with the medicine-bottles in it!"

Mrs. Loring dashed forward to prevent a catastrophe.

"I trust that your aunt is a good prophetess," I said to Miss Gray. "When do you think you will return to the states?"

"Before very long, I hope; it may be within a year."

"Then where will you make your home?"

"I can hardly guess. Our plans, you know, are most uncertain."

"Dorothy, Dorothy!" Mrs. Loring called.

"I trust that you will have a delightful trip," said I. "Our voyage on the Bedouin—most pleasant—er—er—wish you—er—er—all manner—good fortune."

"And aunt and I wish you every success," she answered. "Remember, as she says, it is au revoir, and not good-by."

She drew her hand from mine — I don't know just how long it had been in my clasp—and I had the melancholy pleasure of assisting her to enter the cab. Then the vehicle rumbled away, leaving behind a sorrowing young man, who stood watching it grow smaller and smaller in the distance, and who, physician though he was, risked pneumonia by forgetting, for a most unreasonable time, to replace his hat upon his head.

IV.

I landed in New York on the third day of the new year, woefully lacking in projects for my future. The metropolis seemed to offer no promising field, and I soon gave up my idea of adding another unit to its hundreds of thousands. Then came thoughts of the west; but a chance meeting with an old classmate, who had ventured into that El Dorado of impoverished youth and had returned even poorer than he went forth, was taken as a warning against imitating his example. So, at last, accepting Hobson's choice, I reappeared in the city from which Capt. Peck had lured me, and once more entered the crowded ranks of its physicians. It was a growing, bustling, active community, but my share in its general prosperity seemed destined to be sadly limited.

I secured cheap quarters in one of the poorer residence districts, thereby, perhaps, handicapping myself greatly, but at the same time reducing expenses to a point made advisable by a light purse. Still, in spite of the most rigid economy, the outgo constantly exceeded the income. From a small margin to the good I passed to a small balance on the wrong side of the ledger. Worst of all, this balance grew, not rapidly, for I thought twice before spending a penny, but with the steadiness resulting from an unseemly disproportion between earnings and expenses. None of the old patients returned to me—though that was hardly a matter of regret—and new ones were few and far between. Now and then an accident case—what a keen eye I kept upon buildings in course of construction in the neighborhood! then perhaps a call to attend some stranger fallen in a fit on the pavement; then a sufferer from some chronic malady, even deeper in debt than I, and changing physicians simply because the charity of the first was worn out; such was the shadow of a practice which appeared never likely to round out into a reality. My garments of decent black became shiny with use, while my bell-pull lost its polish through rust. If I looked as hungry as I often felt, it was no wonder that the ailing passed me by. Little by little the few articles in my possession of which there was not absolute need disappeared. Some were sold outright; others were lodged with pawnbrokers.

This state of things continued for more than a year, my lot growing more miserable day by day. At long intervals letters came from Ferez. My replies were mailed with the promptness of a man whose time hangs heavy on his hands. There was no attempt in my letters to conceal my troubles; there was a certain relief in setting forth an indictment of the world in general and my neighbors in particular. More than once I was sorely tempted to seek a loan from him, but pride stood in the way. I had not quite reached the point of utter defeat, but I was very close to it. Not a word had been heard of Mrs. Loring and her niece, who, for all I knew, might be in Europe, Asia, Africa, or America. Letters had come from Mrs. Peck, telling me that she was at her home in Maine, awaiting the return of her husband from another voyage round the Horn. Her health, she was happy to add, appeared to be reestablished.

As has been set forth, the test of endurance went on for more than a twelvemonth. It was ended in a strange manner, without warning, and at a time when I was near to despair. The landlord had attempted again to collect a part of the money due him—he could scarcely be said to have hounded me for it, inasmuch as he had suffered so undesirable a tenant to fall several months in arrears—and once more he had been put off with excuses and apologies. He had not been harsh in his replies, but it was easy to understand that his patience was fairly exhausted. He had left me still in possession, but I feared that a few days more would see me turned into the street and almost as hopeless as a shipwrecked sailor on a barren island. In either case starvation would be quite among the possibilities.

After a frugal supper I tried to read, but with very slight success, my thoughts wandering repeatedly from the book to the approaching crisis in my affairs. It must have been for hours that I sat brooding over my perplexities. At last, more discouraged than ever by the unvarying trend of the reflections, I started to my feet, and, crossing to the window, raised the curtain and peered out. It was later than I supposed, for the lights had disappeared from the houses across the way and the pavement seemed to be deserted. Turning back to my desk, I filled a pipe. Tobacco was the sole luxury left to me, and the stock in my pouch was running low.

There came a knock at the door, a light tap thrice repeated. As I answered the summons a man stepped into the room, and, with a quick motion, closed the door behind him. He was of medium height, thin, sallow-faced, hooked-nosed, with crisp, black hair and mustache shot with gray.

"Dr. Alfred Morris?" he asked.

I bowed and motioned him to a chair. Disregarding the invitation, he drew a letter from his pocket.

"For you—this," said he.

The envelope bore no address. Breaking the seal, I drew out a sheet of paper on which was written: "Let the bearer command all good offices." In place of the name of the writer was a Greek cross with three dots beside it. A second glance at the words above the device satisfied any doubts as to the identity of the man whose hand had penned them.

"This is the best of introductions," said I. "Pray be seated. In what way can I assist you?"

"It is a matter of a confidential character," he answered, with a glance about the room.

"You may speak freely. There is no one to play the eavesdropper."

"That is well. I will endeavor to trespass upon but little of your time."

He spoke with a peculiar slowness, almost hesitancy (as if picking his words with great care), and with a marked accent, which at once betrayed that English was not his native tongue.

"You may command me," said I. "But pardon me, your name is not given in this note."

"My name? Ah, you may call me Lamar."

He came closer and fixed a pair of piercing eyes upon me.

"Dr. Morris," said he, "I request you to suffer me to pass by my reasons for coming here."

"Your credentials are enough," said I. "Rest assured I shall question you on no point you prefer not to explain."

"And I may request also secrecy, in any event, regarding this meeting?"

"I give you my word, as I have said, that you may command me."

He paused, as if to reach a decision in some matter of great moment. I studied him with increasing curiosity, my interest fired by the strange circumstances of his visit.

"I make you, then, a proposition," he said, at last. "I wish to obtain the right of your time and attendance."

I stared at him in blank amazement. What could he mean? Did he propose to retain me as his private physician? Was he sufficiently wealthy to indulge in such luxuries? His dress told nothing on that score. He might have been a thrifty mechanic or a millionaire.

"And I may request also secrecy."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Mary VanFleet, of East Third street, has purchased a new wheel.

Eight Crescent wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday.

E. E. Marshall, of North avenue, has purchased a handsome Pierce wheel, through the agency of Frank Vail.

Alfred C. Green, one of the fast men of the Greenwich Wheelmen, will ride at the Crescent Oval on Decoration Day.

The Jersey Wheel Company has a window full of Spalding's athletic goods. They were arranged by Geo. W. Scribner.

A number of entries will be made by the Union County Roadsters in the ten-mile championship race of Union county on June 6th.

Arthur P. Miller and Victor Christofferson rode to Somerville yesterday afternoon. The strong east wind made the return ride a hard one.

The Greenwich Wheelmen have decided to send their racing team to this city on Decoration Day to compete in the Crescent Wheelmen's big meet.

L. R. Lefferson, of Lakewood, who rode last year under the Harlem Wheelmen's colors, has entered the Decoration Day races at the Crescent Oval.

The New Jersey Division of the L. A. W. will organize a league association composed exclusively of women's clubs. There are two women's clubs in New Jersey.

The Jersey Wheel Company have received a full line of Richmond wheels, for both men and women, at $100 and $85 each. The are strictly high grade in every respect.

Fred J. Titus, the will-known crack rider, and "Baron" Ernest T. Hand, of Westfield, stopped at the Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon for a short time, on their way to Asbury Park. They were riding a tandem.

Pittsburg bicycle dealers have organized a protective association to prevent the theft of wheels. The number of each wheel is recorded, and the moment one is missed every dealer and repairer in the country is notified.

Many young boys are seen daily on the streets and cycle roads riding with "ram's-horn" or racing handle-bars, a hump in their backs, their lungs compressed, and going as if for a wager. Parents and guardians should correct such practices in their children, as serious injury may result.

Of course, the Y. M. C. A. cyclers will make no attempt to go to Summit as even if it did not rain, the muddy condition of the roads would make riding something very bad. The committee on runs has decided to postpone the run until tomorrow night as was agreed at the meeting of the league held at Westfield.

Among the crack-a jacks that expect to ride at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet are H. R. Steenson and Fred H. Allen, of the Fontenac racing team of Syracuse. Allen is the professional who recently broke the Ohio State record by riding an exhibition mile in 1:57. He will make it lively for the other riders.

Gus Burglund. the coach and trainer of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, has a novel but very effective method of coaching the men at the Crescent Oval. He stands at some central point and with the autophone, that speaking trumpet-like instrument used in announcing, he gives his orders so that the riders are enabled to hear distinctly.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club has usually, in years past, had a hustling racing team on the track. This year they will be represented on the track by a bunch of cracks and have decided to send their team here to race on Decoration Day in the Crescent Wheelmen's big meet. So far Clarence Bird, H. F. Loches and N. J. English. English is a new man at track racing, but promises to do some hustling before the season is over.

Out of the 177 entries received for the 25 mile handicap Milburn road race, which will be held on May 30th, it is expected that 150 riders will start. The entries are now in the hands of Handicapper Prial. The 25 mile Milburn road record now stands at 1 hour, 11 minutes, 18 seconds, and is held by H. H. Barnett, of Elizabeth. It is predicted that the record will be reduced to 1 hour and 8 minutes this year, in which event the race will prove one of the most noteworthy road contests ever held.

The regular monthly meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen was held last evening, but no business of importance was transacted. The membership cards were distributed at the meeting. At the last meeting, H. S. Thomas gave notice that he would propose an amendment at this meeting relating to the change in the club uniform. He was detained at home by illness last night and nothing was done regarding the uniform. Most of the time was spent in an informal discussion of different matters relating to the club, especially the coming meet. The committees reported favorably, and it was the general impression that Plainfield is to have a very successful meet on Decoration Day.

The road from Irvington to Milburn the regular race course, was yesterday in anything but a good condition. Out of Irvidgton, up the several hills, the road is covered with small, sharp-cornered stones. The level stretch is in only fair condition, the right side being still impassable for wheels. The steep hill to the right, where the road branches to Springfield to the left, is in course of repair. A top dressing of small stones and clay is being made smooth, but the process, seemingly left to nature, is slow. The committee having charge of the races would, if they had the money, greatly improve the road by employing a sprinkling-cart and roller for a few days. They would lay the sharp stones and settle the new top dressing and save many tires at the races.

Many Plainfielders do not even know of the existence of the track known as Maltby's track, while many more, who have heard of it, do not know of its location. It can be reached by following Grant avenue to its southern end and then turning to the right. A ride of about 100 yards brings one to the track. It is about three-eighths of a mile around with the corners banked very slightly. The space in the centre is devoted to the raising of rye. At present the track is in very good condition and early every evening there are quite a number of riders that take a little practice spin about the track. Probably the best known among those that frequent this track is Chas. P. Rydell, who will probably ride in the Irvington-Milburn race this year. Walter Manning, who rode in the 100-mile race several years ago, is another of the riders who often visit the track. There is also a party of colored riders, who are training for a road race to be held on Park avenue within the next few weeks, that spend part of their evenings here. Every evening quite a throng of spectators, in which the fair sex is represented, assemble to watch the riders. On this track the boys of Washington Park will hold their races next Saturday afternoon.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The meeting of the business men's gymnasuim class at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon was one of the most successful that has been held for some time. Twelve were present. The cooler temperature made the exercise very enjoyable and there was a snap and vigor in the different exercises that has been lacking since the warm weather has come. A lively game of basket ball closed the meeting of the class.

AROUND THE BASES.

The game for Decoration Day afternoon that was scheduled, to be played here between the Woodbridge "Browns" and the Y. M. C. A. nine of this city has been declared off on account of the races at the Crescent Oval. The game will be played at Woodbridge instead.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

In the informal bowling match that followed the meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last evening, Alfred Baker succeeded in breaking his own high score by rolling 246. This is a remarkable performance, considering the time of year.

One minute is the standard time, and One Minute Cough Cure is the standard preparation for every form of cough or cold. It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. For sale by L. W. Randolph 143 West Front Street.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

H. A. Weber, Sam Schleiff and Geo. Martin were angling for carp at New Market yesterday and brought home a large catch.

Elvin VanName, Ed Eaton and Alex Ayres have been on fishing expeditions along the Raritan river lately and report large catches.

Someone caught a four-pound carp day before yesterday in Tier's lake and left the same on the bank alongside the lake, where it now is.

Immediately after this storm good fishing for eels, catfish and suckers can be had at New Market pond, the lake at Sebring's mills, in the Raritan and below the dam at Bound Brook.

WHIST.

The Orange Whist Club is now in the lead in the State Trophy contests, having five victories to its credit. The North End Club has four and the Park Club, of North Plainfield, four. The next game for the trophy will be played May 30th, between the New Jersey Athletic Club and the Orange Whist Club. The athletic club has strengthened its team with S. Jones, and the game will be an interesting one to see.

LAWN TENNIS.

A lawn tennis club is being organized by a number of the young ladies living in Watchung Park and vicinity.

Work has been started on the new court of the Dunellen Tennis Club, and it is expected that it will be completed in time for Decoration Day.

Albert P. Simmonds has entered the tournament for the single championship of New Jersey, which will be held on the courts of the Hohokus Valley Club on June 3d.

Fire in an Ice House.

A fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the ice house owned by the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, on West Front street, near Grant avenue. Employes of the Central Railroad who happened to be near, assisted in extinguishing the flames. The supposition is that sparks from a passing locomotive was the cause of the fire. Word was sent to fire headquarters, but the apparatus was not needed as the fire was quickly put out.

Great Loss of Life.

Buffalo, May 21.—A disaster occurred here this morning by which it is believed that at least twenty persons were either killed or badly injured.

A large gang of workmen were repairing the building at Main and Seneca streets, known as the Brown building, which had been occupied until May 1st by the Western Union Telegraph Co., when the structure collapsed, burying many in the debris.

—The executive committee of the Town Improvement Associarion met at the Casino this morning and indulged in a preliminary discussion as regards what might be done with the elm beetle. Nothing definite was decided.

Bankruptcy Decision.

Boston, May 21.—The plaintiff's exceptions in the action brought by James Huntington versus William A. Saunders has been overruled by the full bench of the supreme court, which holds that a discharge under the bankruptcy laws of the United States is a bar to a judgment recovered in suits commenced and after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings on a debt which was provable in bankruptcy.

HOME MISSION WORK.

Ninety-seventh Annual Report of the Massachusetts Congregational Society.

Fall River, Mass., May 21.—The ninety-seventh annual report of the Massachusetts Home Missionary society shows receipts this year of $118,073 which is $11,951 less than they were last year. Of the total receipts, $40,577 came from the income and sale of Swett funds, and $108,396 was from all other sources. Gifts from the living amount to $67,367, which is $11,810 more than last year. Legacies amount to $54,129, which is $19,987 less than last year. There has been sent to the Congregational Home Missionary society in New York from Massachusetts this year $164,041.77. The cost of missionary service in this state has been $60,035, and of administration $6,648.45. Of the $60,035 there has been used in foreign home missions $23,400. There has been used in evangelistic work $11,127, and for the old work of the society, helping old churches and aiding new enterprises, $25,508. Grants have been made to 142 churches. The whole number of missionaries has been 138. The average salary of the missionary, $791.90. The number of families reported as coming under the care of missionaries is 7,704. There have been received into the churches on confession of faith, 694; by letter, 351. For [illegible] work must be dropped, which would be so wrong as not to be seriously contemplated, or money to carry it on must be taken from the ordinary receipts, which would reduce by so much our gifts for the western work; or the churches by increasing gifts must assume this additional burden.

NOT A RETALIATORY MEASURE.

Export of Cuba Tobacco Stopped To Prevent Great Distress in Havana.

Washington, May 21.—Senor Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister, declares that the order prohibiting the export of Tobacco from Cuba is misrepresented in dispatches attributing it to Gen. Weyler as a retaliatory measure against insurgent smypathizers in this country. He says that it is not a political measure in any sense, but was adopted by the government at Madrid after serious consideration to meet an economic necessity; that the government for a long time delayed taking action because of its injury to commerce, but was driven to the step by the fact that without it over 15,000 cigarmakers in Havana would soon be thrown out of work for lack of the raw material, and 50,000 to 60,000 women and children dependent on them would be in danger of starvation. The minister disavows Spanish responsibility for the conditions which have forced the decree. Senor Dupuy De Lome says that Spain has been frequently importuned for the past year to stop the tobacco exportation which gave employment to the chief contributors to the insurgents in this country, but the petitions were steadfastly refused. He declares that there are as many cigar makers in Tampa to-day who are loyal to Spain as there are insurgent supporters, but that all must suffer alike to avoid more serious consequences in Havana.

SENATOR MORGAN MISQUOTED.

He Did Not Speak Personally of the Queen of Spain as a Cruel Monarch.

Washington, May 21.—From the official report of Senator Morgan's recent speech on his Cuban resolutions, as published in the Congressional Record, it seems that the sentence which has caused so much indignation in Spain, wherein Mr. Morgan was made to speak of the queen regent as a "cruel monarch," was inaccurately heard and reported. Mr. Morgan's remarks were general, but not personal, and applied to the Spanish government and not to the queen regent. His actual words were: "The people of the United States, who are so severely censured by the queen regent for their alleged difference in sentiment and opinion from our president as to Cuba, would refuse to support him if, in any way, he should become the virtual ally and helper of that cruel monarchy."

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

PRESERVATION OF TREES

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MEETING OF STATE FORESTRY ASSOCIATION.

A Series of Ten Lectures Arranged to Be Held in Different Parts of the State to Educate and Interest People.

The study of forestry has become of such great importance that the people have formed themselves into an association for the purpose of protecting the God-given shade which is recognized as indispensable. This was brought about through the destruction of trees by a class of people who knew little or nothing of their value. The interest aroused in this matter has spread rapidly until now the most learned and intelligent portion of the people have taken hold of the subject in a way that predicts a preservation of the beautiful trees.

The New Jersey Forestry Association, composed of the best people in the State, met at the Casino yesterday afternoon at three o'clock for the purpose of hearing something more in regard to the objects and aims of the association. There was a large number of people present, and a short business session preceded the regular meeting. Ex-Assemblymen Augustus Cutler, of Morristown, who was the one who inaugurated a department of agriculture, presided, and the secretary, Prof. Griffith, of Trenton, read the minutes of the last meeting; also the treasurer's report which showed the association to be in a most flourishing condition. The question of providing a course of ten lectures during the coming season on forestry was brought up, and the secretary was given power to raise the necessary amount of money toward paying for the same. These lectures will be given in various parts of the State.

The secretary of the State Board of Agriculture reported that progress in forestry was being made and that the school teachers throughout the State had become very much interested. At this time a vote of thanks was extended to Prof. Travell, the women of Plainfield, and all who had assisted in making the meeting a success. A large chorus of young women and men from the public shools were present and sang several selections which the audience enjoyed exceedingly. Especially pleasing was the selection, "Song of the Skylark," with the various parts, and noteworthy was the male voices. Miss Mabel Maxson was the officient accompanist.

Dr. Halstead, a prominent member of the Association, was then introduced by the president and by the aid of charts gave a most admirable address on the "Diseases of Trees." He spoke of the various diseases that trees are heir to, and the peculiar manner in which they work. The principal one spoken of was mildew. He spoke of its rapid growth and how it affected the breathing pores of leafs, working into the stem and branches. The loss of color in leafs, he said, was caused by mildew. A simple remedy was offered for this disease consisting of six pounds of sulphate of copper added to four pounds of lime with a sufficient quantity of water to make about fifty gallons of the preparation. This, the speaker said, would not cure every form of disease that a tree was subject to, but would be found efficacious in most cases. It can be used to advantage in fruit and vegetable gardens. The seed of an inferior plant, otherwise known as a spore, was described by Dr. Halstead in an interesting and intelligent manner. He also spoke of the black knot on the cherry and plum trees, and his advice was that a sharp knife used judiciously would bring about the best results.

At the close of Dr. Halstead's address, B. E. Fernow, Chief of Division of Forestry at Washington, entered the room and was called upon for a few remarks. Mr. Fernow said that as he was to speak in the evening he could not at that time say very much. However, he said that his first acquaintance with trees was at the age of three years. At that time he met the customary twig in a forcible manner. The speaker then briefly spoke of the many uses to which wood was being put, such as in tennis racquets, bicycle rims, handle bars, etc. He stated that he would have more to say later on.

The President closed with a few words of encouragement, after which all joined in singing "Hail Columbia."

The evening session brought together a large and intelligent audience. President Cutler opened the meeting with a few words relative to the prospective concerted action in this city against the elm beetle, and said that he hoped that other places in the State would profit thereby.

Prof. B. E. Fernow was then introduced, and was most heartily received. He said that he felt like the preacher who had the same subject to talk about each Sunday, but had to present it in a different form. Continuing he said in part:

I have been considering what subject would be best adapted to this audience and have concluded to generalize the study of forestry into the following:

"Why Should Every Citizen Take an Interest in This Movement?"

A lack of consideration at the proper time is the cause of difference between capital and labor. The right man of experience forecasts the future and provides for it. The great point nowadays with the forester is how to turn logs into cash quickly. The destruction of forests by fire and cutting has been most damaging, but few people realize the fact. Wood enters every purpose in life, for it is the most convenient.

The forest products in the United States rank second. They are ten times more than gold and silver and six times more than coal. That is the value of the raw products, not after it enters into its thousand uses. It is one of the largest resources of our country and we should take an interest in it. We don't want to stop the cutting of trees by lumbermen. We want to see the trees cut, but we also want to have them reproduced rightly, that is our object. It is the supply and demand that rules. With all other products there is an annual harvest, but it is not so with forests.

The influence of forests on the climate is well established, but the instruments at hand are too poor to ascertain the influence, for they are not reliable. An enjoyable ramble through the woods has proven that the forests are healthful and elevating. The influence of one tree is not large, but it is the massing of trees that brings the results. The tendency of forests is to change high and low temperature, the greatest difference being in the moisture current which keeps the under soil open. The sanitary influence is also a beneficial one. I trust that I have shown every intelligent person present their duty towards the forests, and your organization is a most important one. You should seek such legislation that will bring about the desired result. New Jersey has made a most creditable beginning. You can't expect private owners to take care of their property for the benefit of others. This State has started on the right lines and is sure to accomplish something. My advice is to join the Forestry Association and assist in the cause. At this time, Prof. Fernow having finished, Mayor Gilbert was called for and he responded in his usual excellent manner. He said that he had just finished an address at another meeting, and it would serve his audience just right if he should repeat it to them. He said that it gave him great pleasure to state that Plainfield was noted for its hospitality, its beautiful trees, and he might add its beautiful and energetic women, and he didn't know which of the three graces Plainfield could afford to loose. We love the ladies and we also love the grand old trees. He said that the Town Improvement Association have alarmed us regarding the elm beetle, and if you have any knowledge that will quiet us, let us have it before you leave town. He was glad the convention had come here, and he hoped the Plainfield people had learned something of tree life that will be a benefit to us.

Stopped Before Doing Damage.

While a clerk in the employ of Kersting & Klinsman was delivering bread on West Front street, yesterday, the horse he was driving attempted to run away, and nearly succeeded in doing so. The clerk had just left a customer's house, and before he reached the wagon the animal started on a gallop down West Front street towards Grant avenue. Patrolman Hartpence and Henry Liefke, who happened to be in the neighborhood, succeeded in stopping the animal before any damage was done.

By-Laws Adopted.

The Co-Operative Association met in Red Men's Hall last night. The only business transacted was the adoption of a portion of the by-laws, as proposed by the committee. A committee, consisting of W. G. Gray, W. F. Oliver and R. Gow, was appointed to nominate officers to be elected at a meeting to be held June 1st.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

CHEMICAL'S GOOD WORK.

A HARD FIRE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED EARLY THIS MORNING.

Defective Construction in Mrs. J. E. Corlies' Residence Allowed Flames to Get Headway that Endangered the House

If ever the chemical engine was a welcome sight, it was at the residence of Mrs. J. E. Corlies, of Road's Ending, early this morning. For nearly an hour had the residents and a few neighbors been fighting the fire, but gradually the flames spread and five minutes more would have made the destruction of the house a certainty. Then it was that the chemical engine showed that the confidence of Chief Doane and the firemen had not been misplaced, for in two minutes after a stream was turned on the flames the most of the fire was out and the building saved.

Mrs. Corlies' residence is located at the end of Central avenue, about two miles from the central portion of this city. The house is a large one and is built so that the second floor overhangs the piazza. On the extreme end of the second floor beams there is a chimney over the piazza post. An open fireplace is located in the second floor room at the bottom of the chimney and rests, or did rest before the fire, on flagstone which separates the fire from the beams below. This is exactly what is prohibited in the building ordinance recently passed, which states that there shall be a brick arch to support every chimney and open fireplace.

A fire was started in the fire place at the beginning of the recent cold spell and the heat cracked the flagstone below. Red hot coals set fire to the beams below and the fire began to spread. The conflagration must have started early this morning for when it was discovered at about 4 o'clock it had attained considerable headway. The fire crept along the space between the floors and up between the walls until almost the entire second story was ablaze.

An alarm was sent in by telephone, and the chemical engine, manned by Chief Doane, Second Assistant Chief Murray, Driver George Fiering and Captain Newman, quickly responded. Charles Van Winkle heard the engine and followed.

The stream from the chemical soon extinguished most of the fire and then it was necessary to put out all the little fires in corners and out of the way places where it had crept between the walls. After an hour's hard work, the little delegation from the fire department had extinguished every spark. Instead of flooding the house, less than sixty gallons of water, the contents of one tank of the chemical, was used and the wonderful utility of the new engine was again practically demonstrated.

The damage is estimated at about $500, which was fully covered by insurance.

The support for the chimney was burnt away and it hung "by the eyebrows," making a dangerous thing for the firemen to work under. They luckily managed to escape all injury, but the benefit of the section of the new building ordinance relating to that was very evident

FOURTH STREET CARS RUNNING.

Another Line of the Street Railway Extension Opened Up.

Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, succeeded in placing car No. 2 on the Fourth street line at noon. Regular trips were made. As soon as the work of narrowing the guage is started, car No. 2 will be used on the Front street line in transferring passengers. The reason that car No. 6 does not run to Netherwood is that it takes too long for one car to make the trip and connect with the other cars. The manufacturers of the new cars have promised to make a shipment on Monday. As soon as they arrive they will be put into service.

On Sounding Qualities.

G. A. Audsley, of Grove street, the well-known architect, lectured at the Connecticut Musical Teachers' Association festival held in New Haven last evening. His subject was "Acoustics." He treated the subject in a comprehensive and thorough manner, and was listened to by a large and deeply interested audience.

A Change of Menu.

The patrolmen experienced a change last evening in their lunch. Instead of the sandwiches, two boiled eggs and two slices of bread was given each man. Of course the coffee accompanied the lunch.

—The board walk on Division street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, is in a very bad condition. Only recently a woman nearly sustained serious injury there.

JEWISH RABBI ARRESTED

REV. HORWITZ ACCUSED OF SELLING HARD CIDER ON SUNDAYS.

One of His Parishoners Also Before the Cadi on the Same Charge—Both Pleaded Not Guilty and the Trials Set Down.

The Sunday cider joints still flourish in this city but not openly as before the passage of the ordinance closing them. The police have been aware of the fact and several suspicious places have been closely watched for some time. Today, two men were brought before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of illegal cider selling on Sunday. Chief Grant has kept watch on the movements of these two characters, both of whom come from the West End, and, despite their protests of innocence, is confident that he can prove they have been furnishing cider on the sly. These are not the only ones that are suspected of selling cider but the rest will be arrested in in a few days.

An effort was made to keep the matter very quiet but the details were finally learned. One of the prisoners is a Hebrew named Cassedy. Before the crusade of the Daily Press against the cider joints, he kept one of these resorts on South Second street.

It was run in connection with a general notion store and when the cider joint closed, the store went on. According to the statement of the police, he has been selling on the quiet to some of his old customers.

The other prisoner is the Jewish rabbi, Rev. Mr. Horwitz, who keeps a little store at the corner of Fourth street and Plainfield avenue. He holds a reputable position in the community and an effort was made to keep his identity secret. Before the ordinance was passed, he sold cider the same as the other dealers, but afterward he declares he has never sold a drop.

Chief Grant, when seen by a Press reporter this afternoon, would not say much regarding the matter, but, when questioned regarding Horwitz's statement that he had not been selling cider, that city official smiled suggestively.

The two men were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning and both pleaded not guilty. Their trial was set down for June 1st.

THREE YEARS OF SERVICE.

Endeavorers of East Third Street Mission Celebrate Their Anniversary.

Three years of hard work have made the Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third Street mission a prosperous one, and the members had a right to rejoice last evening at their third anniversary, which was celebrated at the mission by a crowd of enthusiastic Endeavorers from the mission and the home church, the First Baptist.

The room was tastefully decorated with ferns, oak branches and cut flowers, the work of a committee directed by Clifford A. Braider and Robert Schreiner, and presented a charming appearance.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Clifford A. Braider and was followed by a prayer by Rev. D. J. Yerkes, D. D. Robert Barnes, president of the society, gave a violin solo and then read a history of the society, telling how it started three years ago with thirteen consecrated workers in the mission and now had grown to include thirty five active, five honorary and fifteen associate members. He spoke about the Christian activity that had been displayed during the last year and showed that the year had been one of general progress.

Rev. C. E. Herring made the address of the evening, and took for his topic, "Hired, Tried, Fired." He said that the life of a society was divided into three parts and that this society had reached the second. The time of formation was past and the trying time was at hand.

A recitation, "The Irish Washerwoman's Letter" was given by Mrs. E. F. Drake, and William N. Runyon sang several selections. A recitation and song by Edward Wolf was followed by a vocal solo by Miss Jomini, and then Rev. Dr. Yerkes made a few remerks on "Endeavor and Perseverance," and said that the society must hold fast for future developments.

After a vocal trio by the Misses Freeman, refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed. The entire affair was in the hands of a committee of which Irving L. Brady was chairman.

Just a Playful Tap.

Uncle Dan Roberts, the North avenue liveryman, playfully struck one of the men in his office this morning and the fellow went through the plate glass door. Uncle Dan considered that he gave him just a little tap, but if he had been in earnest there is no telling where he would have landed—probably in Van Sickle's meat market.

RAGING "CANAWL" OF MUD.

Horrible Condition of the Crosswalk at Madison Avenue and Second Street.

The recent rains have made the roadway at the corner of Madison avenue and West Second street something to be dreaded by pedestrians that have to pass that way. When the streets were cut down to improve the drainage, the macadam was removed, and now the place is a literal mud hole.

Some individual has evidently enjoyed wading through the sticky soil, and it has made an impression on him. The impression was so strong and thick that he has decided to let it be known. But he was a man with a touch of humor in his make-up, and so he prepared a little surprise.

Early this morning the pedestrians that hurried along were attracted by four large pasteboard signs, one on each corner. The first read: "City canal, next boat July 9th, tickets $3." On the opposite corner the reader was informed that "This street closed by order of the Board of Health." The next sign, had it been true, would have been particularly pleasing to the women that have to wade ankle deep through the mud. It read: "Boats to hire, 10 cents an hour, apply to Street Commissioner Meeker." The last sign was short and sweet and read "Sealed proposals received for a bridge."

A MAY WEDDING.

Pretty Nuptial Event Celebrated in the West End Last Night.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth B. Davis to Fred Dunham took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. S. Gibson in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. The bride was attired in a sky-blue henrietta, with steel colored trimmings, and carried white roses. The bridemaid, Miss Josephine Haris, was attired in white silk, trimmed with lace and pasamentrals, and carried snowballs. The best man was Joseph Titus, of New Brunswick. A reception followed the ceremony at which the following were noticed:

Miss Annie White, Miss Josephine Harris, Miss Mary Cathoran, Edward Cathoran and the Misses Georgia, Emma and Rosie Wheeler, Louise Dunham, Cynthia Redfield, Eliza Dunham, Sharp Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Harper and Harry Dunham, of Metuchen. The happy couple will reside on West Fourth street for the present.

THEY DID NOT EVEN SPEAK.

Colonel Moore and Madam Carre Simply Stared at Each Other.

Colonel Moore, formerly of this city, and erstwhile deputy commissioner under Colonel Waring, and Mme. Carre, who was Colonel Waring's private secretary, met at Fulton street and Broadway on Wednesday, but they did not speak as they passed by.

There is no love lost between them, because it was mainly through the instrumentality of Mme. Carre that Col. Moore was compelled to resign, and he in turn started the crusade which ended in her ousting. Mme. Carre is now employed in the office of Corporation Counsel Scott.

Marvelous Ten-Day Sale.

The marvelous "Ten-Day Sale" at Edsall's Commercial Palace begins tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock. Mr. Edsall has deemed the great sale of sufficient magnitude to warrant him in issuing at considerable expense the first number of Plainfield Social Chat to thoroughly advertise the sale, copies of which are being distributed today. In addition to the hundred or more regular bargains, there will be each day of sale extraordinary offers called "King Bargains."

Good Time for Those Who Attended.

A sociable was held by the Ladies' Aid Society in Warren chapel last night for the benefit and pleasure of the chapel. Joseph Sattels' orchestra rendered numerous selections in an excellent manner and received round after round of applause. Niss N. Herndon also rendered several vocal selections and accompanied herself on the autoharp. Pleasing remarks were made by Rev. J. O. McKelvey. After the entertainment refreshments were served.

Looked Like a Ploughed Field.

Pedestrians who cross the street at Liberty and West Third streets have to go through mud six or eight inches deep. The corner resembles a plowed field more than a city street.

An Attractive Appearance.

The improvements which have been in progress around Monroe Avenue chapel are about completed. The whole block now presents an attractive appearance.

Decoration Day Observance.

All the butchers of this city and the borough will close their places of business on Decoration Day. The grocers will as usual observe the day; in fact all business houses will close.

TWO NURSES GRADUATED

THE FIRST TO COMPLETE IN THE MUHLENBERG TRAINING CLASS.

Mayor Gilbert Talks of the Benefits of the Hospital and How People Appreciate Them—The Medals Presented.

Among all the modern aids to the physician and surgeon, there is none more beneficial and helpful than the trained nurse, whose knowledge of medicine and nursing is such that the physician is assured of proper treatment for his patient. A training school is necessary to prepare them for their work, and such a school, established in connection with Muhlenberg Hospital two years ago, turned out its first two graduates last evening, fully equipped for their life-work.

The graduating exercises were held last evening in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, and were attended by a deeply interested audience that comfortably filled the lower floor of the chapel.

Edward B. Clark, president of the Board of Governors, presided, and after a few introductory remarks, Rev. C. L. Goodrich led in opening prayer. A delightful piano solo by Miss Ada Marsh followed, and then Mayor Alex. Gilbert was called upon for an address. He remarked that it did not seem possible that it was nineteen years ago since the hospital was founded, and when it was so severely criticized.

The time has passed away very stealthily. There have been great changes but we do not realize them except when we stop to recall the times of the past. Plainfield people now appreciate the value of the hospital and point it out as one of the municipal institutions. He referred to the great amount of work done necessary develop the hospital and did not believe that the people of Plainfield really estimated it. He had, he said, no proper conception of the work necessary to place it on a proper basis. The training school alone will justify the public support. It is of great value to the city of Plainfield and when understood by the people will be appreciated.

Woman has shown that she is capable of entering the professions on even terms with the men but in the hospital she is supreme. Man cannot fill the place. The training school gives just what is needed and, said he, these two young women represent what the school can do. We wish them their fullest measure of success.

After a pleasing violin solo by Miss Nella Whiton, accompanied by Miss Marion Dumont, Rev. E. M. Rodman, D. D., made some very witty remarks along an appropriate line. He seconded Mayor Gilbert's speech and spoke about the prejudice against the hospital even at the present day. After a few more remarks by President Clark, there was another piano solo by Miss Marsh, and then Dr. Murray, chairman of the training school committee, spoke from the point of view of the medical board and told how much interested the members of the latter had been in the school from the start.

They realized, he said, the great help that was given by the organization of the school, and it would have been impossible to do the work that has been done had not the school been formed. He next told something of the course, and said that although they could not offer as varied a course as some of the large hospitals, they could give personal instruction which is not given in the large hospitals. After expressing the thanks of the Board to the Governors for starting the school and to the superintendent and the nurses for their conscientious work there, he presented each of the graduates with a class pin from the Board.

President Clark then presented the diplomas with a few appropriate words after which each of the graduates was presented with a handsome bouquet of roses. The two graduates were Miss Ella Grace Clark and Miss Annie Wolf. The rest of the corps of nurses were also present and sat on the platform with the graduating nurses. All were dressed in the regular hospital costume, simple gowns of light color, with the regulation cap and apron.

After another violin solo by Miss Whiton, most of the guests adjourned to the lower floor where refreshments were served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. THE MOSCOW FETES

Enormous Throngs Still Crowd the Streets To-day.

GORGEOUS CORONATION FESTIVITIES

The Pomp and Splendor Attending the Czar and Czarina's Entrance into the City Yesterday Almost Beyond Description.

Moscow, May 22. — Although the thousands of restless and anxious sightseers stood and jostled each other all day yesterday they still thronged the streets all last night, and to-day there is no diminution to the crowds. The great triumphal entry of the czar and czarina into their ancient city yesterday with the brilliant surroundings, the trapping of royalty, the pomp and glory all combined to make ever memorable the most gorgeous entrance into Russia's old capital that has taken place in modern times. Nothing in the western world can approach the spectacular glories of the Russian empire. The Russians are peculiarly fitted for fetes and their festivals are conducted with a splendor of display that cannot be equalled elsewhere in Europe. The brilliancy of the military uniforms and other trappings is something that strikes the unaccustomed observer with astonishment and admiration. Until yesterday the emperor had not officially been in the city. It is estimated that fully a million and a half of people, many of them from the uttermost parts of the empire, witnessed the great spectacle which will go down in Russian history as the greatest pageant ever seen in the dominions of the White Czar.

A Dazzling Scene.

Early in the moring the streets were alive with people who had slept in, or roamed about, the streets all night, and the crowds swarmed at every point along the line of procession. Everywhere could be seen the tall Circassians in long scarlet cloaks, silver and gold helmetted cuirassiers, green and white uniformed hussars, and the odd, bright colored costumes of the Asiatics, all presenting a scene of unequalled magnificence. The decorations of buildings was magnificent. Nearly midway along the route the governor-general's house was hung with bunting in the Russian colors of white, blue and red, and the imperial black, yellow and white, caught up in festoons with imperial shields and wreaths, and gaspiping had been arranged for the night illumination. Just outside the entrance stood four obelisks of considerable height, decorated with flags, armorial bearings and vases. In the small square facing the governor-general's house was an antique pavilion in which the emperor received the nobility of Moscow. This pavilion was surrounded with Venetian masts, from which depended silken banners, bearing inscriptions typifying the life and reign of predecessors of the present emperor. The tribunes inside the Kremlin square, which was reserved for the guests of the emperor, were covered with red cloth, which, together with the various decorations in the passages between the cathedrals, the golden domes of the cathedrals and their white walls, presented a brilliant appearance.

Coming of Their Ruler.

By far the most picturesque effect given by the long straight street, was afforded by the groups of golden-robed priests, bearing sacred ikons, and surrounded by acloytes with smoking censors, standing in front of their churches, waiting the coming of the emperor, who was expected to stop at each group and venerate the relics; salutions of peace being given to him by the head priest of each party of ecclesiastics. At 12 o'clock, when the Grand Duke Vladimir and his brilliant officers, followed by a detachment of cuirassiers, went galloping out towards the Petroffsky palace, where the imperial party had spent the night, a cry of delight and cheers burst forth from the crowd at what seemed a foretaste of the function so patiently awaited. There was, however, another long wait, and it was not until 2.30 o'clock that the deep boom of the guns of the battery at the Petroffsky palace was heard, signifying that the procession was under way. This was quickly followed by eight other shots, which were the signal for every bell in in Moscow to peal forth, and in an instant, led off by the bells of the Ivan tower in the Kremlin, an indescribable jangle of the hundreds of bells in this much-belled city broke upon the ear. At the sound of the first cannon shot, the word of command was given to the soldiers, who had previously stacked their rifles, and all now stood at arms, as immovable and wooden as only the Russian and German soldier can stand, awaiting the coming of their Little Father.

A Gorgeous Cavalcade.

At the head of the procession marched about 250 policemen. Next came three squadrons of Circassians and Don Cossacks in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest. Big stalwart men they were, riding beautiful high-mettled horses. At their head on a black horse rode Prince Delgoruki, grand master of ceremonies, in full uniform. Then came 200 red uniformed Cossacks. These were followed by forty-one Asiatics, who were the cynosure of all eyes. Their uniforms were dazzling visions of barbaric magnificence and costliness. Then came several carriages painted red and gold in which rode twenty-four gentlemen of the chamber attired in green and gold, followed by twelve chamberlains on horseback. Immediately after came several gorgeous coaches drawn by four or six horses conveying ministers or other dignitaries. The coachmen and postilions wore white wigs.

Soldiers, Officials and Civilians.

The next in line was a field marshal, leading a squadron of the czar's hussars of the guard, then a squadron of dragoons, followed by grenadiers with ancient helmets. Then followed high officials of the imperial stable, liveried footmen, lackeys, pages and other servants of the royal household on foot. Then followed another master of ceremonies, leading the bearers of the imperial standard, deputies of the Asiatic tribes and peoples of the east, mounted unarmed men in robes of civil office, standards of the various provinces and states of the empire, groups of deputies from the various trades and guilds of Russia. There were numerous other sections, and then came 100 chevalier guards, with silver eagles on their burnished helmets, and wearing white tunics, and 100 household guards with gold helmets and purple tunics. Then there was a hiatus, and the thousands upon thousands of spectators knew that the czar of all the Russias was coming.

Greeted with a Roar.

His majesty was preceded by the imperial grand marshal, Count Pahlen, and two squadrons of cuirassiers, with eagle-crested helmets. Riding a pure white horse and attired in the full generals uniform of the ever faithful Preobajensky regiment, came the young autocrat of all the Russias. He sat erect and looked every inch the Caesar he is. He constantly saluted in response to the salutations of the multitude, who upon the first sight of his majesty raised the shout peculiar to the Russians, which is a prolonged roar. His majesty was immediately followed by the various male members of the Russian imperial family, the grand dukes, foreign sovereigns or their representatives, the minister of war and the generals and officers of the suite, a gorgeous throng in glittering uniforms. Separated from this brilliant cavalcade and riding in a coach surmounted by a massive gold and crystal crown came the dowager czarina, the mother of the czar. She was attired in a bejewelled Russian court dress and was quite pale. She bowed repeatedly in response to the cheers of the crowd.

Czarina Bows to the Multitude.

Proceeded by a regiment of grenadiers attached to the palace, came the czarina riding alone in a magnificent gilded state carriage, drawn by four pairs of cream-colored horses, flanked by two esquires-at-arms, and guarded in the rear by two Cossacks. Her majesty wore a dress similar to that of the dowager czarina. She looked sweet and lovely and smilingly bowed in acknowledgement of the enthusiastic cheers of her subjects. Similarly escorted came many coaches, bearing the queen of Greece, princesses, ladies of the court, their attendants and ladies of honor. Court chamberlains and gentlemen in waiting followed the carriages. Then came detachments of five regiments of the guards, two squadrons of cavalry, a squadron of Uhlans, and finally numerous mounted masters of ceremonies. The procession, which moved quite rapidly without a hitch, was sixty-five minutes in passing a given point.

Emperor and Empress at the Shrine.

The crowd closed in at respectful distance behind the procession, and all movement was then toward the kremlin. On the route the emperor stopped at three points which mark the three circles bounding the different quarters of Moscow. Here he received addresses from the nobles and deputations. On arriving at the Iberian chapel at the entrance of the Chinese town the emperor alighted from his horse, and with the empress ascended the steps of the shrine, where he was received by the priest of the chapel with the cross and holy water. As the emperor passed through the red square the choirs stationed in the tribunes along the kremlin wall sang hymns of praise. The appearance of the czar was the signal for the firing of cannon, the ringing of bells and frantic cheers from the people. It was just 4 o'clock as the czar entered the kremlin. As the procession passed across the square through the Spasky gate into the kremlin, the impression produced on the mind was one of the most dazzling display of color. The troops were massed in the great Bell square of the kremlin and the emperor and empress, with their immediate suites, worshipped successively in the cathedrals of the Assumption of the Archangel Michael and the Ancunciation where te deums were sung. It is impossible to describe the gorgeousness of the scene.

Presents Sent by the Sultan.

Constantinople, May 22.—The sultan's presents to the czar upon the occasion of his coronation consist of a number of silk carpets and other costly articles, including a diamond pin valued at £2,000 intended for the czarina. In addition, the sultan has sent a high decoration to the czar and has forwarded presents to the principal members of his household.

DEMAND FROM OLNEY

Spain Must Rescind the Cuban Tobacco Edict.

AMERICANS' MONEY IS TIED UP

A Practical Confiscation of Tobacco in Cuba Already Paid for by Our Manufacturers — Retaliatory Measures May Be Resorted To.

Washington, May 22. — Secretary Olney has instructed Minister Taylor to make vigorous representations to the Spanish government relative to the recent edict prohibiting the exportation of tobacco from the island of Cuba, on the grounds that it amounts to the practical confiscation of goods in Cuba owned by Americans. The data on hand at the state department, supplied by the collector of the Florida ports, show that the cigar men of Tampa alone have $700,000 worth of tobacco in Cuba paid for and subject to delivery and that for all the other Florida ports there is as much more. It will be impossible for the merchants to get this property out of Cuba within the prescribed time, and Minister Taylor has been instructed to make such representations to Spain as will secure ample time in which to secure this property. It is believed that the tone of Mr. Olney's note will accomplish this result.

Retaliatory Measure in Reserve.

If it does not, other means will be taken. The Spanish government professes that this action is taken in order that Cubans loyal to the government in Havana engaged in the cigar business may have the leaf to work with and that hostility to the United States has nothing to do with it. A resolution has been prepared and, if within a few days the state department does not hear satisfactorily upon its protest this resolution will be passed by congress. It will give the president authority to prohibit by proclamation the importation into the United States of cigars and other manufactured tobacco from the island of Cuba. Inasmuch as the greater part of the Cuban cigars are exported to this country this step will effectually offset the action taken under the edict of the captain-general. The resolution will not be brought forward until it is apparent that Spain intends to harass the United States and make it impossible for her citizens to get the property now on the island for which they have paid.

EDMUNDS DISPLEASED.

Believes the Vermont Delegates Should Not Waste Time Voting for McKinley.

Boston, May 22.—A special to the Transcript from St. Albans, Vt., says, in part: Senator Edmunds has written a letter to at least one of the delegates chosen to represent Vermont at the national convention at St. Louis in which he virtually expresses disgust at the action of the Green Mountain voters in taking a stand which makes it practically imperative that their delegates vote for McKinley at St. Louis. The missive was written about a week ago to Col. Edward C. Smith of St. Albans, president of the Central Vermont railroad, and one of the delegates-at-large. Col. Smith says that the main part of the letter was about a personal railroad matter between himself and the senator, but that the allusion to the state's action in the presidential matter was contained in a few lines at the end. "I could not give the exact wording," said Col. Smith, "but I gathered that Senator Edmunds was very much disgusted at the outcome of the state convention, and that his meaning was that the delegates ought not to let the convention's attitude influence them foolishly when they were actually on the floor at St. Louis, and that they should not waste their influence by voting for McKinley." Col. Smith expressed the belief that McKinley would be nominated on the first ballot at St. Louis, but said he thought there was yet some danger that McKinley's boom would be so big that it might at last break on account of its own weight.

THE VICE-PRESIDENCY.

New York Politicians Believe McKinley Men Have Offered It to Gen. Porter.

New York, May 22. — Republican leaders in this city are confident that Gen. Hahn, the Ohio member of the republican national committ, came to this city yesterday to have a consultation about the vice-presidential nomination, although to a reporter Gen. Hahn emphatically declared that his errand was purely of a private business character. However, Gen. Horace Porter was in private consultation with the Ohio man and after their meeting Gen. Hahn left for Canton, Ohio. The Morton men asserted after Mr. Hahn's departure that the McKinley managers' plans included the nomination of Gen. Porter as vice-president and the appointment of Warner Miller as secretary of the treasury in the event of McKinley's election.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? UNITED STATES

Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896. Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

MORGAN'S BOND BILL

Filibustering Tactics Resorted To in the Senate.

HILL AND ALLEN EXCHANGE HOT SHOT

Phillips Labor Commission Bill Before the House To-Day—Passage of Hoover Pension Bill over President's Veto a Surprise.

Washington, May 22.—The obstructive measures against Senator Morgan's motion to take up his bill prohibiting the issue of government bonds without the consent of congress, which was begun in the senate late yesterday afternoon by Senators Hill and Chandler, and during which the New York senator and Mr. Allen interchanged remarks not entirely consistent with senatorial courtesy, was resumed this morning and altogether changed the proceedings of yesterday, which, in some respects, were suggestive of the closing days of a session. Conference reports were being considered and acted on most of the day. First came the river and harbor bill, and after a short discussion the report was formally disagreed to, in order to have an item as to Brunswick harbor, Georgia, restored to the bill. Later in the day the report was again presented, with the Brunswick matter arranged satisfactorily, but with the items as to the deep sea harbor in southern California still undisposed of in conference. The report was agreed to, as far as it went, and a new conference was ordered on the San Pedro and Santa Monica question. The conference report on the legislative bill was presented and was assailed on account of provisions as to circuit court clerks and as to the appointment of a register of copyrights. The report was disagreed to—twenty-six to thrity-three—and the bill was again sent to conference. A partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to, and a further conference ordered and subsequently a second report was presented and went over till to-day. The conference on the sundry civil bill was presented and agreed to.

House of Representatives.

The Phillips labor commission bill is to-day being considered by the house, discussion on the measure, by agreement, to close at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The action of the house yesterday afternoon in passing over the president's veto the bill granting a pension of fifty dollars a month to Francis E. Hoover, late of the 23d Indiana regiment of voluteers, was a surprise even to those who were the most active in support of it, and the vote it received, 196 to 47, was even more of a surprise. A debate of two hours preceded the vote, Messrs. Kirkpatrick, rep., Kan.; Wood, rep., Ill., and Willis, rep., Del., advocating the passage of the bill, and Messrs. Erdman, dem., Pa.; Loud, dem., Cal., and Bartlett, dem., N. Y., in favor of sustaining the veto. The populists and republicans generally voted for the bill and the democrats against it. The following republicans, however, voted to sustain the veto: Messrs. Loud, Cal.; Raney, Mo.; Quigg and Wadsworth, N. Y.; and the following democrats to pass the bill: Messrs. Cockrell, Tenn.; Cummings, N. Y.; Layton and Sorg, O.; Stokes, Strait and Talbert, S. C. This was preceded by a half hour's statement by Mr. Grosvenor, rep., O., regarding a telegram from Washington to the Cincinnati Tribune, which "lined him up with the Reed men," in voting to oppose the reporting of any reciprocity bill from committee on ways and means. Passing by the "lining up with the Reed men," by the observation that he might be found in worse company, Mr. Grosvenor denied the report that there were any factions among the republicans on the committe on ways and means, asserting that they had acted as a unit upon all matters.

FOR KIDNAPPING A CHILD.

Mrs. Kilham May Be Sentenced To-morrow on Her Plea of Guilty.

Boston, May 22.—Mrs. Etta A. Kilham of Lynn, who pleaded guilty yesterday to the indictment charging her with the kidnapping of the child, Celia Leonard, on October 5, and to unlawfully imprisoning the child for six months, will probably be sentenced tomorrow. The Leonard child, who is 5 years old, was missed from her parents' home in Boston on October 6. She was reported to the police as missing and her disappearance was well advertised. The Kilhams kept her for six months. The child was kindly treated by the Kilhams, who had practically adopted her.

Washington, May 22.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $111,875,501. Yesterday's withdrawals were $45,200.

VICTORY OF LIBERALS

Their Success at Saratoga Due To Dr. Davies' Support.

PLEDGES EXACTED FROM DR. WITHROW

The New Moderator Compelled To Put His Promises in Writing—His Views and Policy Carefully Inquired into in Advance.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 22.—The overthrow of the dominant party in the Presbyterian general assembly, strong in numbers and stronger by reason of long continued control, was accomplished yesterday afternoon by the forlorn minority of liberals, which had scarcely numbered at any time in the past five years 20 per cent. of the entire body of commissioners, by a cleverly conceived and shrewdly conducted manoeuvre that would have done credit to a post graduate in politics. Dr. Withrow owes his election as moderator absolutely and entirely to the nominating speech of Dr. John Davies, of the Howard Crosby church, New York city, yet until the meeting of the assembly Dr. Davies and Dr. Withrow were entire strangers. They had never seen each other until they met in the city of Saratoga on the eve of the assembly. Dr. Davies was comparatively obscure and unknown. Dr. Withrow's name is known throughout the church. He is from Chicago and the entire Chicago delegation supported him. Dr. Davies stood alone in the New York delegation in his support of Dr. Withrow. Mr. Davies is a modest, sincere, earnest conservative of the ultra type.

Pledges Said To Have Been Given.

Dr. Withrow, whatever may be his own classification, is the representative of the liberals, and upon their cleverness and in securing for their candidate the support of Dr. Davies must rest all the credit of yesterday's victory. It transpired in the heat of the controversy over the moderatorship that Dr. Withrow had given as the price of Dr. Davies' support certain written pledges as to his action, should he be chosen moderator, in regard to the important questions before the assembly. These written pledges now exist, and they are in the hands of Dr. Davies. The correspondent of the United Press was able to verify this report on the word of Dr. Davies and Dr. Withrow. The exact terms of the pledges are not known, but their purport and history were gathered in interviews with both this morning. It seems that one of Dr. Davies trustees, Lawyer Prentice of New York, is an intimate friend of Dr. Withrow. The two spend much time together at the lawyer's summer home on the Hudson near Albany. When Dr. Withrow's candidacy was proposed it occurred to Lawyer Prentice that his New York pastor was the proper man to place his Chicago friend in nomination. Consultation ensued between the New York lawyer and the Chicago friends of Dr. Withrow, resulting in a formal request to Dr. Davies to make the speech of nomination before the assembly.

Sought His Views in Advance.

Dr. Davies was willing, provided he was assured of Dr. Withrow's soundness upon certain points of theology and policy at issue in the church. Letters passed between Drs. Withrow and Davies in which the latter sought to learn the views of the former. The points covered by the interview were these: General soundness in theology as formulated by the Presbyterian standards; support of the past action of the general assembly on the question of theological seminary control; support of the position that the assembly is greater than the Presbytery in a certain line of action as, for instance, the rejection of the graduates of Union Theological seminary. Dr. Withrow assured Dr. Davies that he was thoroughly in line with the past action of the assembly. But Dr. Davies wanted even more than this. He required a written promise that in the event of Dr. Withrow's election as moderator all committees to be appointed to which these and kindred subjects should be referred should be so constituted as to have a majority of conservative members. He obtained this promise. Dr. Withrow put himself on paper with a pledge that while he would make up his committees with a fair sprinkling of liberals the majority of each committee should be men committed to the conservative side on these important questions.

Admits the Deal.

When questioned after adjournment as to the rumors that Dr. Withrow had given him written pledges as to the make up of the committees, Dr. Davies admitted that he held such pledges. "Do you think I would ask my conservative friends to vote for a man without assurances that these great and important questions would be safe under his administration?" replied Dr. Davies.

Reading's Defaulted Interest.

Philadelphia, May 22.—Under the terms of the decree of foreclosure, the time limit allowed the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company to pay the defaulted interest upon the general mortgage bonds expired yesterday and the trustees under the mortgage, the Pennsylvania company for insurances on lives and granting annuities, will, it is said, proceed in a few days to advertise the property for sale.

U. S. Grant Club Incorporated.

The President yesterday sent to the Senate the nomination of Alvan H. Clark as postmaster at Somerville. There had been a hotly waged contest for the office. Alfred W. Dey was named as postmaster at Asbury Park.

In declaring unconstitutional the law closing barber shops on Sunday, the Illinois Supreme Court takes much the same position as that held by the California Supreme Court on the same question. Under the law of Illinois, as it existed prior to the passage of the act in question, each citizen of the State was left perfectly free to labor and transact business on Sunday or refrain from labor and business, as he might choose, so long as he did not disturb the peace and good order of society. The act in question, therefore, affecting only one class of workers, was special legislation, the court says, and cannot be regarded as the "due process of law" without which the State may not deprive any person of his property. The property taken by the Legislature in question is the labor of the barbers, in many cases the only valuable thing they possess. It is further held by the court that the act is not calculated to promote the health, comfort, safety and welfare of society, and hence cannot be regarded as an exercise of the police powers of the State.—Trenton Times.

GASHED HIS HEAD.

A Young Bicyclist Gets Caught Between Two Wagons and Cuts His Head.

Frank Sprague, the young son of W. H. Sprague, of 216 Spooner avenue, met with a painful accident on Park avenue near North avenue today noon, while riding his wheel. He rode between two wagons that were passing and the space was too narrow for the wheel and the boy. As a result the lad was thrown off and his head struck the hub of a wheel on Butcher Watt's wagon, making an incision two inches long. He was taken to Armstrong's pharmacy where Mr. Armstrong dressed the wound and applied proper treatment. The boy was injured in no other place and his wheel escaped damage.

The Boys' Camp.

Sumner F. Dudley will give an illustrated talk on "Boys' Camp" at the Y. M. C. A. next Friday evening. The talk will be for boys and their parents. The season of 1896 will be the twelfth of this popular camp, which is located on the west shore of Lake Champlain, just south of the town of Westport, Essex county, N. Y. In past years Plainfield has been represented at the camp, which is for the Y. M. C. A. boys of New York and New Jersey.

Narrow Escape From a Conflagration.

While attempting to put a lighted lamp in a bracket last night, J. Fred MacDonald fell from a stool on which he was standing. The flames of the lamp spread over the floor and for a moment it seemed as though a serious conflagration might result. Mr. MacDonald grabbed an overcoat and smothered the flames before any serious damage resulted.

Union County Appropriation.

The Union County Board of Freeholders yesterday fixed the appropriation for running the county affairs for the next year, and decided it would be necessary to raise $100,000 by taxation. This is an increase of $5,000 over last year. The committee on appropriations wanted to make the amount $215,000, but the board pared the estimates.

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Invitations have been issued by the ladies of Grace church for a reception to be held in the Guild room, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of the Rev. and Mrs. Erskine M. Rodman, Monday evening, June 1st, from eight until eleven o'clock.

No Contract Awarded.

A meeting of the trustees of the Mt. Olive Baptist church was held Wednesday night. The considering of bids for painting the church was taken up, but the contract was not awarded. The trustees will meet again on Monday night.

—The contract case of Gartland against Ellis was adjourned today in Justice Newcorn's court for two weeks.

Richard V. Lindabury has removed his law offices from Elizabeth to 776 Broad street, Newark.

E. M. VanBuren has lost his upper lip adornment, and his many friends scarcely recognize him.

Mr. and Mrs. Banks, of New York, were the guests of Plainfield friends last night. They returned today.

Robert Douglass, of Sycamore avenue, has returned to school at Pennington Seminary after a short stay at home.

Edward Maynard, the barber, is out and attending to business after the bicycle accident which he encountered a day or two ago.

Herbert Moore, of Grove street, is able to be out again after being confined to the house for some time with an injured knee.

Miss Lulu Stetson, of Philadelphia, has returned home after a two-weeks visit with her aunt, Mrs. C. A. Sturtevant, of Orchard place.

The engagement is announced of Miss Cecelia, daughter of Postmaster Peter C. Staats, of Dunellen, to John W. Griggs, of New Brunswick.

Mr. Smith and family, of Orange, will take possession, in about a week, of the house on Rockview avenue formerly occupied by Charles Day and family.

Arthur E. Lee, of East Ninth street, Spanish correspondent for the firm of Fred Eddy & Company, of New York, has gone to Seneca Falls, N. Y., on business.

The Misses Katherine and Marion Dwight, of Rockview avenue, went to New York this afternoon to attend a May party given by one of their friends there.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, of Orchard place, Washington Park, and Miss Gertrude Andrews, of Central avenue, left this afternoon for New Haven to spend Saturday and Sunday.

Willard B. Force, of LaGrande avenue, has passed his second year's examination in the New York College of Dentistry, and has now gone to Asbury Park to take charge of the Seaside pharmacy.

Was He a Rocky Mountain Tramp?

A man in Plainfield put on his front gate a silver plate bearing his name. The other morning his gate was missing. It was found down the road and the silver plate had been torn off. The Plainfield citizen, knowing Jerseymen do not care for the white metal, thinks it was stolen by a Rocky Mountain tramp, who, seeing a bit of his favorite, could not resist temptation.—New York World.

A Profitable Affair.

The committee from the Advance Circle, King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church who arranged the "Blossom Festival" held Tuesday evening last, met yesterday afternoon and settled the financial part of the affair. It was reported that the profits were $73.47, and the Circle desire to thank their many friends through The Daily Press for their substantial aid.

No More Toll.

The purchase of the Cranbury Turnpike from the New Brunswick and Cranbury Turnpike Company by the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders was consummated Wednesday at New Brunswick. The price is $3,000. The road will now be thrown open to the free use of the public, the collecting of toll having been abolished.

$3,000 Fire in Elizabeth.

A three-story building on Wall street, Elizabethport, owned by Philip Schouble, was burned yesterday. It was occupied by Frank Hallenbeck, and was valued at $3,000. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

Sold to Satisfy a Mortgage.

The baker's outfit and horses and wagons belonging to Steve Moore, of West Fourth and Liberty streets, were sold yesterday to satisfy a chattel mortgage. The mortgage was bought by a brother-in-law of Mr. Moore.

Mecca for Insurance Men.

An insurance agent was heard to remark yesterday that there is more insurance business done in five square blocks in the West End than in all the rest of the city together.

—The Women's Missionary Society of the Congregational church did not hold its annual meeting yesterday. On account of the small attendance caused by the storm, it was postponed two weeks.

—Most Worshipful Grand Master George W. Fortmeyer, of East Orange, and his Associate Grand Lodge officers will visit Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., next Tuesday evening and work the W. F. Degree on William E. MacClymont. There will no doubt be a large attendance to greet the Grand Lodge officers.

—The speed of modern travel is something wonderful and C. Maynard Evans, of East Front street, accomplished quite a feat yesterday when, going in regular scheduled trains, he made the trip from Boston to Plainfield in six and a-half hours. He came down the Shore Line on the Air Line Flyer, which makes the run from Boston to New York in five hours.

Sam Frazee's Honor.

The first musical band in Somerville was started about 1810 by Sam Frazee, of Plainfield. They used to practice in a building which stood where Association Hall now stands. A man by the name of Tunison kept a sort of oyster saloon and restaurant, and it was in his house that the band held forth.—Somerville Democrat.

Dunellen Would be Materially Benefited by the Extension.

Dunellen is anxiious for the extension of the street railway into their limits. The Dunellen Call has the following anent the matter:

The officials of the company should be willing to accept the franchise upon the same terms as they get in other places and the people of this place should be willing to grant it upon those terms.

If they can afford to pay a yearly rental per mile in neighboring places, why cannot they do the same here? Cannot some arrangement be made by which the road could be extended upon the basis of a graduated rental and let the borough attend to keeping the streets in repair? The price should be sufficient to do this and the company should be willing to pay that much for the privilege.

We believe the extension of the trolley system would be a material benefit to the place and are quite certain that the Borough Council are ready to grant the privilege for a reasonable compensation, notwithstanding the adoption of resolutions that are practically prohibitory.

Reduced Rates to Washington.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor will hold their annual meeting in Washington, D. C., July 7 to 13.

For this occasion the B. & O. R. R. Co. will sell tickets, from all points on its lines, east of the Ohio river to Washington, at one single fare for the round trip, July 6 to 8, inclusive; valid for return passage until July 15, inclusive, with the privilege of an additional extension until July 31 by depositing tickets with joint agent at Washington.

Tickets will also be on sale at stations of all connecting lines.

Delegates should not lose sight of the fact that all B. & O. trains run via Washington. oaw-j8

—Robert Cook, of Rockview avenue, has purchased a pair of handsome carriage horses from Adam Fritz, of Somerset street.

DOANE & EDSALL

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A big party of gypsies are now camping near Stony Hill.

—Next Sunday will be observed in the Episcopal churches as Whit Sunday.

—A regular meeting of the Royal Arcanum will be held next Monday night.

—Forty hours' devotion will commence at St. Joseph's church next Sunday.

—Farmers say that the rain did an immense amount of good to all sorts of vegetation.

—The second anniversary of the Church of the Redeemer will be observed next Sunday.

—The feed store of Isaac R. Giles was closed yesterday on account of the funeral of a near relative.

—Builder Manning, of Clinton avenue, has purchased a bay horse from Adam Fritz, of Somerset street.

—Wallace W. Miller entertained a party of his bachelor friends with a sumptuous repast last evening.

—The steady rain of the past few days has caused some of the ceiling in the annex to Red Men's hall to fall.

—Special for cash Saturday afternoon and evening: Bluefish, 8c; weakfish, 8c; sea bass, 8c; porgies, 7c; flounders, 7c; shad, 25c each.

—The city should erect a bridge on West Second street, across Madison avenue, for the benefit of pedestrians. The walking is frightfully bad.

—Miss Lillian Nicholl, a pupil of Mr. MacClymont, will be the solo pianist on Monday evening next. Mr. MacClymont will also play three numbers.

—Hot weather goods at cut prices at White's busy store. Special prices on hammocks, gas, oil and gasoline stoves, window screens and refrigerators.

—The Epworth League of the First M. E. church are arranging for an elaborate entertainment to be given probably Tuesday evening, June 9th, in Vincent chapel.

—The missionary committee of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school have sent $25 to the Baptist Missionary Union for the support of a native preacher in the Telugu field.

—The Mt. Zion A. M. E. church on West Fourth street was built two years ago, but never finished. The upper part is now being completed. Wm. Brokaw has the contract.

—Rev. George Francis, of Westfield, will make the address at the annual Union county conference of the Christian Endeavor Society, which will be held in the Greystone Presbyterian church at Elizabeth, on May 28th.

—A concert and ice cream festival was held in the basement of Reform Hall Wednesday night by the congregation of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church. The entertainment was held for the benefit of the church fund and a neat sum was realized.

—The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Local Union of Somerset county will be held at the Raritan Reformed church this afternoon and evening. The meeting will open at 3:30 with a praise service. Rev. B. F. Everett, of Trenton, and others, will make addresses.

—The tax rate throughout Monmouth county this year will be the highest in fifteen or twenty years. The rate last year was $6.84 a thousand. This year it will doubtless reach $10, unless there is decided increase in property valuation, which is not regarded as at all likely.

—Notwithstanding the rain last evening the Mt. Pleasant festival at the new chapel opened very successfully, a number were over from Plainfield, and it has been decided to run stages from the North Avenue station again this evening. Parties wishing to go over should be there at 7:45. Stages will leave at 8 o'clock.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

First Actor—There ought to be a souvenir performance to-morrow night.

Second Actor—Why?

First Actor—It will be the fiftieth performance since we got our salaries.—Puck.

Too Much Mixture.

She—I don't believe in promiscuous kissing.

He—What do you call promiscuous kissing?

She—Kissing girls as well as men.—Brooklyn Life.

The Value of a Hyphen.

I recall an advertisement which actually appeared, sans hyphen, recently in a London daily, to-wit: "Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Levi having cast off clothing of every description, invite an early inspection."—Chap Book.

He Knew He Was.

"Well, you're a sight," exclaimed the bystanders as the man fell into the mortar bed.

"Yes," the man said, sorrowfully, as he scraaped himself off with a chip; "sub-lime."—Rockland Tribune.

A Good Definition.

Lane Walker—Some place where they've got a houseful of gab and not a mouthful of grub.—Philadelphia Inquirer

Similia Similibus.

They found a man who drugged
And robbed was suffering in pain;
They called a doctor, and the man
Was drugged and robbed again.
—Detroit Tribune.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

Lunch.

She hesitated.

"If I give you this pie," she asked, "will I ever see you again?"

The individual with deep fringe on his trousers and gores in his coat shook his head.

"Madam," he answered, "I will be frank with you. I am not prepared to say aught as to the possibility of such manifestation by the souls of the departed as to render them visible to the mortal eye."

The dripping of the rain mingled with the sound of retreating footsteps, while there could be plainly heard a harsh, grating noise, as of a woman trying to unchain a bulldog.—Detroit Tribune.

A Reasonable Request.

Husband—My dear, I want to ask you one favor before you go off on that long visit.

Wife—A thousand, my love. What is it?

"Don't try to put the house in order before you leave."

"It isn't hard work."

"Perhaps not; but think of the expense of telegraphing to you every time I want to find anything."—N. Y. Weekly.

Found Wanting.

"I'd fight and bleed and die for thee;
I'd suffer any pain," quoth he.
"Then take this silk, my dear," cried she,
"And bring its match right home to me."
And then he said—'tis sad to me.
How man with empty words is free—
That, ere he did, he'd jiggered be.
—Washington Star.

USING A PUBLIC SERVANT.

Miss Vere de Vere—If you please, Mr. P'liceman, is my bonnet on straight?—N. Y. Recorder.

Needless Anxiety.

Johnny (out visiting)—Mamma is always worryin' about nothing.

Hostess—In what way?

Johnny—My mamma made the awfullest fuss a-tellin' me not to make a pig of myself when you gave me cake. She might 'a' knowed I wouldn't, cause your cake isn't good a bit.—Good News.

Up to Old Tricks.

Ontume—I remember when I used to get thrashed for going fishing, and then lying about it.

Mrs. Ontume—It didn't do you much good, apparently.

Ontume—Why not?

Mrs. Ontume—You do it yet.—N. Y. World.

Not to Be Blamed.

"Fakely, the actor, talks through his hat a great deal, I think," said Hawkins.

"Well, poor fellow, he can't help it. When he's on the stage he has to talk through rows of theater hats to make those in the rear seats hear him."—Harper's Bazar.

Out of His Head, Sure!

Dr. Pillbox—I'm afraid that Tupenny is incurable. His case seems hopeless.

Ichabod—Why, I thought you said his malady was cured. Has he developed any fresh symptoms?

Dr. Pillbox—Has he? I should say so! He paid me his bill last night.—Town Topics.

Nemesis.

"I am the absconding cashier of the Bustup bank," said the sad-eyed man who walked into the police station, "and I want to give myself up."

"Very well," said the police sergeant; "have you anyone in this city who can identify you?"—Indianapolis Journal.

An Explanation.

McEll—He has quite a collection of wheels.

O'Kief—I didn't know he was a bicycle crank.

McEll—He isn't exactly; he rides one wheel and the rest are in his head.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Johnny Explains.

Teacher—Why did you hit Willie Winkum with a stone?

Little Johnny—He—he got mad and looked as if he'd like to hit me with something, so I jus' chucked the stone over to him, so he could throw it at me.—Good News.

At Intervals.

Featherstone—Look here, Willie. When I am in the parlor with your sister do you ever peek through the keyhole?

Willie—Sometimes, when mamma isn't there.—N. Y. World.

A Little Hint.

Mr. Bore—I wish I were a star.

Miss Holt—I wish you were a comet.

Mr. Bore—Why?

Miss Holt—If you were a comet you would only come around once in a thousand years or so.—Golden Days.

No Hope for Her.

First Citizeness (a few years hence)—Are you going to vote for Mrs. Strongmind?

Second Citizeness—Indeed, I'm not. I never saw such a dowdy.—N. Y. Weekly.

Cold Consolation.

Young Van Marks (in melancholy tone)—Oh, I suppose I shouldn't brood, but fortune seems reluctant to smile on me.

Harry Gay—Well, never mind, old fellow: she will when she sees some of your work.—Truth.

Feet and Hands.

"I should like to have seen Triby's foot," said the artistic woman.

"Very fine, no doubt," murmured her inartistic husband reminiscently, "but you should have seen the hand I held last night—four kings and an ace."—Washington Star.

His Father's Boy.

Mother (policeman's wife)—Willie, I've been shouting for you this half hour. How is it you are never to be found when you are wanted?

Son—Well, mother, I suppose I inherit it from father.—N. Y. Recorder.

Very Chic.

Mrs. Jinks—Don't you think my new bicycle costume rather chic?

Mr. Jinks—Decidedly. Your shoulders seem to spread out like wings, and you—er—seem to be walking on drumsticks.—N. Y. Weekly.

Willing to Oblige.

Mrs. Nagger—Do you remember how when we were first married you used to call me your white lily?

Mr. Nagger—Yes, and if you insist on a floral nickname now, I will call you my tiger lily.—Truth.

—A concert and ice cream festival was held in the basement of Reform Hall Wednesday night by the congregation of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church. The entertainment was held for the benefit of the church fund and a neat sum was realized.

—The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Local Union of Somerset county will be held at the Raritan Reformed church this afternoon and evening. The meeting will open at 3:30 with a praise service. Rev. B. F. Everett, of Trenton, and others, will make addresses.

—The tax rate throughout Monmouth county this year will be the highest in fifteen or twenty years. The rate last year was $6.84 a thousand. This year it will doubtless reach $10, unless there is decided increase in property valuation, which is not regarded as at all likely.

—Notwithstanding the rain last evening the Mt. Pleasant festival at the new chapel opened very successfully, a number were over from Plainfield, and it has been decided to run stages from the North Avenue station again this evening. Parties wishing to go over should be there at 7:45. Stages will leave at 8 o'clock.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

Lost.

She hesitated.

"If I give you this pie," she asked, "will I ever see you again?"

The individual with deep fringe on his trousers and gores in his coat shook his head.

"Madam," he answered, "I will be frank with you. I am not prepared to say aught as to the possibility of such manifestation by the souls of the departed as to render them visible to the mortal eye."

The dripping of the rain mingled with the sound of retreating footsteps, while there could be plainly heard a harsh, grating noise, as of a woman trying to unchain a bulldog.—Detroit Tribune.

A Reasonable Request.

Husband—My dear, I want to ask you one favor before you go off on that long visit.

Wife—A thousand, my love. What is it?

"Don't try to put the house in order before you leave."

"It isn't hard work."

"Perhaps not; but think of the expense of telegraphing to you every time I want to find anything."—N. Y. Weekly.

Found Wanting.

"I'd fight and bleed and die for thee;
I'd suffer any pain," quoth he.
"Then take this silk, my dear," cried she,
"And bring its match right home to me."
And then he said—'tis sad to me.

SCOTS AND EDUCATION.

More College Men in Scotland Than in England.

This desire for education is, indeed, the best feature in the intellectual temperament of the Scottish people. The well-known ambition of the Scottish mother to have her son "wag his pow in pu'pit" is now somewhat weakened by the opening up of other paths of intellectual achievement, but there is still, says Westminster Review, a widely diffused desire for intellectual in preference to commercial pursuits. It is an indication of the craving which exists for knowledge in general that for every young man who goes to college in England seven go to colleges in Scotland. In 1885 Scotland, with a population of 3,725,000, had 6,500 students attending her four universities, while England, with 26,000,000 of population, had 6,000 attending her four teaching universities. This, it may be supposed, has some connection with the large percentage of Scotch lawyers, doctors, clergymen and schoolmasters to be met with throughout the English-speaking world. The success of "the Scot abroad" is perhaps not entirely or even mainly due to his theology, but it was at any rate the Scottish kirk that founded and fostered the Scottish educational system, and as to theology itself, if it has tended to confirm in him that quality of "high seriousness" which Matthew Arnold considered so important a feature in the best type of character, then the Scotchman's theology and its associations have borne a not inconsiderable part in making him what he is.

LINCOLN'S WIDE SYMPATHY.

Treated All People Alike in a Courteous Manner.

"Horace Greeley once said: 'I doubt whether man, woman or child, white or black, bound or free, virtuous or vicious, ever accosted or reached forth a hand to Abraham Lincoln and detected in his countenance or manner any repugnance or shrinking from the proffered contact, any assumption of superiority, or betrayal of disdain.'

"Frederick Douglas, the orator and patriot, is credited with saying: 'Mr. Lincoln is the only white man with whom I have ever talked, or in whose presence I have ever been, who did not consciously or unconsciously betray to me that he recognized my color.'

"George Bancroft, the historian, alluding to this characteristic, which was never so conspicuously manifested as during the darker days of the war, beautifully illustrates it in these memorable words: 'As a child, in a dark night, on a rugged way, catching hold of the hand of its father for guidance and support, Lincoln clung fast to the hand of the people and moved calmly through the gloom.'"

SMART COYOTE TRICK.

Sheep Cleverly Herded to the Brink of a Precipice.

An incident in illustration of a smart trick said to be frequently played by coyotes in securing food from among the herds of sheep on western ranches is related by a rancher of Grant county, Oregon. He had a herd of about 1,900 sheep, and recently missed a large number. In searching for them a herder found three sheep lying on the brink of a precipice, their throats marked with the teeth of a coyote. He made his way to the bottom, a canyon, 200 feet below, and there found the bodies of 110 sheep, or rather parts of their bodies, for the coyotes had been feeding on the carcasses for a week or more. From other incidents of like character it was concluded that several coyotes had got among the herd when the sheep were driven off their bedding during a storm, and had herded them to the brink of the precipice, much as a lot of sheep dogs would drive sheep. When the edge was reached the coyotes pressed the herd so hard in the rear that the 110 at the front either jumped or were pushed over the precipice.

"PA FELT LONELY."

Queer Freak of a Drunken Brute in Cleveland.

A Cleveland family was in court the other day. A daughter was one of the witnesses, and she had this cheerful tale to tell of her father: "Pa was sitting in his saloon, feeling lonely. He went to the barn, and putting a halter on his horse brought him into the house, saying he wanted the animal to eat supper with him. Pa made me set a plate for the horse. Then he took hold of the horse's front legs and lifted them up on the table. We all sat down to supper and the horse began to eat. Pa picked up a mug of beer and began to laugh and throw both hands in the air. The mug hit the horse on the nose. The beast pulled his feet down, dragging the tablecloth and upsetting the table. The horse backed up and sat squarely on a redhot stove. This burned its tail, so the animal kicked the stove over and ran out of the door. I screamed and pa threw a lamp at me. The house came near catching fire, and a policeman came in. Pa has been arrested 108 times."

Not the Replies Intended.

The following extracts are from examination papers recently handed in at a public school in Connecticut: 1. From what animals do we get milk? From the camel and the milkman. 2. The hen is covered with feathers. With what is the cat covered? The cat is covered with fleas. 3. Name an animal that has four legs and a long tail. A mosquito. 4. Name two kinds of nuts. Peanuts and forget-me-nuts.

Cruel Examiners.

A reporter for the Cincinnati Tribune lately overheard a dialogue between two suburban gentlemen.

"How did your daughter pass her examination for a position as teacher?" asked the first man.

"Pass!" was the answer. "She didn't pass at all. Maybe you won't believe it, but they asked that poor girl about things that happened before she was born."

MONARCHIAL RULE.

The German Empire Has Done Much to Reaffirm It.

To the student of political institutions perhaps the most characteristic thing about the history of the German empire, says Macmillan's Magazine, is the example that it gives us of the revival or reaffirmation, so to speak, of the principle of monarchy. That principle has received some rude shocks in recent years. The establishment of the French republic was one, and the deposition of the emperor of Brazil was certainly another. Both events gave great encouragement to republican ideas. Kingship in the old absolute sense had long been on the wane. The French revolution almost shattered the foundations of the old monarchical rule. In England the old kingship received its final blow when George IV. surrendered his position on the question of the emancipation of the Catholics; no attempt has since been made to impose the royal will upon a reluctant ministry or parliament. In France the old kingship disappeared when Louis Philippe, the Citizen King, was summoned to the throne; for the monarchy of July was built on strictly constitutional lines. Even in Prussia a very restricted constitution was reluctantly conceded. King Frederick William IV. vowed that he would never let a sheet of paper intervene between the God in Heaven and his subjects; but even he was forced at last to yield to the spirit of the age, and, as Bismarck picturesquely put it, the crown itself threw a clod upon its coffin. The Italian states and Spain were for long in a condition of chronic revolution, and either constitutions were extorted or republics were established. It almost seemed as though the principle of kingship was doomed ere long to disappear. But the history of the German empire has done much toward the restoration of monarchy to its old illustrious position.

CLEVER PICKPOCKETS.

The Thief's Art Reduced to a Fine Point in Mexico.

Mexico is a land of thieves and lawlessness. An English correspondent tells of an adventure of two men in the Grand Square of Mexico. They stood talking before they should part. One was American, the other English. Suddenly the former said to the latter, pointing to the opposite side of the square under the colonnade:

"Look at it—look! They're pinching him nicely, aren't they? And he's a friend of mine, you bet!"

And there, while he stood gazing at the cathedral all unconscious, another American was relieved of his watch and other valuables.

"Smartest thing I ever saw,' cried the watching Yankee. "Look here, I'd like to interview those coons."

They did so, the Englishman interpreting. Said the admiring Yankee, after a time:

"Can you do me like that? I'd like to know what it feels like."

And the answer came contemptuously:

"You? Why, we did you an hour ago!"

This is a true story.

Told of Indigo Snakes.

The student of animal life at the zoological gardens is startled frequently by the remarkable display of sagacity that is sometimes made by the inmates of that interesting place, says an English writer. What, for instance, could be more clever, more thoughtful or more amazing than the action of the indigo snake when cold weather comes on? It was illustrated recently. The first breath of cool air that was wafted across the garden informed the indigo snakes that a cold wave was at hand. They could not hide their heads under their wings, like the robin of the nursery book. They could not take violent exercise and warm up their blood, for their blood will not warm. So they settle the problem by swallowing each other in turn. One indigo snake will swallow his better half, for example, until she becomes thoroughly warmed up and then she will swallow him until he feels comfortable.

A Grim Wager.

Wagers sometimes take rather a grim form. It is recorded that in the last century a wager was laid for one of a party of gay revelers to enter Westminster abbey at the hour of midnight. He was to enter one of the vaults beneath the abbey, and in proof of his having been there he was to stick a fork into a coffin which had been recently deposited there. He accomplished his object and was returning in triumph when he [redacted] himself suddenly caught, and was overpowered by terror that he fell i[redacted] a swoon. His companions, not be[redacted] able to account for his long absence, found him in this condition. The fork which he had fastened into the coffin had caught and pinned his long cloak and so occasioned a fit of terror which nearly proved fatal.

The Gun Would Determine.

It is said there is a voter living near Hagerstown known as Old Uncle Zeb. He does not decide who to vote for until he has met the representatives of each candidate and had a conference. A local Hurst politician met Old Uncle Zeb the other day and said: "Well, Uncle Zeb, who are you going to vote for?" "I dunno, I dunno," the old man replied. "I need a double-barreled shotgun mighty bad. I calc'late to do a lot of hunting this winter. I dunno who I'll vote for."

Here's Economy.

There is a man living near Maben, Miss., who prides himself on his economy, and the other day, when discussing his favorite topic, he remarked that he had saved several dollars in matches.

"Why," he said, "when I came to Mississippi, nearly 40 years ago, I brought my fire with me, and I have kept the same fire ever since, never allowing it to die out, and during all this time have never spent one cent for matches."

BOATS FOR A DOLLAR.

A Fleet That Carries the Life of the World.

Millions of Tiny Craft With Human Blood for Their Sea.

The microscope has revealed many wonderful things, but none more wonderful than the minute bodies which exist in the blood. They are called corpuscles or cells, and are of two kinds, the white and the red. Just a few words about these red cells. They are so minute that there are countless numbers of them in the tiniest drop of blood. Yet each one has a peculiar shape, for which none of them ever vary.

An adult of medium weight has about twelve pints of blood in the body, and yet every small drop of this contains millions of red corpuscles. The number of them in the blood cannot be comprehended by the human mind. Of what use are they?

One great object of breathing is to bring the oxygen of the air in close contact with the blood which is in the lungs, for oxygen is necessary for the support of life. It is the business of these little red cells in the blood, to carry the oxygen which we breathe in the lungs to every part of the body. The most minute part of every organ and tissue in the body must have its supply of oxygen or it will perish, and the only way the oxygen can reach all these parts is by means of these little red cells. No matter how pure the air may be which we breathe, if there are not enough red cells in the blood to carry a sufficient amount of oxygen through the body we will surely suffer. Plenty of fresh air is essential, and so is an abundant supply of these little "oxygen-carriers" necessary. These little red bodies have been called "boats for carrying oxygen." Certainly not a very bad name for them.

Oxygen starvation is shown by poor circulation, loss of appetite, debility, anaemia, nervousness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, repeated colds, muscular and mental weakness, and many other symptoms. What is the remedy? Something which will make more of these oxygen-carrying "boats." Nothing will accomplish this quicker than Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It goes to the foundation of things. It greatly increases the number of red corpuscles in the blood. What follows? More oxygen is carried through the system, and new life and vigor are imparted. The oil nourishes the body, and the hypophosphites gives stability and strength to the nervous system. As the large size of Scott's Emulsion sells for one dollar, so you can get "oxygen boats for one dollar."

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Compan

"It is my wish," he went on, "first to travel, but not far, then to seek retirement of the quietest. Once you told a friend, a friend"—he repeated the word as if to emphasize it,—"of a place near the sea, solitary, remote. Is it not so?"

"Yes, I remember," said I, my thoughts flashing back to the conversation on the last night with Perez.

"My health is precarious," he continued. "I wish to be not disturbed, to be guarded from intrusion, as well as to receive medical attention when necessary."

"In other words," I suggested, "you wish me to accompany you to the spot you have mentioned, to remain with you, and to see to it that you have the privacy you desire."

"It is as you have said."

"You ask a speedy decision?"

"Immediate."

I looked at him doubtfully, as well I might after receiving such a proposal. He gauged my thoughts, no doubt, for he pressed me on the point where resistance would be weakest.

"You will be amply remunerated," said he. "May I ask the terms which will be agreeable, and which will suffice to repay your loss in leaving the city?"

The appearance of the room might have told him how little that loss would be. More to test him than with any well-defined idea as to the value of my services, I said:

"Two thousand dollars a year, and expenses, with an allowance for closing up my affairs here."

"It is agreed. Let us bind the bargain." And with that he drew from his pocket a roll of bills and held them out to me.

"When shall the arrangement take effect?" I asked.

"Now, from this moment. Shall it be so?"

I hesitated, but only for an instant. The sight of the money overpowered my doubts—it represented so much to one whose fortunes were so desperate.

"Yes," said I, "from this moment." And I took the roll of bills.

I had acted upon impulse, but it may be that long deliberation would have brought about the same result. I knew nothing of the man, except that he bore a token from my best friend. I was ignorant even of his name, for from the first I understood Lamar to be an alias. At his motives I could hardly guess, but it was most probable that he was a political exile. At all events, association with him could not change my condition for the worse. There would be at least the prospect of a decent livelihood; and very alluring that prospect was. In short, it was difficult to discover how I should be the loser. A moderately successful practitioner would have smiled at such an estimate as I had placed upon my services, but the experiences of the last year had not been conducive of over-confidence. So, now that I had put myself under this stranger's orders, I lost no time in asking him what the first of them might be. He replied that he was anxious to leave the city at once.

"There is little to detain me," said I. "I dare say I can be at your disposal by ten o'clock to-morrow morning."

"Not so. We must depart to-night," he answered, decisively.

"What? To-night? There is no train at this hour."

"I comprehend. But I prefer a carriage beyond the environs. One can be obtained, can it not?"

"Yes."

"Then arrange for it at once. You may return for a time, if there is need."

Here was haste with a vengeance. Still, if he desired it, so should it be. It mattered little to me how the night was passed. He was paying for his right to command, and he should have the worth of his money.

"A conveyance shall be at the door in half an hour," said I. "Will you await it here?"

"No. But I will return in the time set," said he. "First pledge me again to maintain faith."

I gave the promise, and saw him step out into the night, without concerning myself greatly as to the probable outcome of our alliance. Then I went my way to rouse up the owner of a livery-stable near by and to bargain with him for a vehicle. Although he had never profited by my patronage, he knew me to be a physician, and therefore supposedly subject to late calls from distant patients. I had decided to drive to Merton, a town about 20 miles away, on the line of railway we would use in our journey. The man exacted a stiff price for the carriage, but there was no haggling over it, for I got as much pleasure as he from the exorbitant sum he demanded; there was certainly more of novelty for me in participating in such a transaction.

When, at the time appointed, Lamar returned to the office, he carried a small black satchel, which apparently contained all the effects he cared to take with him. The carriage was at the door, the driver grumbling to himself at the long ride which lay before him. Once in the vehicle, Lamar settled himself comfortably in his corner and lighted a cigar. The satchel was on the seat beside him. I observed that his hand never left it. Neither of us spoke often in the course of the drive. There were questions I burned to ask, but it was altogether likely that they would not be answered. As his employe, I felt compelled to respect his moods, and his present one was certainly that of reticence. Although the road was good, and the motion of the vehicle easy, I felt no drowsiness; my strange companion supplied me with abundant food for reflection. Our Jehu took his time, and the horses were not ambitious, but before daylight our destination had been reached. A sleepy attendant led us to our rooms in the Merton hotel, and a little later I was slumbering as peacefuly as if I had been stowed away in my dingy quarters in the city, with never a prospect of an adventure more unusual than an encounter with a dunning creditor.

V.

Lamar's knock awakened me, and I arose refreshed and ready to carry out the scheme outlined the night before. A clock on the mantel showed that nearly half the day had slipped away. Dressing quickly, I passed into my companion's sitting-room, where a substantial breakfast was spread on the center-table. It had been arranged that we should shun the hotel dining-room, and a statement that Lamar was traveling under my professional care could be relied upon to quiet any curiosity developed by our exclusiveness.

Lamar was seated at the table, with a half-finished cup of coffee before him. The light from the window fell upon him, and for an instant I repented the bargain between us; for his face was one of the most repulsive it had ever been my lot to behold. The sallowness I had noticed was more pronounced, and there were lines which had escaped the scrutiny by lamplight. The chin was long and pointed, the cheeks were thin, and the forehead, though high enough to indicate no lack of brain-power, was narrow and wrinkled. There were hollows at the temples such as one often sees in sufferers from wasting diseases; with the dark circles under his eyes, they gave him the look of a man whose health was irretrievably shattered, though, as it proved, his physical condition was no matter of immediate concern. As has been said, his nose was large and curved, and his hair and mustache were streaked with gray. His teeth, which he seldom showed, were large, discolored and irregular. His eyes, above which the brows met in a bushy hedge, were small and deeply sunk in his head. There was hardly one of the man's features which was pleasing, and combined they made up a face almost grotesque in its uncomeliness; yet in studying the expression of his countenance one forgot his ugliness. It is the business of the physician sometimes to consider more than mere bodily ailments, to heed the signs and tokens of the forces of the animating spirit, to seek out the passions which have held sway and dominated the existence of the patient. Deceived somewhat at first by his appearance of decrepitude, I tried to solve the problem Lamar presented from a professional standpoint. There was power in his face; power, will, determination; much self-control, and more selfishness. Plainly, thought I, a man of bitter hates and few affections, unscrupulous and resourceful, now a fugitive, and bearing in his eye the look of dread of his pursuers.

What brought him to such straits? Over and over again I asked myself the question. That political intrigues had made him an outlaw seemed to be the most natural explanation, but it failed to meet all the requirements of the case. A political offender, once in the United States, would be free to go about openly, yet here he was in hiding and anxious to reach a still more remote refuge. His manner was that of one accustomed to exercise authority. Why should he have intrusted his fate to a stranger, young and poor? Surely he might have commanded a far more powerfully ally. It was as if in his game with fate he had chosen to risk his all on the slenderest of chances and at the greatest odds.

He gave me time enough for these reflections; for after the first salutations he relapsed into silence. Perhaps he guessed what the trend of my thoughts would be, and was willing to allow me an opportunity to study him. Not until my meal was finished did he speak. He had lighted a cigar, and was watching the rings of smoke, which he blew very skillfully.

"So far all has gone well," said he. "Yet I would not delay; this I think you do comprehend. It is, however, my preference to travel by night. But first let me ask, you are still content with the agreement?"

"Perfectly," said I. It was not the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, but it served well enough.

"Very good. Then to consideration of an immediate matter. You will pardon me my slowness of speech in English—"

"But you speak it well," I broke in.

"I lived in England several years," he answered, but no sooner was the explanation made than he appeared to regret it; for he added: "But to our subject. Permit me to lay before you a plan."

"Pray proceed," said I, somewhat puzzled as to what was to come.

"This it is: That you, having this afternoon to do with as you may, return to the city and there conclude such affairs as are pressing. It is most probable that another opportunity so excellent may not present itself."

His meaning was sufficiently patent. Once we should have reached our destination he would prefer to have me without an excuse for revisiting my old haunts. Nothing, though, would suit me better than to fall in with his desire. So I said:

"If you will allow me until nine o'clock this evening, I promise to be free in every way to accompany you wherever you choose to go. My business can be closed in short order. You may rest satisfied that I shall say nothing of the change of my plans. In fact, I don't expect to excite any lively curiosity; it will be merely a case of another man dropping out of sight; the city is too accustomed to such disappearances to worry about another added to the list. Believe me, I don't regret our arrangement."

Regret it, indeed! The salary offered was ten times as large as my income for the last year. It would mean at least plenty to eat and plenty to wear, a comfortable home and freedom from the cares which had made life a burden. The wolf of poverty that had haunted my door would be driven on to howl about the dwelling of the next poor devil. At an earlier stage of my career I might have hesitated, have paused before consenting to bury myself in the country; but it is a rarely vigorous ambition that thrives on grinding monotony and grows strong through years of semi-starvation; mine was not made of such sturdy stuff. Had Lamar sprouted horns and displayed a cloven hoof I might have experienced qualms, but scarcely well-defined regrets.

Three hours later I was again in the city, and the few ties which had bound me to it were severed. The landlord took my departure philosophically; payment of the arrears of rent seemed to reconcile him to losing the tenant. A near-by practitioner gladly agreed to give room to my books until they should be sent for, and a junkman drove an easy bargain for my furniture. A valise was capacious enough to receive the few effects I cared to take away, and even its contents might have been parted with without great sorrow. There were no patients to worry about, and few questions to answer. To such as were put I replied that I had secured an appointment in the country; and even my professional brother did not think it worth while to push the inquiry further. In short, my neighbors manifested no more curiosity about me than about the vanished builder of last year's bird's nest still swinging on a bough of the half-dead tree at the corner.

It would have been easy to return to Merton long before the appointed time, but I tarried in town to enjoy a luxury which had charmed my fancy on many a day when the cravings of hunger possessed me. There was a restaurant, famous far and near, a gastronomic Mecca to which many pilgrims journeyed joyously, under whose roof I was determined to dine. Often had I surveyed its glories from the pavement without, prowling about the place in fascination at the picture of good cheer visible through its windows. Now I was privileged to enter, strong in the consciousness that a roll of bills, still of goodly size in spite of the payments made from it, nestled in my pocket. Let it be confessed, however, that as I stepped through the doorway my hand was clutched about the money, as if in fear that it might vanish. Not until I had dined and the account had been liquidated did the dread of an awakening from so pleasant a dream disappear. The remembrance of that solitary feast will be always with me; for it brought the first convincing proof that the old period of stress was at an end.

A suburban train bore me to Merton early in the evening. I went at once to my employer's room. Before leaving the city I had secured time-tables of the road on which we were to make our journey, and had found that a through express stopped at the town at ten o'clock. Lamar was well pleased with this bit of information. He had not quitted his quarters in my absence, he said, and none of the hotel servants, except the somnolent porter who admitted us, had had a glimpse of his face, for he had kept out of sight when food and drink were brought to his room. A little before ten o'clock I settled our reckoning, and we left the hotel by a side door, reaching the station just as the train rolled up to the platform. My companion chose a coach in which there were few passengers and, picking out a dark corner, buried his face in his upturned coat collar and pretended to sleep. One of his hands was clasped about the strap of his little valise, and not once in the course of the journey did he loosen his grip upon it.

There was a weary ride of several hours, and then an equally weary wait at a junction at which we were to take a train over a branch line; but long before the lazy folk—if there were any sluggards in that workaday region—were stirring, our travel by rail had been completed. We left the cars at Bassettville, the station nearest Rodneytown, which was separated from the railway by a ten-mile stretch of country. As it happened Sam Carpenter, the owner of a livery stable near by, who usually supplied conveyances to persons desiring to reach the village, was an acquaintance of my boyhood days. With him I was soon in friendly discourse.

"I've got a patient with me, Sam," said I, "and he wants to breathe pure sea-breezes. I'm taking him down to the old place. He needs good air and quiet."

"Wall, he won't git much else, I guess," said the man, with all the contempt of the railroad town for a place less blest. "Want a steady nag, don't ye? Take a boy along, or drive yerself?"

"Never mind about the boy; I know the way," I answered. "I'll see that the team gets back to you this afternoon."

CYCLING COMMENT.

The entries for the Decoration Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen close tomorrow.

Freddie Richt, who won the Irvington race last year, is in active training for the coming big race.

The Congregational Cyclers will start from the church at 4 p. m. tomorrow, if the weather is fine.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a shipment of seventeen Crescents and one Dayton yesterday.

Walter C. Roome, who rode last year under the colors of the N. J. A. C., will be one of those to contest in the events at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a new Cleveland tandem yesterday. It is geared to 80, has the double steering gear and separate chains to each crank shaft.

The metropolitan riding district includes New York, Brooklyn and several miles of outlying country in every direction, and contains 155 wheel clubs. Of these New York has 61 and Brooklyn 46.

Among the riders now training at the Crescent Oval is Joe Donahue, the champion long distance skater. He has only been riding a wheel for a month, but has developed wonderfully. He will ride in the novice and the one-mile handicap at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

One of the best New Jersey riders in the amateur ranks last year was W.G. Douglass, of Atlantic City, who rode for the N. Y. A. C. and also for the University of Pennsylvania. He was transferred to class B just before the Springfield meet and rode in several races in that class. By the change in the racing rules he is now an amateur, and expects to ride at the Crescent Oval on the 30th.

Howard B. Mosher, of the Jersey Wheel company's racing team, is now hard at work at the Crescent Oval training for the Decoration Day races of the Crescent Wheelmen. Mosher was the class A king of the Metropolitan district last year, when riding under the colors of the Harlem Wheelmen. He won all the New York State championships, besides finishing first in most of the leading events in the district. He will make his first appearance as a professional on Decoration Day.

Owing to the popularity of the Newark-Philadelphia Century run, the Quaker City Wheelmen have decided to hold their second annual run over that course this year on Decoration Day. The course itself is sufficiently well-known, without going into minute details; suffice it to say, that it is almost flat, the only hill of any account being at Holmesburg. So as to keep within the rules of the Century Road Club of America, the start will be made at 5 o'clock, instead of 4 o'clock as heretofore. Great care will be taken on this run in regard to speed. The pace will be about nine miles an hour, according to the condition of the roads. Experienced pacemakers selected from New York, Newark, Trenton and Philadelphia will have the pacing of the run in their respective districts; two pacemakers being in the lead all the time. So as to avoid the crowding up on the pacemakers, as is usual on runs of this kind, a road committee will be appointed who will ride some 20 yards back of the pacemakers and no one will be allowed to ride ahead of this committee. The run will start positively, rain or shine. Ample time will be allowed for dinner and rest at Trenton, as well as frequent stops on the road at the different towns. This will be the first large century run to pass through this city this year. The schedule is as follows:

Miles.	Towns.		Time.
	Newark	leave	5 00 a. m
8	Orange	"	5.45
24	Plainfield	"	7.30
33	Bound Brook	"	8.30
37	Somerville	"	9.00
55	Hopewell	"	11.30
69	Trenton	arrive	1.30 p. m
		leave	3.15
79	Bristol	leave	4.30
94	Frankford	"	6.00
101	Philadelphia	"	7.00

Entry blanks made be obtained from the Cycling Department of The Daily Press.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

The Atalanta Wheelmen, the leading bicycle club of Newark, are planning a big race meet for Saturday, June 20th, at the Waverly Park half-mile track. There will be eight events, a one-mile novice, half-mile handicap, one-mile scratch, half-mile tandem, two-mile handicap, one-mile handicap for amateurs, a one-mile scratch and a two-mile handicap for professional. The amateur prizes will consist of diamonds, watches and jewelry. The event for tandems is a new departure, but promises to be very popular as tandem teams are quite numerous this year. Entry blanks for the meet may be obtained from the Cycling Department of The Daily Press.

The Jersey Wheel Company have just secured the Crescent Rink building, which will hereafter be known as the Jersey Wheel Company Academy. J. L. Wiseman will continue as manager of the academy. A full line of new wheels will be placed in the building for the use of beginners, also for rental to those desiring indoor or outdoor riding. Every purchaser of a Jersey bicycle or any other make handled by this company, will be taught to ride free.

AROUND THE BASES.

Tomorrow the Y. M. C. A. team will cross bats with the Westfield team. The batting order of the former will be as follows: McKelvey, 2b; Dennis, c; Major, ss; Cory, 3b; Sansom, lf; Simmons, 1b; Johnson, p; Townley, cf; Pierson, rf. The game will be called at 4 p. m. Admission to the grounds will be 15 cents. The entrance is on Washington avenue just off West Front street. Camp chairs will be provided for those desiring seats.

The Ratio of Size to Price.

"You don't want that $25 hat, Mary," said Mr. Muggins, who was with his wife in the milliner's store. "It's too big, anyhow. Now, if the milliner could only take off four or five feathers it would be all right."

"That's easy," interposed the milliner, sweetly, suiting the action to the word. "I take them off so—see? And there you have a love of a little bonnet."

And then, as Mr. Muggins felt for his pocketbook smilingly, thinking of the economy he had effected, she added: "Now it's only $50."—Chicago Record.

A Hard Question.

Modern Maid—I wish some advice.

Old Lady—Certainly, my dear. What is it?

Modern Maid—Shall I marry a man whose tastes are the opposite of mine, and quarrel with him? or shall I marry a man whose tastes are the same as mine, and get tired of him?—N. Y. Weekly.

Tourists of the Future.

Little Dot—I wonder if they will ever make flying machines that will go.

Little Dick—'Course they will and they'll go about a thousand miles an hour. An Englishman can leave London after breakfast, fly over to this country to dinner, and be back home writing a book about America before supper.—Good News.

Infinitely Worse.

Jones (despondently) — That's the worst joke I ever had played on me.

Bones—What's that?

Jones—My best girl promises to be a sister to me.

Bones—Gad! Mine played a meaner one than that on me. She promised to be a wife to me, and, what is worse, did it.—N. Y. World.

Exemplary Patience.

He (at the trysting place)—What a time you have kept me waiting!

She—Quite to the contrary; it is only six, and I did not intend to be here before seven!

He—Just so; but you have mistaken the day. I have been waiting here since yesterday!—Humoristische Blaetter.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

One minute is the standard time, and One Minute Cough Cure is the standard preparation for every form of cough or cold. It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. For sale by L. W. Randolph 143 West Front Street.

BAPTIST MEETING.

Sessions of the Publication Society and the Missionary Union.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 22.—The Publication society last evening gave way to the American Baptist Historical society. Dr. Lemuel Moss of New York presided. In his opening remarks he said that the entire library and manuscripts of the society were lost by fire when the publication house was burned three months ago. He said that while the loss included many valuable things which cannot be replaced the society has already received offers of valuable books and papers and hoped to live to make memorable history for many years to come. The old officers were then re-elected. The report of the board of managers stated that temporary quarters have been fitted up in the fire-proof Harrison building and permanent quarters are in process of erection in Philadelphia. The Rev. Dr. Philip L. Jones of Pennsylvania delivered the annual address. To-day the historical society will give way to the American Baptist Missionary union and reports and discussions on missions and mission work at home and abroad will continue until Monday, when the American Baptist Educational society will celebrate its eighth anniversary with a series of meetings extending over two days.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The New Bishops To Be Consecrated on Thursday Next.

Cleveland, May 22.—The Methodist conference has set Thursday next as the date for the consecration of the new bishops. The services will be held in the armory, where the daily sessions of the conference are held. The officials of Epworth Memorial church tendered the use of that structure, but it was declined, as the armory will seat more persons. Dr. Smith was elected as third secretary of the Missionary society on the fifth ballot, and corresponding secretaries of the Church Extension society, Dr. A J. Kynett and Dr. W. A. Spencer were re-elected on the first ballot.

ACQUITTAL OF SNODGRASS.

Feared in Chattanooga That Further Hostilities May Be Attempted.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22.—It is feared now by some of those acquainted with Col. Beasley that the acquittal of Judge Snodgrass in the circuit court yesterday will only further enrage Beasley and his friends and that further hostilities may be attempted. Snodgrass is chief justice of the supreme court of Tennessee, and he was charged with intent to kill Col. Beasley for reflecting on a judicial decision to which Snodgrass was party, as a "political decision." Judge Snodgrass, meeting Beasley, demanded retraction, and, after hot words, drew a revolver and wounded him in the arm. Beasley ran for governor in 1882 on the greenback ticket.

It Was Tillman's Convention.

Columbia, S. C., May 22.—The state convention, which took a recess till September 1 next, did exactly what Senator Tillman expected it to do. The platform adopted denounced President Cleveland's administration in no unmeaning terms; declared for a graduated income tax; denounced the issue of bonds in time of peace, and declared for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. The delegation elected to Chicago is headed by Tillman, and there is not a man on it who will not follow him from the convention hall if he says bolt.

Buffalo Building Disaster.

Buffalo, May 22.—Shortly after midnight this morning the remains of a man were taken from the ruins of the collapsed Brown building. This makes three dead, barber George Metz and Jennie Griffith, cashier, being the other two victims. Hawke, the carpenter, is probably fatally injured and a score are more or less seriously injured.

SAVE THE PALISADES.

QUARRYMEN'S WORK OF DESTRUCTION MAY HAVE TO CEASE.

New Jersey State Forestry Association Deplore the Havoc Wrought—Grandeur of River Scenery Being Rapidly Ruined.

Several members of the New Jersey State Forestry Association, which had its meeting in this city on Thursday, were yesterday guests of the Palisades Commissions of New York and New Jersey on an excursion up the Hudson as far as Piermont, that they might be shown the damage that has been done to the front of the cliffs by the quarrymen.

The party went on board the Pennsylvania steamboat America at 10 o'clock from the Adams Express wharf in Jersey City. At noon the steamboat was opposite the quarry owned and worked by Carpenter Brothers, about a mile above Fort Lee, and those on board were just in time to see twenty blasts fired off. These blasts were placed about half way up the cliff, where the stones and earth were mixed in nearly equal proportions, forming the talus, or earthen sheath, at the foot of the cliff and for varying distances up its front, upon which the trees grow so luxuriantly—where there are no quarries.

The quarry formed a hideous gap in a view otherwise very beautiful. The tops of the cliffs stood out in bold outline as far north on the Hudson as the eye could reach. Up the face of these cliffs, as high as there was earth to nourish them, grew oak and chestnut trees in full foliage. Here and there a narrow path through the trees marked the dry bed of a winter torrent.

J. James R. Croes, of 68 Broad street, one of the members of the New York Palisades Commission, explained the object of those who are working to save the unimpaired beauty of the cliffs not only for the enjoyment of the adjoining States of New Jersey and New York, but also for the hundreds of thousands of visitors who come from all parts of the world to see the Hudson.

"The State of New Jersey, by an act of its Legislature, has already granted to the United States all its water-front rights along the shores of the Palisades, and its future income from the taxes which would accrue to it from the land to be included in the military reservation which it is purposed to make. These grants, however, which are equal to a capitalized sum of several hundred thousand dollars, are conditional upon Congress passing the act requiring possession of the land. We feel, therefore, that the State of New Jersey may be held to have done its strict share of the work of preserving the Palisades.

"Neither the State nor the City of New York can, I believe, give any money to acquire land in another State. There is no chance of getting so many different owners of quarries and building sites to sell their property voluntarily to any association, so that the only way to reach them is by powers of condemnation.

"Only two legal bodies possess this power in the present case—one the United States, and the other the State of New Jersey. The acquisition of the battlefield of Gettysburg by the National Government has been held to be legal by the Supreme Court on the ground that it is a historic site to be preserved for the benefit of the Nation at large.

"The bill to make the Palisades a military park was introduced in the House of Representatives by B. L. Fairchild, and is now in the hands of the Military Committee, of which R. W. Parker, of New Jersey, Newton M. Curtis, George N. Southwick, and George B. McClellan, of New York, are members. Gen. Hull, of Iowa, the Chairman of the committee, is averse to reporting the bill. In the Senate, W. J. Sewell, of New Jersey, has charge of the bill. The entire cost would be $500,000, but with $50,000 in hand the work of condemnation could be begun and Carpenter Bros., Brown & Fleming, Trainor, and Gallagher, the four chief quarrying firms, might be stopped from further defacing the cliffs."

B. E. Fernow, chief of the Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture, who was on board the steamboat, made a calculation which showed that $5,000 a year might be made in revenue from cutting the timber on the Palisades slopes, using approved forestry methods. This would equal a capitalization of $100,000, or one-fifth the purchase money, at 5 per cent.

John Gifford, State Forestry Agent for New Jersey, who was also on board, suggested that the Palisades would make an almost ideal sight for a School of Forestry, because, in addition to the woodcraft to be learned in the Palisades woods, the Jesup collection of American woods in the Natural History Museum, the trees from foreign regions now in Central Park, and the new Botanic Gardens would afford opportunities for gaining a scientific knowledge of woods and forests unsurpassed in any other part of the country.

Among those present on the steamboat, in addition to those already named were: ex-Congressman Augustus Cutler, President of the New Jersey Forestry Association, and Mrs. Cutler; Waldo G. Morse, one of the New York Palisades Commissioners, and Mrs. Morse; Miss Susan Lippincott, of Cinnaminson, N. J., Mrs. D. W. Pond, of this city, Mrs. Dr. Hussey, Mrs. Edith McCarthy, President of the Town Improvement Association, of this city; Mrs. Eaton, of this city, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Powell, Miss Gifford, of May's Landing, and S. A. Krom. The steamboat was in charge of Henry C. Rosa, of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

ONLY $900 MORE NEEDED.

Then the Relief Association Will Own Their Home Free of Encumbrance.

The ladies of the Plainfield Relief Association desire gratefully to acknowledge further contributions to the amount of $150 towards extinguishing the mortgage on the house recently donated for their use, and as a centre for city charities. This additional sum was contributed by Charles Potter, Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Howard J. Runyon, Curtis M. Thorpe, Mrs. O. B. Leonard, the Church of the Redeemer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnston, Mrs. Charles E. Ryder and Miss Ethel Harte. The sum of $2,484.51 had been previously contributed and acknowledged, so that altogether $2,585.01 has been given toward the required $3,500. The Association also owes thanks to William M. Stillman for time and professional services given to the Association in searching the title; and Col. Mason W. Tyler and Charles E. Brooks have kindly aided the Association in their attention to the passing of the title to the property and to the insurance. Thanks are also due to J. J. Heideloff, who, as his contribution, voluntarily reduced his very moderate bill for work done in the building.

About $900 more is needed to complete the fund, and thus render fully available certain handsome subscriptions included in the amount raised, but which were made conditional on the raising of the whole sum.

Subscriptions may be sent to Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, president, or to Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, treasurer, of the Plainfield Relief Association.

TO CONTROL WATER.

The Midland Water Company Organized to Pump Water at South Plainfield.

The Midland Water Company filed articles of incorporation at Elizaeth yesterday with the Clerk of Union county. Its capital is placed at $200,000, of which $50,000 will be issued in shares of $100 each. The corporators are Frank Bergen, County Collector Wood and ex Alderman Halsey, all of Elizabeth. They have acquired a large tract of land at South Plainfield, and have began driving wells there. The company will carry on the business of constructing artesian wells and water works in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties.

Enough Trees to Go Ahead.

The elm tree committee has been successful in securing enough trees to go ahead with spraying. Work will begin Tuesday afternoon. Information can be obtained at the office of Geo. J. Tobin, North avenue. In the absence of Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Pierre Mali will undertake the supervision. She will have a corps of assistants each day. Co-operation of all is asked for.

Broke Down on the Road.

Geo. Rickert, the truckman, met with a break-down accident in Newark yesterday, while returning to this city with a load of beer. The truck broke down while en route, and one of the horses fell and cut himself badly. The accident delayed them a long time and they did not reach Plainfield till a late hour.

Outing for Their Customers.

Ivins & Co., the ever-popular and up-to-date lumber and coal dealers, have invited all the boss masons and carpenters in this city to take an outing with them on Decoration Day. The party will go to New York and while enroute the objective point will be decided upon. It is expected that there will be twenty-five in the party.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. DIVISION OF THE MONEY.

WHAT THE DIFFERENT DEPARTMENTS OF THE COUNTY COST.

The Board of Freeholders Make the Appropriations for the Year—Director Hubbard Appoints the Committees.

The Board of Freeholders met in Elizabeth Thursday and fixed the appropriation for the fiscal year as follows: Laws, $40,000; jail, $65,000; lunacy, $36,000; expense of Board, including salaries, $9,000; coroners' fees, $1,000; elections, $11,000; stationery, $3,000; advertising and printing, $2,500; burial of soldiers, monuments, etc., $10,000; principal on bonded debt, $22,000; hospitals, $500; payment bank interest, $1,000; improvements on buildings, $7,000; erection and repairs on bridges, $23,000; roads, $15,000. These figures are reduced by the fact that the Board has a surplus of $80,000 in bank. The total amount asked for by the committeee is $190,000. Estimates of cost for a new bridge on South street, Elizabeth, and the Willow Grove road will be secured. The committee asked that an increase of $30,000 be allowed. Comptroller Carlton opposed the increased appropriation, and stated that Elizabeth would have to pay forty-six per cent. of the amount at a time when an attempt would be made to reduce the tax rate. It was finally agreed to increase the appropriation $5,000, the whole of which will go to the hospitals.

Director Hubbard announced the standing committees, as follows:

Collector's bonds—Freeholders Wahl, Miller and Burnett.

Publication—Freeholders Hulskamper, Wahl and Swain.

Discharge of prisoners—Freeholders Krouse, Roll and Robinson.

Settle with collector—Freeholders Littell, King and Krouse.

Jail inspection—Freeholders Tier, Krouse and Swain.

Stationery and printing—Freeholders Robinson, Tier and Wahl.

Miscellaneous account—Freeholders King, Robinson and Brucklacher.

Legal opinion—Freeholders Ehrlich, Tier and Brucklacher.

Appropriations—Freeholders Farrell, Ogden, Littell, Clark and Brucklacher.

IN HONOR OF THE NEWLY MARRIED.

A Pleasant Event in the Honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wilbur.

A pleasant informal reception was given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, of Willow avenue, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Macy Wilbur, who were married at Albany, on Wednesday last, and who came to Plainfield on their bridal tour. The evening was passed in genuine sociability and concluded with refreshments. The guests present were Mr. and Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur, Miss Louise Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Bert Moore, Mr and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Fred Bettman, of this city, Mayor and Mrs. Thomas Young, Horace Young, Stephen Townsend, Miss Florence Nicholl, Mrs. B. B. Miller, the Misses Ada, Mamie and Anna Miller of Fanwood.

About the Peach Crop.

Two hundred and sixty replies out of three hundred inquiries sent out from Flemington to the largest peach growers in that section, regarding the prospects for this year's crop, substantially report that the prospects for an immense yield are good. The cold spring weather retarded the growth of the buds until late frosts were over. The buds are now open and are healthy in appearance.

Their Second Anniversary.

The second anniversary of the founding of the Church of the Redeemer will be celebrated tomorrow. There will be a special sermon in the morning and special children's exercises in the afternoon.

One Gun Carriage Completed.

The Pond Machine Tool Company has completed one of the large gun carriages, for which they have a contract for eight, and are now preparing it for shipment.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

WAS THE COP ABUSIVE?

THE POLICE BOARD WILL BE CALLED UPON TO DECIDE THE MATTER.

Henry Bundy Will Enter Complaint Against Patrolman Cooney Alleging Assault and Using Indecent Language.

If Henry Bundy keeps his word, one of Plainfield's policemen will have to stand trial for using unnecessary violence and indecent language while on duty. The little affair that caused all this trouble occurrred at the North Avenue station last Sunday night, and Patrolman Cooney is the officer over whose head the impending trouble is hanging.

Last Sunday evening Patrolman Cooney, according to his statement, found Harry Bundy, a colored lad, behaving in a disorderly manner at the North Avenue station and arrested him. His prisoner's story was considerably different, however. Young Bundy, who is a respectable looking young colored man of this city, said that he was waiting at the depot for a friend. Officer Cooney came up to George Cottlie, of Trenton, a friend who was waiting with Bundy and, according to the latter, kicked Cottlie several times, ordering him to move on or else "he would kick —— out of him."

Young Bundy was arraigned for before City Judge De Meza soon after his arrest and, as he pleaded not guilty, was ordered to appear for trial today. He did so, and then it was that his side of the story was revealed.

Bundy had five witnesses who were present at the time, three of whom swore that they saw Cooney kick the colored lad. Freight Agent Haynes and another man were the other witnesses besides Cooney who testified that Bundy had been acting disorderly. The policeman said that he had ordered the young man to move on but denied having kicked or threatened him. The Judge decided that Bundy was guilty to some degree, at least, and fined him $5.

After the trial was over, Henry Bundy, father of the lad, demanded the knife and handkerchief that had been taken from the boy on his arrest and a search was made for it. He then appeared before the Judge and wished to lodge a complaint against Cooney for kicking Cottlie's and using indecent language. The Judge told him that it would be necessary to make such a charge before Mayor Gilbert or the police board and Bundy left the courtroom vowing that the Mayor should receive a call from him this very evening.

Bundy is now employed as a gardener. He was formerly sexton for the Park Avenue Baptist church.

MARSHAL'S AIDES; LINE OF MARCH.

Marshal-of-the-Day Tyler Maps Out the Programme of the Parade.

Mason W. Tyler, Chief Marshal of the Decoration Day exercises has issued the following:

The following named gentlemen have been appointed as aides to assist the marshal-of-the-day: Capt. William Hand, Major W. D. W. Miller, Thomas R. VonBoskerk, Samuel Brader and Daniel F. Ginna.

The parade will form on Front street, right resting on Watchung avenue and facing northeast, and those who are to participate in the parade are requested to report at the said rendezvous at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of Decoration Day when they will be given their positions in the line by the officer-of-the-day, William C. Smith.

The procession will move promptly at 9 o'clock, and will substantially be formed in the following order:

Marshal and Aides.
Band.
Daughters of the Regiment.
Edwards Cadets.
Sons of Veterans.
St. Mary's School.
Platoon of Post 73.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 73.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 109.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 109.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 73 as Rear Guard.

The line of march will be as follows:

Countermarch from Watchung avenue to Grove street, through Grove street to Lincoln place, through Lincoln place to Somerset street, through Somerset street to Front street, through Front street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Seventh street, where the divisions charged with the duty of decorating the graves in the different cemeteries will separate and the parade disperse.

A W. C. T. U. Sale.

A very successful cake and ice cream sale was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, and during that time the rooms were well filled with friends of the union. The decorations were chiefly flowers and a most artistic and pretty effect was presented.

—The following contract has been recorded in the County Clerk's office this week: Fred C. Lounsbury with G. & C. Hummer, mason and carpenter work, factory, $2,776.43.

A CHARMING EVENT.

Sale and Tea Given By the Women of St. Stephen's Church.

The home of Mrs. Guion, 319 Carleton avenue, was made attractive yesterday afternoon by the members of the altar society of St. Stephen's P. E. church, Netherwood, who gave one of their charming teas, the proceeds of which will go toward purchasing vestments for the choir members. The prevailing colors were pink and white and a more pleasing harmony in effects could scarcely have been arranged. Tables were placed in convenient corners, while the tea table occupied a prominent position in the dining room and was prettily decorated. During the hours from three to six o'clock a large number of friends called and assisted materially in making the affair a grand success. Those in charge were as follows: Fancy table—Miss Smalley, Miss Ladd; candy table—Miss Provost, Miss Edison; cake—Mrs. Beal; tea table, Miss Vaughn. Scripture cake table—Miss Trottie Smith. Special mention should be made of the latter table, as the cakes were made after receipts fonud in the Scriptures, also the cake table which was most generously responded to, there being over thirty cakes contributed. The fancy articles were all very handsome and brought good prices, while the excellent homemade candy was quickly disposed of. The result of the tea will undoubtedly be most successful and encouraging to all.

PREPARATORY SERVICES PROPOSED.

If the Ministers Consent, Rev. B. Fay Mills Will Conduct Special Meetings.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor has manufactured a large number of flags for the Washington Convention. They will be furnished delegates at the rate of $1 a dozen.

The Christian Endeavor societies of New York city contributed $5,000 last year to missions.

The programme committee for the State Convention are steadily completing the same. It will be one of finest every given in the State.

The proposed plan for the State Convention to be held in this city next October is to have Rev. B. Fay Mills precede the convention with a week of special services. As Mr. Mills will not come unless the unanimous consent of the Ministers' Association is given, the matter will have to be brought before that body.

The New Jersey Endeavorers to the Washington Convention will hold a large reception in Dr. Talmage's church during the conference.

Cut in Prices of Wheels.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company, of Park avenue and Fourth street, have received notice from factory that $80 Hartfords are to be sold at $65, and $60 Hartfords at $50. These wheels can be seen in their show-window today and at the price represent the best value of any wheel on the market. The make and quality of Hartford bicycles is so well known that people in need of wheels can make no mistake in buying at these prices. The Eldridge Company wish to notify all customers that a rebate will be made on all these wheels previous to this date, and that same goes with wheels as when sold at higher prices. The Columbia wheels remain at $100, which price is guranteed for the year.

Real Estate Transfers.

The New Jersey Contractor this week publishes the following transfers of Plainfield property as recorded in the County Clerk's office: Frank A. Pope et ux to Jennie C. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Jennie C. Pope to Hannah A. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Sheriff Kyte to Samuel Parmalee, lot Leland avenue, $2680.92; Andrew L. Smalley to John F. Pierson, North Plainfield, lot Everett place, $100; Charles H. Hand et ux to John D. Runyon, 2 tracts, Manson place $1; John Kelly et ux to Elizabeth Nixon, lot East Third street, $500; Laura G. Weiler, New York, to Mary Ann Murray, lot LaGrande avenue, $2,000; Dora B. Sturtevant to Ralph I. Tolles, lot Liberty street, $1.

Mr. Crawford's New Yacht Alda.

F. Marion Crawford, the celebrated author, a cousin of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, is about to sail for Naples. The yacht in which he sails was formerly the pilot boat Ezra Nye, which was always so fortunate that it was looked upon as a mascot.

Sideshow to the Circus.

James Emmons was found on Somerset last evening addressing a large audience. His actions came under the head of drunk and disorderly and Marshal Hansen arrested him. This morning he decided to take 10 days at Somerville to recuperate.

—Justice Crosley gave judgement in the case of Jackson against Stiglitz, on contract, this morning, for the plaintiff for $255.10 and costs.

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

AN INTERESTING PHASE OF THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION.

Counselor McClure Insists That the Colored Girl Had No Right to Her Pay After the Conduct She Indulged In.

Counselor William K. McClure was seen by a Press reporter this morning with reference to the suit of Eliza Ford against Mrs. Katherine Dix Lawrence, tried before Justice Nash, and which is of so much interest to the class of people who employ servants. Mr. McClure said:

"The facts as brought out at the trial are these: Eliza Ford, a colored servant in the employ of Mrs. Katherine Dix Lawrence, was discharged for disobedience of orders, gross impertinence and violent and threatening conduct. She had timely warning that her conduct, if persisted in, would result in her discharge without pay. She persisted and was discharged. She refused to leave the house and became so abusive and threatening that a policeman was sent for, who removed her. Under my advice Mrs. Lawrence refused to pay her for the time served, her discharge before the expiration of her work, the duration of her employment, being justifiable under the law.

"The picayune sum of $3.50, as the article in the News states, cuts no figure in the case. The vital question is, can servants come into our homes, disobey as they please, be as impertinent and insolent as they please, and then, although discharged under such circumstances, compel the master to pay them for the time served? Mrs. Lawrence simply stands upon her rights and the rights of others who employ servants, and her stand is taken and will be maintained to teach all servants that their duties are obedience, politeness and faithfulness to their employers. I desire further to say that the case was not ably argued, as stated in the News. In fact there was but little argument at all. At the close of the case I asked the counsel for the plaintiff, W. S. Angleman, if he wished to argue the case, and he replied that he wished to argue upon the law. The Court then said that if that was all he wished to argue upon there was no need of argument, as the law upon that subject was well settled in this State.

"Whereupon the counsel for the plaintiff requested to be heard upon a new point of law not before raised, the new point being that as the plaintiff was taken upon trial there was no entire contract and wages could be apportioned. The Court heard the counsel through and to his argument replied that the plaintiff herself and both witnesses for the defendant had proven that there was a hiring for a week, and such being the case, the contract was an entire one and wages could not be apportioned. The judgment was no cause of action.

"The article in the News says that the Supreme Court will probably be called upon to finally decide the issue. It has done so already. To carry such a case to the Supreme Court, that has held in Beach against Mullen, 5 v., 343, that a servant can be discharged for impertinence solely, would be worse than inviting the wrath of the gods; it would be inviting the derision of the Court."

Justices Will Qualify.

Governor Grigs has directed commissions to issue to Justices of the Peace, elected in boroughs incorporated under the act of 1882. Recent legislation has made these boroughs independent of, and separate for, the townships from which they were created; and as such it is held that they are entitled to elect Justices of the Peace.—Trenton True American.

By this action the recently-elected justices in the borough will take office. J. A. Karet has already taken the oath, and H. S. Thomas and D. D. Smalley will go to Somerville on Monday and qualify. J. A. Karet fills a vacancy.

A Story Teller and Reciter.

"Judge" William B. Green, the recitor and story-teller, has been secured by the house committee of the Park Club to entertain the members of the club, on Friday evening, May 29th.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then kn that you really care for her and to protect her health. For sale S Armstrong, druggist.

SAVE THE PALISADES.

QUARRYMEN'S WORK OF DESTRUCTION MAY HAVE TO CEASE.

New Jersey State Forestry Association Deplore the Havoc Wrought—Grandeur of River Scenery Being Rapidly Ruined.

Several members of the New Jersey State Forestry Association, which had its meeting in this city on Thursday, were yesterday guests of the Palisades Commissions of New York and New Jersey on an excursion up the Hudson as far as Piermont, that they might be shown the damage that has been done to the front of the cliffs by the quarrymen.

The party went on board the Pennsylvania steamboat America at 10 o'clock from the Adams Express wharf in Jersey City. At noon the steamboat was opposite the quarry owned and worked by Carpenter Brothers, about a mile above Fort Lee, and those on board were just in time to see twenty blasts fired off. These blasts were placed about half way up the cliff, where the stones and earth were mixed in nearly equal proportions, forming the talus, or earthen sheath, at the foot of the cliff and for varying distances up its front, upon which the trees grow so luxuriantly—where there are no quarries.

The quarry formed a hideous gap in a view otherwise very beautiful. The tops of the cliffs stood out in bold outline as far north on the Hudson as the eye could reach. Up the face of these cliffs, as high as there was earth to nourish them, grew oak and chestnut trees in full foliage. Here and there a narrow path through the trees marked the dry bed of a winter torrent.

J. James R. Croes, of 68 Broad street, one of the members of the New York Palisades Commission, explained the object of those who are working to save the unimpaired beauty of the cliffs not only for the enjoyment of the adjoining States of New Jersey and New York, but also for the hundreds of thousands of visitors who come from all parts of the world to see the Hudson.

"The State of New Jersey, by an act of its Legislature, has already granted to the United States all its water-front rights along the shores of the Palisades, and its future income from the taxes which would accrue to it from the land to be included in the military reservation which it is purposed to make. These grants, however, which are equal to a capitalized sum of several hundred thousand dollars, are conditional upon Congress passing the act requiring possession of the land. We feel, therefore, that the State of New Jersey may be held to have done its strict share of the work of preserving the Palisades.

"Neither the State nor the City of New York can, I believe, give any money to acquire land in another State. There is no chance of getting so many different owners of quarries and building sites to sell their property voluntarily to any association, so that the only way to reach them is by powers of condemnation.

"Only two legal bodies possess this power in the present case—one the United States, and the other the State of New Jersey. The acquisition of the battlefield of Gettysburg by the National Government has been held to be legal by the Supreme Court on the ground that it is a historic site to be preserved for the benefit of the Nation at large.

"The bill to make the Palisades a military park was introduced in the House of Representatives by B. L. Fairchild, and is now in the hands of the Military Committee, of which R. W. Parker, of New Jersey, Newton M. Curtis, George N. Southwick, and George B. McClellan, of New York, are members. Gen. Hull, of Iowa, the Chairman of the committee, is averse to reporting the bill. In the Senate, W. J. Sewell, of New Jersey, has charge of the bill. The entire cost would be $500,000, but with $50,000 in hand the work of condemnation could be begun and Carpenter Bros., Brown & Fleming, Trainor, and Gallagher, the four chief quarrying firms, might be stopped from further defacing the cliffs."

B. E. Fernow, chief of the Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture, who was on board the steamboat, made a calculation which showed that $5,000 a year might be made in revenue from cutting the timber on the Palisades slopes, using approved forestry methods. This would equal a capitalization of $100,000, or one-fifth the purchase money, at 5 per cent.

John Gifford, State Forestry Agent for New Jersey, who was also on board, suggested that the Palisades would make an almost ideal sight for a School of Forestry, because, in addition to the woodcraft to be learned in the Palisades woods, the Jesup collection of American woods in the Natural History Museum, the trees from foreign regions now in Central Park, and the new Botanic Gardens would afford opportunities for gaining a scientific knowledge of woods and forests unsurpassed in any other part of the country.

Among those present on the steamboat, in addition to those already named were: ex-Congressman Augustus Cutler, President of the New Jersey Forestry Association, and Mrs. Cutler; Waldo G. Morse, one of the New York Palisades Commissioners, and Mrs. Morse; Miss Susan Lippincott, of Cinnaminson, N. J., Mrs. D. W. IN HONOR OF THE NEWLY MARRIED.

A Pleasant Event in the Honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wilbur.

A pleasant informal reception was given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, of Willow avenue, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Macy Wilbur, who were married at Albany, on Wednesday last, and who came to Plainfield on their bridal tour. The evening was passed in genuine sociability and concluded with refreshments. The guests present were Mr. and Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur, Miss Louise Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Bert Moore, Mr and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Fred Bettman, of this city, Mayor and Mrs. Thomas Young, Horace Young, Stephen Townsend, Miss Florence Nicholl, Mrs. B. B. Miller, the Misses Ada, Mamie and Anna Miller of Fanwood.

About the Peach Crop.

Two hundred and sixty replies out of three hundred inquiries sent out from Flemington to the largest peach growers in that section, regarding the prospects for this year's crop, substantially report that the prospects for an immense yield are good. The cold spring weather retarded the growth of the buds until late frosts were over. The buds are now open and are healthy in appearance.

Their Second Anniversary.

The second anniversary of the founding of the Church of the Redeemer will be celebrated tomorrow. There will be a special sermon in the morning and special children's exercises in the afternoon.

One Gun Carriage Completed.

The Pond Machine Tool Company has completed one of the large gun carriages, for which they have a contract for eight, and are now preparing it for shipment.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

WAS THE COP ABUSIVE ?

THE POLICE BOARD WILL BE CALLED UPON TO DECIDE THE MATTER.

Henry Bundy Will Enter Complaint Against Patrolman Cooney Alleging Assault and Using Indecent Language.

If Henry Bundy keeps his word, one of Plainfield's policemen will have to stand trial for using unnecessary violence and indecent language while on duty. The little affair that caused all this trouble occurrred at the North Avenue station last Sunday night, and Patrolman Cooney is the officer over whose head the impending trouble is hanging.

Last Sunday evening Patrolman Cooney, according to his statement, found Harry Bundy, a colored lad, behaving in a disorderly manner at the North Avenue station and arrested him. His prisoner's story was considerably different, however. Young Bundy, who is a respectable looking young colored man of this city, said that he was waiting at the depot for a friend. Officer Cooney came up to George Cottlie, of Trenton, a friend who was waiting with Bundy and, according to the latter, kicked Cottlie several times, ordering him to move on or else "he would kick —— out of him."

Young Bundy was arraigned for before City Judge De Meza soon after his arrest and, as he pleaded not guilty, was ordered to appear for trial today. He did so, and then it was that his side of the story was revealed.

Bundy had five witnesses who were present at the time, three of whom swore that they saw Cooney kick the colored lad. Freight Agent Haynes and another man were the other witnesses besides Cooney who testified that Bundy had been acting disorderly. The policeman said that he had ordered the young man to move on but denied having kicked or threatened him. The Judge decided that Bundy was guilty to some degree, at least, and fined him $5.

After the trial was over, Henry Bundy, father of the lad, demanded the knife and handkerchief that had been taken from the boy on his arrest and a search was made for it. He then appeared before the Judge and wished to lodge a complaint against Cooney for kicking Cottlie's and using indecent language. The Judge told him that it would be necessary to make such a charge before Mayor Gilbert or the police board and Bundy left the courtroom vowing that the Mayor should receive a call from him this very evening.

Bundy is now employed as a gardener. He was formerly sexton for the Park Avenue Baptist church.

MARSHAL'S AIDES; LINE OF MARCH.

Marshal-of-the-Day Tyler Maps Out the Programme of the Parade.

Mason W. Tyler, Chief Marshal of the Decoration Day exercises has issued the following:

The following named gentlemen have been appointed as aides to assist the marshal-of-the-day: Capt. William Hand, Major W. D. W. Miller, Thomas R. VonBoskerk, Samuel Brader and Daniel F. Ginna.

The parade will form on Front street, right resting on Watchung avenue and facing northeast, and those who are to participate in the parade are requested to report at the said rendezvous at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of Decoration Day when they will be given their positions in the line by the officer-of-the-day, William C. Smith.

The procession will move promptly at 9 o'clock, and will substantially be formed in the following order:

Marshal and Aides.
Band.
Daughters of the Regiment.
Edwards Cadets.
Sons of Veterans.
St. Mary's School.
Platoon of Post 73.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 73.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 109.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 109.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 73 as Rear Guard.

The line of march will be as follows:

Countermarch from Watchung avenue to Grove street, through Grove street to Lincoln place, through Lincoln place to Somerset street, through Somerset street to Front street, through Front street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Seventh street, where the divisions charged with the duty of decorating the graves in the different cemeteries will separate and the parade disperse.

A W. C. T. U. Sale.

A very successful cake and ice cream sale was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, and during that time the rooms were well filled with friends of the union. The decorations were chiefly flowers and a most artistic and pretty effect was presented.

—The following contract has been recorded in the County Clerk's office this week: Fred C. Lounsbury with G. & C. Hummer, mason and carpenter work, factory, $2,776.43.

A CHARMING EVENT.

Sale and Tea Given By the Women of St. Stephen's Church.

The home of Mrs. Guion, 319 Carleton avenue, was made attractive yesterday afternoon by the members of the altar society of St. Stephen's P. E. church, Netherwood, who gave one of their charming teas, the proceeds of which will go toward purchasing vestments for the choir members. The prevailing colors were pink and white and a more pleasing harmony in effects could scarcely have been arranged. Tables were placed in convenient corners, while the tea table occupied a prominent position in the dining room and was prettily decorated. During the hours from three to six o'clock a large number of friends called and assisted materially in making the affair a grand success. Those in charge were as follows: Fancy table—Miss Smalley, Miss Ladd; candy table—Miss Provost, Miss Edison; cake—Mrs. Beal; tea table, Miss Vaughn. Scripture cake table—Miss Trottie Smith. Special mention should be made of the latter table, as the cakes were made after receipts fonud in the Scriptures, also the cake table which was most generously responded to, there being over thirty cakes contributed. The fancy articles were all very handsome and brought good prices, while the excellent homemade candy was quickly disposed of. The result of the tea will undoubtedly be most successful and encouraging to all.

PREPARATORY SERVICES PROPOSED.

If the Ministers Consent, Rev. B. Fay Mills Will Conduct Special Meetings.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor has manufactured a large number of flags for the Washington Convention. They will be furnished delegates at the rate of $1 a dozen.

The Christian Endeavor societies of New York city contributed $5,000 last year to missions.

The programme committee for the State Convention are steadily completing the same. It will be one of finest every given in the State.

The proposed plan for the State Convention to be held in this city next October is to have Rev. B. Fay Mills precede the convention with a week of special services. As Mr. Mills will not come unless the unanimous consent of the Ministers' Association is given, the matter will have to be brought before that body.

The New Jersey Endeavorers to the Washington Convention will hold a large reception in Dr. Talmage's church during the conference.

Cut in Prices of Wheels.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company, of Park avenue and Fourth street, have received notice from factory that $80 Hartfords are to be sold at $65, and $60 Hartfords at $50. These wheels can be seen in their show-window today and at the price represent the best value of any wheel on the market. The make and quality of Hartford bicycles is so well known that people in need of wheels can make no mistake in buying at these prices. The Eldridge Company wish to notify all customers that a rebate will be made on all these wheels previous to this date, and that same goes with wheels as when sold at higher prices. The Columbia wheels remain at $100, which price is guranteed for the year.

Real Estate Transfers.

The New Jersey Contractor this week publishes the following transfers of Plainfield property as recorded in the County Clerk's office: Frank A. Pope et ux to Jennie C. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Jennie C. Pope to Hannah A. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Sheriff Kyte to Samuel Parmalee, lot Leland avenue, $2680.92; Andrew L. Smalley to John F. Pierson, North Plainfield, lot Everett place, $100; Charles H. Hand et ux to John D. Runyon, 2 tracts, Manson place $1; John Kelly et ux to Elizabeth Nixon, lot East Third street, $500; Laura G. Weiler, New York, to Mary Ann Murray, lot LaGrande avenue, $2,000; Dora B. Sturtevant to Ralph I. Tolles, lot Liberty street, $1.

Mr. Crawford's New Yacht Alda.

F. Marion Crawford, the celebrated author, a cousin of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, is about to sail for Naples. The yacht in which he sails was formerly the pilot boat Ezra Nye, which was always so fortunate that it was looked upon as a mascot.

Sideshow to the Circus.

James Emmons was found on Somerset last evening addressing a large audience. His actions came under the head of drunk and disorderly and Marshal Hansen arrested him. This morning he decided to take 10 days at Somerville to recuperate.

—Justice Crosley gave judgement in the case of Jackson against Stiglitz, on contract, this morning, for the plaintiff for $255.10 and costs.

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

AN INTERESTING PHASE OF THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION.

Counselor McClure Insists That the Colored Girl Had No Right to Her Pay After the Conduct She Indulged In.

Counselor William K. McClure was seen by a Press reporter this morning with reference to the suit of Eliza Ford against Mrs. Katherine Dix Lawrence, tried before Justice Nash, and which is of so much interest to the class of people who employ servants. Mr. McClure said:

"The facts as brought out at the trial are these: Eliza Ford, a colored servant in the employ of Mrs. Katherine Dix Lawrence, was discharged for disobedience of orders, gross impertinence and violent and threatening conduct. She had timely warning that her conduct, if persisted in, would result in her discharge without pay. She persisted and was discharged. She refused to leave the house and became so abusive and threatening that a policeman was sent for, who removed her. Under my advice Mrs. Lawrence refused to pay her for the time served, her discharge before the expiration of her work, the duration of her employment, being justifiable under the law.

"The picayune sum of $3.50, as the article in the News states, cuts no figure in the case. The vital question is, can servants come into our homes, disobey as they please, be as impertinent and insolent as they please, and then, although discharged under such circumstances, compel the master to pay them for the time served? Mrs. Lawrence simply stands upon her rights and the rights of others who employ servants, and her stand is taken and will be maintained to teach all servants that their duties are obedience, politeness and faithfulness to their employers. I desire further to say that the case was not ably argued, as stated in the News. In fact there was but little argument at all. At the close of the case I asked the counsel for the plaintiff, W. S. Angleman, if he wished to argue the case, and he replied that he wished to argue upon the law. The Court then said that if that was all he wished to argue upon there was no need of argument, as the law upon that subject was well settled in this State.

"Whereupon the counsel for the plaintiff requested to be heard upon a new point of law not before raised, the new point being that as the plaintiff was taken upon trial there was no entire contract and wages could be apportioned. The Court heard the counsel through and to his argument replied that the plaintiff herself and both witnesses for the defendant had proven that there was a hiring for a week, and such being the case, the contract was an entire one and wages could not be apportioned. The judgment was no cause of action.

"The article in the News says that the Supreme Court will probably be called upon to finally decide the issue. It has done so already. To carry such a case to the Supreme Court, that has held in Beach against Mullen, 5 v., 343, that a servant can be discharged for impertinence solely, would be worse than inviting the wrath of the gods; it would be inviting the derision of the Court."

Justices Will Qualify.

Governor Grigs has directed commissions to issue to Justices of the Peace, elected in boroughs incorporated under the act of 1882. Recent legislation has made these boroughs independent of, and separate for, the townships from which they were created; and as such it is held that they are entitled to elect Justices of the Peace.—Trenton True American.

By this action the recently-elected justices in the borough will take office. J. A. Karet has already taken the oath, and H. S. Thomas and D. D. Smalley will go to Somerville on Monday and qualify. J. A. Karet fills a vacancy.

A Story Teller and Reciter.

"Judge" William B. Green, the recitor and story-teller, has been secured by the house committee of the Park Club to entertain the members of the club, on Friday evening, May 29th.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

BOND TALK IN SENATE

Another Day Spent in Considering Mr. Butler's Bill.

THE DEBATE AT TIMES VERY SPIRITED

Indications That the Measure Will Be Defeated—Conference Reports on Appropriation Bills Side Tracks Labor Commission Measure in House.

Washington, May 23.—The second day of the debate in the senate on the bill introduced several months ago by Mr. Butler, pop., N. C., prohibiting the issue of government bonds without the consent of congress, was very spirited. Mr. Hill, dem., N. Y., spoke for nearly three hours in condemnation of the measure as an act of repudiation, and it was also denounced in most emphatic terms by Senators Sherman, rep., O.; Hawley, rep., Conn.; Lodge, rep., Mass.; Baker, rep., Kas.; while it was defended and advocated by Senators Mills, dem., Tex.; George, dem., Miss.; Clark, rep., Wyo.; Teller, rep., Col.; Allen, pop., Neb., and Stewart, pop., Nev. The test vote on taking it up again in the first instance showed a majority of fourteen in its favor, but when it was displaced by the calendar after two hours' discussion and a new vote was required to take it up again, the majority had dwindled down to two. An effort was made to have a time fixed for taking the vote, next Monday, but objection was made and the bill went over. The final conference report on the river and harbor bill was presented and agreed to, a satisfactory compromise having been reached in the matter of the deep sea harbor in southern Califorina.

House of Representatives.

The labor commission bill has apparently failed for this session. The rule providing for consideration of the bill excepted conference reports on appropriation bills from its operation, and yesterday's session was exhausted by measures of this character. The first was the report of the partial agreement on the river and harbor appropriation bill. It met the vigorous opposition of Messrs. Dockery, dem., Mo., and Hepburn, rep., Ia., but despite their eloquent denunciations of the iniquity of the bill, the report was agreed to by a vote of 189 to 56. Friends of the bill endeavored to prevent a vote by yeas and nays, but Mr. Hepburn was able to muster sufficient strength to effectively second his demand. Next came the sundry civil appropriation bill, and upon the plea made by Mr. Bartlett, dem., N. Y., the house voted—150 to 59—not to agree to the conference report. His objection was to an item appropriating $12,500 to pay Gen. James D. McBride for 2,500 sets of his historical publications, which he said were merely charts, and "cheap, poor, imperfect and faulty." The house voted to insist upon its disagreement to all the senate amendments, except those relating to public buildings, and upon these separate votes were taken.

MUST ANSWER FOR CONTEMPT.

Landlords of Concord Saloon Property Summoned To Court—Some Flee.

Concord, N. H., May 23.—The owners of buildings against whom injunctions have been issued, and known as "nuisance" liquor cases, have been notified to appear before the supreme court to-day to answer to charges of contempt of court. These injunctions were issued in 1888, but have been disregarded by the landlords, who have continued to allow the use of their premises for the illegal sale of liquor ever since. Much excitement has been created among those interested, and several of the accused left town suddenly by train last evening.

Inter-Collegiate Cricket Matches.

Philadelphia, May 23.—The first of the matches for the inter-collegiate championship was played here yesterday afternoon between Harvard and Pennsylvania on the grounds of the Germantown Cricket club and resulted in a victory for Pennsylvania by a run and four wickets. To-day Harvard plays Haverford, the other college belonging to the association. Pennsylvania has still to meet the Haverfordians who generally play strong cricket.

Becker and Cregan's Trunks Located.

Jersey City, May 23.—Detectives last evening located two trunks and a valise belonging to Becker and Cregan, under arrest in Newark on a charge of raising a check from $15 to $20,000 and thus defrauding a western bank, at a warehouse. The trunks were supposed to contain necessaries for the forgers' business, but when opened they were found to contain nothing but wearing apparel.

Yale's New Paper Shell.

New Haven, Conn., May 23.—A new paper shell was received yesterday afternoon by the Yale crew. It has been inspected by Captain Treadway and is found to be very satisfactory. It is on the usual model and will not be used for rowing till the crew crosses the Atlantic. This is the boat in which Yale will race at Henley.

A Newport Residence Damaged.

Newport, R. I., May 23.—The summer residence of Lispenard Stewart of New York city was damaged by fire yesterday afternoon. The principal loss was caused by water used in extinguishing the flames. The fire caught from the furnace place, which had been remodelled recently.

Heavy Wind at Waterville, Me.

Waterville, Me., May 23.—A very high wind swept over this city late last evening. Trees were blown down, also telegraph, telephone and electric wires. A new double tenement house in the upper part of the city was destroyed.

THE GOLD STANDARD

New York Germans Unite in Support of the Yellow Metal.

HELD A BIG MEETING LAST NIGHT

Petitions To Be Sent to German Organizations All Over the Country—An Organization Perfected—Letter from Schurz Read.

New York, May 23.—Pursuant to a call signed by all the prominent Germans of this city a largely attended meeting of Germans was held in the Grand Central palace last night for the purpose of giving expression of their views on the sound money question and also to form a permanent organization. William Steinway was chosen temporary chairman and many addresses were delivered all favoring a gold standard. At the conclusion of the speech making Edward Grosse presented a petition which was approved and which will be sent to German organizations in all sections of the country. It propounds questions to them as to their standing on the gold question, and the answers received will be read at a subsequent meeting. The chairman then read a letter from Hon. Carl Schurz in which he said: "Without an active spirit of enterpise there can be no prosperity. There can be no active spirit without confidence. There can be no confidence so long as there is hanging over the whole business community the danger of deterioration of the money standard which would throw all relations of values into the most disastrous confusion, wholly ruin our credit and turn all business calculations into wild gambling. It is the highest time that the threatening cloud of this danger be swept from our horizon. Whoever has the welfare and good name of the American people at heart should do his part to put an end to this question, and force party candidates to show their colors and to bring clearness into the situation." Officers were elected and arrangements completed for continuing the fight against any attempt to debase the gold standard.

Nerve

Excitement, overwork and worry are ruining the health of thousands of women. Pure Blood is required to feed the nerves, a good appetite and digestive strength are demanded to keep the body strong and vigorous, and to restore the exhausted energies there must be sound and refreshing

Sleep

By its power to respond to all these needs Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself the greatest friend of women. Thousands write that they have been given health and strength by its use. It is the great blood purifier, and consequently the true nerve tonic.

"I feel that I should be wanting in common gratitude should I fail to tell the benefit my wife has derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla. She became seriously ill from running ulcers, caused by poorness of and was strongly advised by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She said it had cured her and would no doubt cure my wife. So we tried it, and to say that its effect is wonderful, is only using a mild expression. It appears to be building up a new constitution for her; and, as we are a family of eleven, there are eleven of us rejoicing at the result.

"If the foregoing induces only one person, suffering in the same manner, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I shall feel more than rewarded." ELIJAH PACKER, 585 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Diphtheria
✱ Less Fatal.

If the patient's strength can be maintained, and the great vital centres of the body "kept up" to the performance of their natural functions, they will thus dispel the disease germs that impregnate the entire body, and if sufficient vitality is experienced, the fatality of this dreaded disease is lessened a hundred-fold.

Bovinine

that greatest raw food, is a wonderful creator of new flesh and nerve tissue, is indispensible in the treatment of this malady, as it gives strength to the patient with the least effort on the part of the digestive organs, and in addition, being itself a germicide, it antidotes the existing microbes of the disease. The ease with which it can be taken when the lesions of the throat preclude the use of other foods, makes it an additional necessity for the sufferer's recovery.

QUAY VISITS CANTON

He Has a Two Hours' Conference with McKinley.

THEIR MEETING WAS VERY FRIENDLY

Rode Side by Side to the ex-Governor's Residence in McKinley's Carriage—Nothing Can Be Learned Positively as to the Outcome.

Canton, O., May 23.—Of course nothing can be learned as to what really transpired at the conference between Senator Quay and Major McKinley yesterday. While it was known that the Pennsylvania leader intended to call on the ex-governor, it was understood the visit was not to be made until early next week. When Mr. Quay arrived at the depot here he was met by ex-Gov. McKinley, and the two entered the latter's carriage and were driven at once to the McKinley residence. They shook hands cordially on meeting at the depot, and both smiled and looked calm and happy. The visit was not long, for Senator Quay left for his home at Beaver, Pa., within three hours after his arrival, but all this time, except a few minutes spent at luncheon, the two gentlemen spent in private conference in Major McKinley's library.

"PAY DIRT" STRUCK.

Gold and Siver Vein Said To Have Been Discovered at Somerville, Mass.

Boston, May 23.—It is rumored that a discovery of a ledge containing rich deposits in both gold and silver has been made at West Somerville. Men blasting for stone for building purposes exposed the vein and samples were at once taken to an assayers. The ledge is on a part of the old Tufts estate, near Lowden street. A number of specimens were brought to S. P. Sharples, an assayer in Boston, and the certificate given by him says that the samples assayed $22.74 worth of silver and $198.40 worth of gold per ton of 2,000 pounds. The specimens also contain lead, sulphate of copper and gray copper. The vien is only about half an inch wide at the surface but it grows wider as it grows deeper, until it reaches a width of seven inches. It is about forty feet long and fifteen feet deep. Adjoining the vein of ore is a clay vein which is also rich in gold.

BIG FORCE OF REBELS ROUTED.

And According to Havana Reports They Left Twenty-two Dead on the Field.

Havana, May 23.—Col. Delgado reports that his command has had an engagement with 1,000 rebels under Aleman and other leaders near Cruces, in the Cienfuegos district. According to the official report the rebels were dislodged from strong positions and compelled to flee in disorder, leaving twenty-two dead on the field. The troops lost eighteen men wounded. It is said that the forces of Gen. Gomez continue to invade the provice of Matanzas, and that they are approaching the province of Havana. Three trains were sent to Artemisa to bring troops from the trocha, but they were unable to reached that place, the rebels having destroyed the tracks.

Characterized as Untrue.

Boston, May 23.—President Litchfield of the Massachusetts Benefit Life association speaking last evening with regard to the virtual charge in the senate on Thursday by George P. Sanger, that the association, through "a prominent Boston business man," had attempted to bribe a senator, characterizes it as "utterly unwarranted and as having no foundation in fact."

Southern California Harbor Matter.

Washington, May 23.—The conferees on the river and harbor bill have agreed upon the Santa Monica-San Pedro harbor matter. The paragraph will provide for the appointment of a commission, as agreed to in the senate, and will add certain restrictions preventing a monopoly in terminal railroad facilities.

Byrnes in the Insurance Business.

New York, May 23.—Thomas Byrnes, ex-superintendent of police, has been elected vice-president of the Casualty Insurance company, of which Benjamin Tracy is the president. There is to be an insurance-against-burglary feature attached to the company's business, which is to be under Byrnes' supervision.

Funeral of Archduke Ludwig.

Vienna, May 23.—The funeral of Archduke Carl Ludwig, brother of emperor Francis Joseph, who died on May 19, took place yesterday afternoon. The services were simple and without pomp. The emperor and other members of the imperial family, foreign princes, diplomats and ministers were present.

May Shut Down the Mills.

Fall River, Mass., May 23.—The directors of Wampoeg mills will hold a meeting Tuesday to consider again the advisability of shutting down the mills to curtail production. These mills operate 88,000 spindles and employ over 600 hands. They are well stocked with goods and can readily meet the demand of contracts already signed.

Cornell Abolishes Two Courses.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 23.—The faculty of Cornell university, after deliberating since last November, have decided to abolish the degrees of bachelor of philosophy and bachelor of science, and bachelor of arts will hereafter be the only degree granted in the general courses.

Held by Ice Blockade.

St. Johns, N. F., May 23.—The Gloucester schooner Alva Guest, in the halibut fishery, is here owing to the ice blockade preventing her reaching the fishing grounds.

With their ears to the ground, the people of New Jersey are waiting to hear something from the Voorhees Investigating Committee. —Tribune.

What? A dull thud?

Here is variety. A Camden man is suffering with blood poison from a rooster peck. Many a man knows what it is to be henpecked.

Next Friday The Daily Press will issue a special Memorial Day number, consisting of a number of extra pages, replete with matter appropriate to the occasion.

"Jersey City hasn't any money to burn," was the remark of an official of that city who has eye to the practical and humorous when the appropriation for $1,000 for Fourth of July fireworks was defeated.

A sound-money Democrat on a sound-money platform will form exactly the combination to defeat a temporizing straddler standing on a platform of compromise and insincerities. —Manchestester Union.

New Jersey seems to be a prolific field for the green goods men. But, creditable as it is to Jersey, the "comeons" are usually from the far west. A sorrowful tale is always connected with those who want to get something for nothing.

"All is not gold that glitters," is well said in the case of Abbey & Grau, the big theatrical managers and producers, whose failure is announced this morning. Only a few days ago a benefit was tendered these gentlemen which was said to have enriched their coffers $20,000, but even this golden streak could not save them from business ruination.

The brute who broke the back of a cat, and was fined $10, well deserved the punishment, though it is admitted that if the scene had been a back-yard fence, the time 2:30 a. m., and the instrument of annihilation a bootjack or some other toilet article, the man would have doubtless been discharged for accomplishing what has not yet been recorded to the credit of any known man.

There is a possibility that the destruction of the Palisades will cease within a short time, as Gov. Griggs yesterday instructed Attorney General Stockton to obtain injunctions against all the firms and individuals now engaged in quarrying along the great wall of rock. It was said in Trenton yesterday that the necessary action will be taken next week.

Ex-Freeholder John Halliday, of Clark township, who has been a member of the Board of Freeholders for twenty-one years, was the recipient, Wednesday, of a testimonial from those freeholders who have been associated with him. A score and one years is a long time to be a member of the county legislature, and an honor well worthy to be capped by a testimonial of the high regard of his fellow members.

Executive Clerk Fox has discovered that the last Legislature passed two distinct bills of the same number and title—Senate No. 126. This peculiar error, he said, he had never known to happen before. One of the bills was signed by the Governor and became chapter 130 of the laws. The other was filed on Tuesday. The bill provides for the appointment, without salary, of deputy wardens by the Fish and Game Commissionars.

Ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, whose name has been sent to the U. S. Senate as postmaster of Somerville, by President Cleveland, has been chosen for the sole purpose of conciliating the different factions that exist in that town. There were several applicants and it was a great surprise when Mr. Clark was appointed. He, if he should accept, will appoint someone to conduct the office, as his large law practice will not permit him to attend to such a small affair as a postoffice. The appointment, while a great big surprise, is generally conceded to be one of the best that could have been made. Mr. Clark is a father-in-law of Assemblyman C. A. Reed.

—The last meeting for the season of the Rasores Club will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at Mrs. I. C. Pierson's on Watchung avenue.

J. FRANK FORT'S PREDICTION.

Thinks Jersey's Republican Delegation Solid for McKinley and Hobart.

Garret A. Hobart, of Paterson, and J. Frank Fort, of Newark, were in Washington yesterday. They appeared on the floor of the house in the morning before 12 o'clock, and Mr. Fort had interviews with a number of Republican members.

Judge Grosvenor, of Ohio, was sought out, and an interview of fifteen minutes was had with him concerning political affairs in Washington. The entire New Jersey delegation was on hand to meet the two gentlemen and introduced them to many members of the House. They also met the Speaker and talked with him for a few minutes before the House convened.

Mr. Hobart stated that he was down there, "looking after things a little and on pleasure bent in addition." He is becoming acquainted with those who will figure in the coming convention.

Mr. Fort, when asked his views on the political situation, as it now stands, said:

"There is no longer any doubt who will be president. It has been practically settled; so do not be surprised when you see McKinley nominated."

"How does the New Jersey delegation stand?"

"I believe that the Republican delegation to the National convention from New Jersey will be solid for McKinley. They are particularly looking to Mr. Hobart for Vice-President. We have seen while here many gentlemen who have given us gratifying news. I am here personally in the interest of Mr. Hobart. I am endeavoring to learn as much as possible of the probable support from different States for Vice-President."

"What action do you think the convention will take?"

"The platform adopted at the convention will of course be for a gold standard and from what I can learn I do not believe that there will be any split in the convention. Perhaps one or two of the western States will bolt, but so far Teller is the only Senator antagonistic."

There is no doubt here that Mr. Fort speaks advisedly with reference to the New Jersey delegation's attitude toward McKinley

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

G. A. R. MEN IN DISPUTE.

New Brunswick Organization Will Not March With Boggs Post.

Kearny Janeway Post decided Wednesday not to participate in the New Brunswick parade on Memorial Day. It has been customary for the posts to conduct the exercises jointly, and the Common Council has appropriated $100 for expenses. This year J. J. Sedam, who recently resigned from Kearny Janeway Post to become a member of Robert Boggs Post, was elected Commander. That displeased the members of Kearny Janeway, so when an invitation was sent asking them to join with Frank Lloyd Post, of South River, it was accepted.

The members of Robert Boggs Post claim that the other Grand Army men are making an effort to break up the parade, but this is denied. Robert Boggs, members say they can get along very well without the other post, as they will have the assistance of the Rutgers College Cadets and the High School boys.

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Skinner, of Newark, is visiting Mrs. J. Apgar.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Randolph have been visiting friends in Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Rue, of New York, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Thomas.

It is said that the trolley road will be in operation on Decoration Day from Plainfield to Jefferson avenue.

Revs. Todd and Martine attended the commencement exercises of the Theological Seminary, at New Brunswick, Thursday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church postponed their strawberry and ice cream sociable to Friday evening on account of the stormy weather Thursday evening.

The Watchung C. L. S. C. will take a moonlight ride to Plainfield tomorrow evening to study the lesson and enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Webb. Stage will leave Lewis Titsworth's at 7:30 and Thomas L. Thomas' at 7:45.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will give a literary and musical entertainment in Friendship hall, New Market, on Tuesday evening, May 26th, for the benefit of the Boys' Mission School, Shanghai, China. Music will be furnished by the Schubert Ladies' Orchestra. Refreshments, consisting of strawberries and ice cream, will be served after the programme. Admission 15 cents.

Sunday, May 24th, in St. Johns church, the children will receive their first communion from their pastor, and in the evening will be confirmed by their Bishop, Rt. Rev. J. A. McFaul, D. D. Father Bogard and some neighboring priests will assist in the solemnities. Mrs. Katherine Maier and John Currid will act as sponsors for the class to be confirmed. The choir promises to render some fine music.

Helen Rice Back With Her Parents.

Miss Helen Rice, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Warren Rice, who last November created a sensation by fleeing with her father from the State, has again returned to New Brunswick, and is once more with her parents. It will be remembered that Mrs. John Woodbridge instituted proceedings to have Helen placed in the care of a guardian, on the ground that her parents, who are alleged to be morphine victims, were incompetent to bring her up right. Vice-Chancellor Bird issued an order that Dr. and Mrs. Rice appear before him with Helen to show cause why their daughter should not be placed in a guardian's care. In defiance of the order, Dr. Rice and Helen left the State and stayed for several days in in Montreal. They returned later, and Helen was placed in the care of her aunt, Mrs. James Demarest, of Long Island.

Miss Roseberry, of the West End, returned yesterday from a visit out of town.

Miss Ella Fenner, of Liberty street, has returned from a visit at Blackwell's mills.

Mrs. J. J. Henderson, of Rockview avenue, has returned from Trenton, where she has been stopping with friends.

Miss Haddan, of Scotland, who has been visiting in this country, is the guest of Miss Nettie Wilson, of West Front street. Miss Wilson will sail for Scotland with her friend, June 6th, by steamship City of Rome.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

The Cost of Religion.

Both as a purchaser of materials and supplies, and as an employer, the church has important relations to business. It is manifest, therefore, that the financial affairs of the church must be on a large scale, when all its interests are considered. Its expenditures foot up to an aggregate which is truly enormous. It takes $10,355,000 annually to pay the bills of the Protestant Episcopal church; $23,863,000 to pay those of the Methodist Episcopal church; nearly $14,000,000 for the expenses and contributions of the Presbyterian church (northern); $11,673,000 for those of the Regular Baptists and $10,355,000 for those of the Congregational denomination, making an aggregate of $88,000,000 every year contributed by 10,786,000 members—an average of $8.16 per member. The grand total for all denominations could hardly be less than $150,000,000 and it might be many millions larger. Most of this is made of voluntary contributions. The value of church buildings, lots, and furniture, in 1890, was about $680,000,000. It is quite probable that it is now fully $800,000,000.—Dr. H. K. Carroll, in the May Forum.

NEW PRISON-LABOR LAW.

Provision of the Robbie Measure Signed Yesterday by Gov. Morton.

Albany, May 23.—The bill of Assemblyman Robbie, which Gov. Morton signed yesterday, is another of those measures drafted by the state prison commission with a view of employing prisoners after Jan. 1 next in accordance with the provisions of the new state constitution, which prohibits prison labor from coming in competition with outside labor. The bill amends the county law and provides that keepers of county jails shall cause each prisoner committed for imprisonment under sentence to be constantly employed at hard labor when practicable during every day, except Sunday, and the board of supervisors of the county, or judge of the county, may prescribe the kind of labor at which such prisoner shall be employed; and the keeper shall account, at least annually, with the board of supervisors of the county for such labor. Such keeper may, with the consent of the board of supervisors of the county, or the county judge, from time to time cause such of the convicts under his charge as are capable of hard tabor to be employed outside of the jail in the same, or in the adjoining county, upon such terms as may be agreed upon between the keepers and the officers, or persons under whose direction such convicts shall be placed, subject to such regulations as the board or judge may prescribe; and the board of supervisors of the several counties are authorized to employ convicts under sentence to confinement in the county jails in building and repairing penal institutions of the county and in building and repairing the highways in their respective counties or in preparing the materials for such highway, for sale to and for the use of such counties, or towns, villages and cities therein.

ALBANY CAPITOL.

Contracts for Its Completion, Aggregating $1,356,388, Awarded.

Albany, May 23.—The new capitol construction commission has awarded the contracts for the completion of the capitol building to the several lowest bidders for the several portions of the work, the amounts of the bids aggregating $1,356,388. The papers were drawn up and signed and the contractors given until next Thursday to make return of their bonds, which will be passed upon by the commission at that time. It was agreed between the commission and the contractors that Morrison & Lestrange of Syracuse, contractors for completing the tower at $119,297, and D. S. Hess & Co. of New York city, who are to do the work of completing the comptroller's and treasurer's offices and state library at $65,400, should finish their work by Jan. 1, while the remaining work is not to be completed before July 1, 1898. P. J. Carlin & Co. of Brooklyn, whose contract calls for $951,691 worth of work, were given an advance of $202,000 out of the appropriation of $500,000, and Prescott, Buckley & Callahan of Keeseville, whose contract is for $420,000, are to do $115,000 worth of work under the present appropriation. Lewis J. Hinton was reinstated by the commission as carver and designer.

WANT HIM SURRENDERED.

State Department Applies To Spain for Forger Martin, Now in Havana.

Washington, May 23.—The state department has applied to the Spanish authorities for the surrender of Martin, alias Mendoza, wanted in New York for forging the name of August Belmont. Martin is the man who was arrested on some charge unknown to this government, and of whom it was erroneously reported that his extradition to the United States had been refused by Spain. Nothing has yet been heard of the intention of the Spanish government with regard to the request, and the department does not expect to be informed on that point until the evidence in the case can reach Havana by mail.

New York Firemen Not To Go Abroad.

New York, May 23.—The board of fire commissioners has decided to abandon the project of sending a crack team to take part in the London firemen's tournament. As Mayor Strong had promised $500 towards the expense of a department parade in New York during the summer the board decided to return all money collected for the trip to London and have a local parade.

Catholic Prelates Indicted.

Jacksonville, Ill., May 23.—The grand jury has returned indictments against the heads of the Illinois college and the Catholic and parochial schools for not having flags on their school buildings. Among those indicted are Bishop Ryan of the Alton diocese and Vice-General Hickey of Springfield, many othor prominent people being included.

Coal Barge Sunk.

New York, May 23.—The British steamer Vedra which sailed last evening for Cape Town, East London, etc., collided with a three-masted coal barge, heavily ladened, in Gedney's channel. The barge sank within five minutes, her crew being taken off by the Vedra.

Providence Bonds Floated.

Providence, May 23.—City Treasurer Granger has just sold Providence bonds to the amount of $700,000, to Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Boston, $500,000 at $113.69, and $200,000 to the Providence Institution for Savings at $114.61.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only h[illegible] among our medical supplies what is kn[illegible] as regular produ[illegible] we are free to confess that the merits [illegible] Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Starving children

There are children without food. They cry for it, and are not answered. The pity of it! But often nature cries out in other ways that her children need nourishment. Is your child thin; actually poor in flesh? Does it get no benefit from its food? Then give something which produces flesh and makes rich blood.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites does more than this. It changes the unhealthy action to one of health, thus removing the cause. It acts on the nervous system, which controls all the processes of the body, toning it up into sound and vigorous activity. It is food for growing bone and brain. It makes the thin plump; the pale, ruddy; the weak, strong; it feeds and cures.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

A little later I drove up to the station where Lamar had been awaiting me. He climbed into the buggy with an agility which was surprising, considering his appearance of illness, and settled down beside me with the valise still in in his hands. I offered to stow it away with my sole piece of luggage back of the seat, but he shook his head.

"It is my preference to keep it," said he. "It is not a burden."

The morning was fresh and clear, and as we drove along the charm of it gained possession of my senses. I forgot the fatigue of the night in a stuffy

"It is my preference to keep it," said he.

car and the fact that we had not breakfasted. About us were gently rolling hills, topped here and there by dark woods, below which stretched broad meadows and cultivated fields; a clear brook rippled near the road, which followed the tortuous course of its little valley; and overhead was a sky without a fleck of cloud, in the heart of the spring morning the most glorious of canopies.

"A beautiful country," said I, half in soliloquy and half addressing my companion.

"And more—a safe country, I think," said he. "We are not followed—at least so far. No one else left the train when we did."

"Oh," said I, thus dragged back from sentiment to reality, "we ought to be safe enough. But, speaking of pursuit, was danger of it imminent?"

"Perhaps," he answered, dryly.

We rode on in silence, the good old horse between the shafts proving his master's warranty of a lack of coltishness, yet contriving to get over the ground with satisfactory dispatch. We parted company with the brook, crossed a little ridge and turned down another narrow valley, traversed it, and crossed a stretch of woodland where the branches of the trees locked above the highway, climbed a hill, and in a moment were looking upon a scene in which there was no suggestion of those through which we had just passed. The road a little beyond us swerved sharply to the left, and, following the line of the ridge, led to the clustered houses of the village a mile away. Right before us was the long, gentle slope of the hill, terminating in the low plain I knew so well, fringed with marsh and veined with narrow tidal streams; and still farther on was the bay, glittering in the sun like a vast sheet of bejeweled azure. Here and there along its margin rose knolls on which grew clumps of stunted trees. Above one of them, a little nearer us than the rest, could be seen the chimney of the old house, as lonely a habitation as man could desire.

"There," said I to my companion, pointing to the spot, "there is your ideal hermitage."

VI.

What would have been the result upon my fortunes had the asylum-seeker failed to be satisfied with the retreat selected is a question over which I have since wasted much time. On the whole, it is probable that I should have seen little more of him, the chances being that in a day or two he would have disappeared, leaving, perhaps, a sum of money sufficient in his eyes to compensate me for services rendered to that date. It is good evidence of the recklessness which then possessed me that, though a contingency of this sort had been in my mind from the first, the thought of it had no deterring influence. As it was, however, he seemed to be content with the choice made for him and ready to carry out our contract.

The task of settling him in his new abode proved to be unexpectedly easy. The owner of the old house was glad to dispose of it for a song, throwing in a patch of marshland along with the little hill on which the building stood. Though it was in need of repairs, and though wind and weather had left many a mark upon it, it was still a stout structure, with stanch beams and firm foundation, capable, apparently, of withstanding the gales of a score of winters. It was built on the summit of the hummock, which rose about 40 feet above the sea-level, a rocky spur pushed up into the light and air from some stratum buried under the low lands of the coast. Upon the rocks was a scanty covering of soil, barely sufficient to give support to the fringe of dwarfed evergreens which surrounded the dwelling. Half-way down the slope on the west or landward side was a spring about which was a patch of turf, the only bit of green on the premises, for the soil under the trees was dull brown in hue, and the seaward terraces were too steep and stony to give root to even the hardiest of grasses. To the east, directly between the knoll and the beach, was a marsh, which also curved about the rocks to border their southern side. On the north a tidal stream flowed so close to the base of the slope that one could step from a boat to the lowest of the rocky ledges. To the west the land was level, but not marshy, and the line of a long-abandoned wagon-track could be traced straight across to the hill from which Lamar had gained his first view of his refuge. Rodneytown was considerably more than a mile distant, but about half-way between the village and the knoll were three or four farmhouses. Their occupants would be Lamar's nearest neighbors, at least on the land side. To the south, perched on another rocky point about a quarter of a mile away, was the hut of a family of fishermen, who were not likely to be intrusive.

As has been said, the business of taking possession was a simple matter, and the night after our arrival we passed in the house by the bay. Lamar showed amazing energy in making the place habitable, and within a week wonders were accomplished. A wagon-load of furniture and fitting was secured from the village; I turned glazier to replace the broken window-panes, whose absence had served at least to save the place from the reproach of mustiness; and my employer developed no mean ability as a carpenter. To be sure, it was a mere box of a house, making our labor so much the lighter, but I felt a good deal of pride in the results. On the ground-floor was a living-room, with a kitchen behind it, and a small room opening from the kitchen. Above were two rooms of fair size, both of which, Lamar told me, he should require for his own use. It had been agreed, soon after our arrival, that I should find quarters in one of the farmhouses between the refuge and the village—an arrangement entirely to my liking, for the prospect of dwelling under the same roof with Lamar was not alluring. He was as unsympathetic as an iceberg, hardly more loquacious, and the mystery he maintained was not of the fascinating sort. In the week we passed together I came to dislike him exceedingly. Sometimes, when a day's labors were ended he would sit for hours puffing away at his cigar, watching the wreaths of smoke, but speaking not a word, and hardly honoring me with a glance. What his reflections might be was beyond my power of conjecture; yet I managed, with considerable satisfaction, to convince myself that he had committed some crime of particular atrocity, and that he was no common political exile. Never, however, did he give me cause to suppose him to be a sufferer from remorse. Whatever his reasons for flight might have been, he seemed now to regard himself as respited from pursuit, and his look lost something of its restlessness, though it was evident that he did not feel that his peril was ended. He had strengthened the doors of the house and fitted them with heavy bolts, while stout bars were ready to be stretched across the lower windows at a moment's notice.

In these early days of our stay at Rodneytown my acquaintance with the townspeople stood us in good stead. Of course our coming and the purchase of the old house set the tongues of the village gossips wagging, but the chatter was not very ill-natured, and the explanation that I, an old Rodneytown boy, had brought an invalid to the shore for the benefit of the sea air was accepted with even less demur than I had looked for, for the villagers were proud of the healthfulness of the place. The additional statement that the sick man required complete quiet, and for the present was unable to receive visitors, was successful in its object. Lamar was not molested by inquisitive callers, and after a little the people whom I met ceased to question me about him, save at rare intervals. A barn-burning about that time did us a great service in giving the townspeople a more vitally interesting topic than a sick stranger forced by his malady to lead a solitary existence.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

One minute is the standard time, and One Minute Cough Cure is the standard preparation for every form of cough or cold. It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. For sale by L. W. Randolph 143 West Front Street.

THINGS TO BATHE WITH.

We have them all—everything but the tub and the water. A perfect bath is one of the luxuries even poor people can enjoy. Only a few things are necessary to make the bath a "perfumed pleasure." Brushes, of course, and sponges. The right sort of soap toilet water of the proper odor. A little sea salt, maybe, to soften the water. A little borax isn't bad. These things and many others we have in profusion.

CYCLING COMMENT.

W. H. Corbett, of North Plainfield, has purchased a new wheel.

Seven new Columbias were received by the Eldridge Bicycle Company yesterday.

Michael Owens, Jim Carty and Geo. Apgar started this morning on their wheels for Raritan.

Edward O. Clark and Robert Clark, of Washingtonville, have purchased Crescents of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The new Cleveland tandem, just received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, has been sold to two Elizabeth riders.

A number of Plainfield cyclists are going over to the Irvington-Milburn course this afternoon to see their old favorite, Monte Scott.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a large shipment of wheels yesterday. There was one Dayton, eleven Crescents and a combination Crescent tandem.

I. A. Silvie, Jr., of Staten Island, who rode here as a Class B man in 1894, and a professional last year, has entered the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

The High School relay team did not run in the race at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon on account of the illness of one of the team. George P. Smith and Donald Stewart witnessed them, however.

A Rambler track racer, weighing seventeen pounds, was received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday. It will be ridden by Frank E. Richards in the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet.

The annual ten mile team road race for the championship of Union County, N. J., will be decided on Saturday, June 6th. The prize is a cup, which was offered by a local newspaper four years ago, to be won three times in order to become the property of any club. The cup has been held for two years by the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, and unusual interest is taken in the race for the reason that it may be the deciding contest.

One reason why beginners find up hill work so very difficult is because they do not have the saddle at the correct height. On a level run no inconvenience will be found if the knee does not straighten quite out, but when it comes to a grade, the best force can be put on the pedals if the rider can actually stand erect on the one which is down; in other words, if the leg from hip to ankle is straightened to its full length at each revolution.

A number of cities, says the American Cyclists make it a punishable offence to roll or "trundle" a bicycle upon any sidewalk. This involves considerable hardship in case a street is full of mud and the cyclist is obliged to move his wheel from one part of the city to another. There is absolutely no sense in an ordinance of this kind in cities where wheelbarrows and baby carriages are permitted on the same sidewalks denied to the unmounted cycle.

The phonograph will be utilized in the Martin road race on Decoration Day, for registering the riders at the turn and finish. Both at the turn and finish the numbers of the riders will be shouted into the hhonograph and recorded. This will prevent the mixups that usually mar all road races, and in case of dispute will tell the story better than a dozen human voices. It will answer the same purpose as the camera, when the finish is so close that the judges are unable to distinguish the winner. There is some talk of using the tame method at the Irvington-Milburn race.

The "pedal mount," which is frequently used by many riders, is exceedingly hard on the light-weight machines now in use, and a rider who thinks anything of his bicycle will not practise it. This method of mounting is by making a few rapid steps forward, stepping on the pedal as it is coming up, and allowing it to lift the rider almost into the saddle. This is likely to result in a severe side-twist of the frame at the bracket, and it is often thrown out of line, causing the chain to run unevenly over the sprocket wheels. Every time the pedal mount is attempted, even if the frame is not twisted, the points where the ends of the tubing are brazed together are more or less weakened, and some of the accidents caused by the breaking of the main frame might be traced to this source.

E. F. Randolph and L. D. Morris rode to Freehold yesterday and went through the Zimmy bicycle factory.

William M. McCutchen has decided to ride in the Crescent Wheelmen's races on Decoration Day. He will ride under their colors.

The county road between this city and Springfield is being repaired, and bicycle riding in that vicinity is consequently not the best.

The Jersey Wheel Company, of 149 North avenue, will have for rental, commencing with Decoration Day, a fine line of new wheels, both for ladies and gentlemen.

The Jersey Wheel Company has just received five hundred bicycle wall stands bronze backed and nickeled wire that usually sell at $1. They will be sold at fifty cents.

The Springfield road, over which the Irvington-Milburn road race is to be run on May 30th, and between the towns of Irvington and Millburn, is somewhat heavy, but will dry out quickly and should be ridable by Sunday. The road is rough, however, even in fair weather.

The earth roads around Elizabeth are very heavy and will probably require two days at least to dry them out. The Bergen Beach road as well as the one from Vanderveer Park to Flatlands Bay, L. I., are in a very bad condition. There are side paths along these roads, however, which are in fairly good shape.

It is seldom that a scheme equals the highest hopes of its promoters but such was the case, however, with the first general run of the Y. M. C. A. cycling league that went to Summit last evening. It was to have been held on Thursday evening but the rain made it necessary to postpone it until yesterday. It looked very threatening last night, but eleven of the local men appeared at the appointed time and as the weather prophet of the party declared that it was not going to rain, they took their chances and started. The party was commanded by Captain Thomas A. Cuming and consisted, besides the captain, of first lieutenant Edward Laine, vice-president, Horace J. Martin, James A. Stafford, Charles B. Morse, W. Gordon Williams, J. Philip Kirch, Clarence Brouard, C. L. Smith, Harry Jessup and Wesley Dunn. Williams and Kirch were on a tandem. The ride to Springfield was a delightful one, although portions of the road were rather rough. The pace was an even one while the monotony was broken by numerous coasting contests and adventures with cows. A sharp look-out was kept for the famous black bull that Tom Smith and Al Simmonds encountered but nothing worse than a very meek-looking brindle bovine appeared. The heavy grade and steep hills between Springfield and Summit had been dreaded by the less experienced of the party, but Captain Cuming showed a very easy method of climbing the hills by zigzaging across the road and the anticipation was found much worse than the realization. Once in Summit they rode up to the Y. M. C. A. building where a rousing welcome awaited them. In a few minutes the Orange delegation appeared followed by Westfield, Rahway and one solitary rider from Morristown. After a general wash, the guests were invited into the gymnasium where a delightful programme of instrumental music and recitations was rendered after which a bountiful supply of good things were brought out and rapidly disappeared before the united attack of the visitors. The attendance was excellent, but would have been larger had Thursday evening been a pleasant one. There were about seventy-five present including the Summit men. Westfield, though the smallest association, was best represented, having fourteen men in line under the command of Lieutenant Condit. They were the most enterprising also for they had a whole string of yells all ready for every occasion. Orange was represented by thirteen riders, commanded by Physical Director Page, while Rahway had a party of four. After three hearty cheers and a tiger for their entertainers, the visiting cyclists returned to their respective homes, Plainfield, Westfield and Rahway going together as far as Westfield. The long procession of lights made a pretty picture. Not a single accident to this party marred the journey and all were highly pleased with the first league run. The next run is on June 4th, to Westfield.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The High School team, which is to contest in the games of the New Jersey Intercholastic Athletic Association at Bergen Point on June 6th, will enter the different events as follows: Two hundred and twenty-yards dash, G. P. Smith; two hundred and twenty-yards hurdle race, G. P. Smith; running broad jump, W. T. Serrell and G. P. Smith; putting the shot, G. P. Smith; throwing the hammer, G. P. Smith and Carroll Runyon; running high jump, W. F. Cornwell and Raymond Carroll; pole vault, G. P. Smith, W. F. Cornwell and Raymond Carroll; junior one hundred-yards dash, Donald Stewart and Garfield Pike; four hundred and forty-yards run, Donald Stewart; one-mile bicycle race, Carroll Runyon, Lindley Hillman and George Coard. There is no entry for the one hundred-yards dash.

AROUND THE BASES.

The baseball season in Dunellen will open on Decoration Day, when the home team will play two games, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon, with the Plainfield A. C., formerly the Arlingtons. The boys are preparing an entertainment to be given in Friendship Hall on June 4th, the proceeds of which will be used to defray the expenses of the season.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Ed Campbell and John Teeple went bobbing for eels Thursday evening and had excellent luck.

Thomas Flynn, John King, Fred Frey and Newton King have been angling in South Plainfield lake and report good catches of carp and cat fish.

Mrs. L. C. Hurtt, of East Third street, leaves town this afternoon for Manasquan.

Ex-County Clerk Cannon, of Elizabeth, formerly of this city, was visiting in town today.

Misses Ella Raybert and Loretta Darby, of Alton, went to Trenton and Princeton today to visit friends.

Rev. Jesse L. Hurlbut, D. D., formerly pastor of the M. E. church of this city, was yesterday re-elected corresponding secretary of the Sunday-school Union and Tract Society, at the Methodist General Conference now being held in Cleveland, O.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

FOR WOMEN IN THE SPRING.

The Ablest of Women Journalists Indorses Paine's Celery Compound.

Mrs. H. B. Sperry, who is now the eminent president of the Woman's National Press association, was assistant editor of the Washington World. Her vigorous editorials in Ohio and Washington newspapers first brought her into national prominence.

The active profession of journalism has kept Mrs. Sperry up to date in information and progressive in thought. When there was evident need of a remedy in her family, she was well aware that Paine's celery compound was best to use. The following enthusiastic letter shows the happy results from the use of this greatest of remedies:

Wells & Richardson Co.,
Burlington, Vt.

Dear Sirs:—A few weeks' use of Paine's celery compound by my 83 year-old mother has been of great benefit to her and proved to my satisfaction that there's nothing like it for the headaches and sleeplessness incident to impaired digestion. A niece in my family was also cured of insomnia by using one bottle of Paine's celery compound.

Yours very truly,
Hannah B. Sperry.

In every part of this country women are utilizing these blessed spring days by taking Paine's celery compound and insisting on its use by the members of their families. It speaks volumes for this wonderful remedy that of all the women who have recovered health by its means very many were induced to take it through the persuasion of other women—sisters, mothers, friends or relatives.

Many a man slowly failing in health but stubbornly shutting his eyes to the alarming fact, has been led to take Paine's celery compound from seeing its remarkable health giving effect in the case of his own wife, sister or some other member of his household.

When a sick and feeble suffer is seen to gain steadily in health and vigor from taking Paine's celery compound not much room for doubt is left to the most stubborn minded person. This joyous transformation from sickness to health is going on in thousands of homes across the wide extent of this country.

The reputation of Paine's celery compound has grown by word of mouth, from persons made well, to others made well, to others who needed its healing, strengthening power. The agreement of opinion among the best-informed, most observant class of people, in the well-to-do homes of our largest cities, as well as in the more frugal town communities, places Paine's celery compound far in advance of any remedy. Paine's celery compound is, in fact, the only spring remedy ever heard of in the home of practicing physicians.

This great remedy is not an ordinary spring sarsaparilla, bitters, tonic or nervine. Paine's celery compound is as far apart from any of these guess remedies as black is from white in the eyes of physicians who regularly prescribe it, use it themselves and carry it home to their own families. Paine's celery compound is the famous formula of that thoughtful and studious physician, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D LL. D., of the Dartmouth medical school.

It is the duty of every man or woman who has been benefited by Paine's celery compound to impress on their friends and neighbors its wonderful efficacy as a spring remedy that is in every way worthy of the name.

The past of Paine's celery compound, as every one who keeps informed of current events is well aware, is a remarkable story of sick people made well, and of many persons, who had given up health as wholly lost, made strong as ever they were in their lives. Paine's celery compound is the spring remedy par excellence. No invigerator has been so much praised, discussed, recommended and used by physicians and discerning, conservative men and women in every walk of life.

The story of Paine's celery compound in a nutshell is that it makes people well.

A PARSON'S CYCLE RIDE

REV. C. L. GOODRICH INAUGURATES A NEW CHURCH AMUSEMENT.

A Party of Congregational Church Members Indulge in a Pleasure Run Arranged by Their Progressive Pastor.

The bicycle has been introduced into many different lines of work, but it made its first appearance in Plainfield in connection with the church on last Saturday afternoon when Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, gave his first "bicycle" sociable, which was nothing more or less than a run to Pumptown and return. This sociable was first announced a week ago yesterday and all the cyclists of the church were invited to participate. As many of the congregation are riders, the invitation was accepted by fully thirty, who gathered in front of the church at the appointed hour, all expectation to find out what a "bicycle" sociable was.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich led the party to Park avenue and up that broad and level thoroughfare to Pumptown, as that little triangular park with a pump in the centre, about five miles from this city, is called. The ride was a delightful one and general satisfaction was expressed with the "bicycle" social. Only one accident happened and that merely added a little excitement to the ride. Miss Demarest's chain broke, but was repaired by a machinist who luckily happened to be working in a neighboring barn. Toward the close of the run, the chain gave way again and Miss Demarest was towed home by her friends. The return was especially enjoyable as the wind was blowing on the backs of the riders and fairly carried them along.

Among those who took part in the ride were: George W. Rockfellow, Miss Nellie Rockfellow, Roland Rockfellow, Joseph A. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Burnett, A. C. La Boyteaux, L. B. Morgan, Miss Morgan, John V. Beekman, Jr., Miss Eda Beekman, Wickam Beekman, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Frankie Demarest, Miss Phenie Demarest, John Allen, William Van Alstyne, Mrs. Louis Van Alstyne, Miss Capitola Conover, Miss Mary Chase, Miss Kate Reed and Stacy R. Raynolds.

When the party returned from the ride they were received at the parsonage by Mrs. Goodrich with some delicious lemonade, which seemed just the thing after the run.

LOST A LEG.

An Italian Tries to Steal a Ride and Falls Under the Car Wheels.

Alexander Casagrandi, an Italian living at Bound Brook, attempted to jump on a coal train at that place on Saturday night for the purpose of stealing a ride. His feet slipped and he fell under the train, with the result of having his left leg crushed. A Bound Brook butcher with his horse and wagon brought the man to Muhlenberg Hospital. Yesterday morning Dr. Long, assisted by the staff, amputated the leg, and the man is getting along as well as can be expected.

Lacerated by a Saw.

Wm. Pangborn, Jr., of the borough, who is employed in a local meat market, sustained a severe injury to his left hand Saturday night while using a butcher's saw. The saw jumped from its position and striking his left hand, the teeth penetrated to the bone. Mr. Pangborn hastened to Dr. Mattison's office and had the member treated. A considerable quantity of blood was lost before the hand was bandaged.

A Runaway.

P. S. Braider's horse tried to runaway last evening near the corner of Summit avenue and Somerset street, and threw Mr. Braider out of the carriage. He was not injured. Mrs. Braider was in the carriage also, and was not thrown out. The only damage was to the wheels of the carrige which were smashed. Mr. Braider resides on Manning avenue.

Entertained at Rose Hill Tavern.

Mr. and Mrs. Laufer at their Rose Hill farm yesterday entertained a great many people. Mrs. Laufer's birthday was celebrated in a royal manner. The party from Newark were so well pleased that Ex-Marshal Pangborn sold a farm to one of the guests and it was not a real estate deal at that.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. FELL FROM A WHEEL.

WILLIAM LOCKE GETS A PAINFUL INJURY CROSSING CAR TRACKS.

It Was First Thought That He Had Dislocated His Hip, But at the Hospital it Was Found to Be a Serious Bruise.

While bicycle accidents have been quite frequent in some places, Plainfield, despite her large number of riders, has been particularly free from serious ones. The car track was the cause of a heavy fall for William Locke, of Orchard place, yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, and Locke now lies in Muhlenberg Hospital as a result of his tumble. Locke is a machinist, employed at the Scott Press Works, is twenty-eight years of age, and resides on Orchard place with his family. He is an enthusiastic cyclist and went out for a spin yesterday.

He was riding along West Front street, just below Plainfield avenue, when he tried to cross the street car tracks. Instead of crossing them at right angles or nearly so, he did so at a small angle. His tires caught and as he was moving along at a lively pace he was thrown heavily to the ground, striking on his hip.

He was unable to rise, and Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., who was in his father's place at the time of the accident, came to the rescue and assisted the injured man to a place of safety. It was thought that Lock's hip was broken and the ambulance was telephoned for. Quite a crowd was attracted by the catastrophe and a rumor of some terrible accident spread about the town. When first examined, the Doctors thought Lock's hip had been dislocated, but it was found only to be very badly bruised. Locke was also pretty well shaken up and still remains at the hospital.

FAST STEPPERS MAKE SPORT.

A Renewed Interest in the Gentlemanly Sport of Horse Racing.

The club races at the Driving Park were continued Saturday, and the horses were all in the best of shape and on edge after their race at Woodbridge on the 16th. The 2:25 class, together with several exhibition miles which made up the programme, kept the spectators interested throughout the afternoon.

Several horses that have been kept back in their work were let step, some for the first time this season in public, and it looks as though from the material we have and that which is likely to come from neighboring towns, that Plainfield is to have some harness racing such as it has not had since the time of the fair.

Morton and St. Albans came together in the 2:25 class, and it was won by Morton in straight heats in 2:28½ and 2:30, he being very well driven by his owner, James Arkell, of Westfield. The summary is as follows:

2:25 class—Trotting.

Morton, sr. g.	Arkell	1	1
St. Albans, blk. s.	Osborne	2	2

Time—2:28½; 2:30.

Bitten By a Dog.

While Miss May Thompson, of Liberty street, was walking from her house to call on a neighbor a few days ago, a dog belonging to the neighbor jumped at her and made an incision in the thigh with his teeth, causing blood to flow. Miss Thompson was frightened and called at a doctor's office, but the doctor was out. She returned and received home treatment. The injury is healing nicely and no serious results are expected.

Crop Report.

Sergeant Neagle has sent the following weather report to the State Weather Bureau for this week: "The drought was broken by showers on the 19th, 20th and 21st, amounting to 1.03 inches, which proved very beneficial to growing crops, but not enough. Much rain is needed between now and June 15th to ensure a good crop of hay. Ploughing and corn planting, which was retarded, is now progressing rapidly. Other crops look fairly well. Average temperature of the week was 67."

Got Trace of the Wheel.

The wheel belonging to George Gould, which was stolen from in front of the Eldridge Bicycle Company's salesrooms some time ago, has at last been heard from. Gould heard of a wheel for sale at Elizabeth at an unusually small price. Examination proved that it answered to the description of Gould's wheel.

Twenty-five Years a Singer.

A special musical service was held in the Grace P. E. church yesterday in honor of the twenty-fifth annniversary of W. R. Cock as choirmaster. In looking over the congregation Mr. Cock says that he saw only two men that were attendents at the church when he started there.

FAILURE OF J. P. LAIRE.

ONE OF PLAINFIED'S OLDEST BUSINESS MEN MAKES AN ASSIGNMENT.

Dissolved Partnership With His Brother, and Since Then There Has Been Legal Conflict Which has Been Disastrous.

The people of Plainfield will be somewhat surprised when they learn that J. P. Laire, one of the oldest business men in the city, has made an assignment. In the spring of 1895 the partnership existing between he and his brother, W. R. Laire, of Belvidere, was dissolved.

J. P. Laire took the business and assumed all debts, etc. Since that time there has been an unsettled account between the brothers, and the latter owed his brother money on account. Up to four months ago J. P. Laire had paid the interest. W. R. Laire has been anxious to secure what was due him, and consequently sued his brother through the Supreme court. About three weeks ago judgment was secured and Saturday night the Sheriff served the notice.

As a result Mr. Laire made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, without preference. The court will appoint appraisers in a day or two, and an account of the stock will be taken and the latter disposed of. Mr. Laire has appointed W. A. Coddington assignee. It is hoped that the difficulty will soon be settled and that Mr. Laire will again resume business.

REINER PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

The Editor is Indicted on Three Counts For Libelling Mayor Rankin.

Before Judge McCormick, in the Union County Court of Common Pleas, in Elizabeth, Saturday, about thirty who were indicted by the Grand Jury were arraigned to plead. The principal indictments were againt John M. Reiner, editor of the Elizabeth Herald, who was accused of criminal libel by Mayor Rankin. He was indicted on three counts, and after pleading not guilty was released on furnishing $300 bail upon each indictment. Justice Vincent W. Nash, of this city, became his bondsman, and the trial will be held on June 15th, when Reiner will be defended by Samuel Kalish, of Newark.

There were no Plainfield indictments.

A Talk by a Nurse.

The King's Daughters of Grace M. E. church enjoyed a rare treat Saturday afternoon at the church when Miss Robinson, a nurse in connection with St. John's Guild, New York, was present, and gave an intensely interesting outline of her work in the city. Many humorous and pathetic incidents were related, which the members enjoyed exceedingly. After the talk, tea was served to all. Mrs. Most, president of the Circle, presided at the meeting and Mrs. Valiant poured tea. A very delightful social time was passed, and altogether the affair was one of great profit.

The Newness of Life.

Rev. George A. Francis, pastor of the Westfield Baptist church, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance, on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the parlors of the W. C. T. U., Watchung avenue, on the subject "The Newness of Life in Christ Jesus." Mr. Francis is a pupil of the late Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., of Boston, has been in the South African mission field and is an earnest and powerful speaker.

Arranging the Programme.

The progrrmme committee for the State Christian Endeavor Convention to be held in this city, met in New York today. Rev. C. E. Herring and E. E. Anthony, of this city, are present.

S. P. Brown, of Dunellen, has been promoted from fireman to engineer on the run between Jersey City and Mauch Chunk. Mr. Brown is a brother of Miss Mary Brown, of East Fourth street.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. E. D. McCarthy, and Mrs. W. D. Pond, of this city, and Mrs. E. B. Horton, of Cranford, left this noon for Louisville, where they will attend the National Convention of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

HE TAPPED THE TILL.

E. E. MARSHALL LOSES $13.50 FROM THEFT BY AN EMPLOYE.

Joseph Burke, a Young Lad, Was Left in Charge of the Store, Saw the Money, Couldn't Resist Temptation, and Stole.

Joseph Burke, a young lad about fifteen years of age, has for a short time past been employed by E. E. Marshall, the North avenue wallpaper dealer. He bore a good reputation and his employer thought him to be honest until Saturday, when he gently lifted $13.50 from the safe, and a few hours later made his escape for parts unknown.

There was considerable money in the safe Saturday, and the above amount, together with some other money, was set a side to pay the men with. As young Burke saw the money placed in the safe he evidently kept his eye on it. During the noon hour the safe was locked and Burke was left alone in the store. Nothing strange was noticed by Mr. Marshall until 5 o'clock in the afternoon when he went to the safe to get the cash, and then discovered that the safe had been tampered with and the money taken. Fifteen minutes earlier Burke had left the store to go to supper. That is the last he was seen at the store. A little later a boy answering his discription bought a ticket at the North Avenue station for Fanwood. Mr. Marshall had Justice Nash issue a warrant for his arrest, and Saturday night Chief Grant and Frank Burke, a brother of the missing lad, went to Elizabeth in search of him, but he could not be found. Young Burke took a revolver from home when he left.

Carrying Jokes Too Far.

For sometime past boys living in the West End, near Clinton avenue, have been playing jokes and carrying them too far until the people in that neighborhood are thoroughly aroused. On two occasions they entered the Church of the Heavenly Rest and cut the rope so that the bell could not be used, and several times Coriell's hat factory has been entered and much damage committed. The trouble has been placed in the hands of Chief of Police Grant and no doubt it will be stopped.

Death of Mrs. Hibbetts.

Mrs. Ann Hibbitts, the wife of Finton Hibbitts, died at her home, 124 Liberty street, last evening. She has been ill for some time. She was fifty-eight years of age and has spent almost her entire life in this city. She was very well known here. She leaves one son. The funeral will be from her late home on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, and from St. Mary's R. C. church at 9:30 o'clock. Interment will be at St. Mary's cemetery.

Made Too Much Noise.

Nicholas Kelly indulged too freely Saturday evening, and when Patrolman Cash suggested that he make less noise, according to the officer, Kelly abused him roundly, giving him names that weren't the most complimentary. Cash arrested him and this morning he was given a hearing before City Judge DeMeza. He pleaded not guilty, and his trial was set down for next Monday morning.

Mrs. Rushton No Better.

Mrs. Robert Rushton, of La Grande avenue, who is suffering from tumor and who was forced to go to a New York hospital, was in such a delicate condition yesterday that the doctors were unable to remove the tumor. The operation cannot be performed until Mrs. Rushton's condition improves.

Damaged by Cows.

A number of residents of Harrison street, in the borough, are complaining bitterly of the cows which roam at will about that street. Lawns are disfigured, flowers trampled to pieces and shrubbery eaten until in some places the lawns look as though a cyclone had struck them.

No Complaint Yet.

Patrolman Cooney was not far from right after all or else Henry Bundy became suddenly very bashful, for no complaint was made against him Saturday evening. It is said, however, that he will bring the matter to the attention of the Police Board later on.

Arrangements Completed.

The committee of the Catholic Club who have in charge the picnic to be held Saturday in Vail's grove, have completed their arrangements. A fine time is assured all who attend. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music.

Soda Water, If You Please!

Plainfield is engaged in a stern crusade against those who sell cider on Sunday. What is the strongest beverage permitted in that pretty town on the first day of the week?—New York Tribune.

CUBA IS IN THE RIGHT.

REV. HERRING ARGUES THAT CHRISTIANS SHOULD PRAY FOR THEM.

The Fight of Cubans is as Much of a Fight for Honor and Patriotism as Was Our Own Strife in the Civil War.

The prelude to the Rev. Charles E. Herring's sermon at the First Presbyterian church last evening, was on the subject of "Cuba," and Mr. Herring discussed his subject in a thorough and intelligent manner. There were many very fine points brought out, and from them a most able discourse was given. In regard to Cuba the speaker said:

"We have been thoroughly stirred as we have read of the woes of suffering Armenia and the merciless Kurds and we have spared no words in our denunciation of the unspeakable Turk. The religion of the Turk has come in for a large share of the blame, but the massacres have ceased for the present not because the Turk has been transformed, but because it has been polite to stop them for the present. We expect a repetition at some future time, when opportunity offers.

"Yet while all this is true, Spain, under a nominally Christian government, has not manifested a much better disposition in her government of Cuba. Her policy has been unjust. We thank God we are not Turks. It would be far better to be in the darkness of that faith than under a Christian name, dishonoring the character of our religion. The subject is very practical. A label has no power.

"A merely nominal Christian is a hypocrite. Men cannot be effective in spreading the light of the world in the land of heathen's darkness, if they are not the reflectors of that light themselves. A business man must not teach charity on the Sabbath and be a tyrant to the man who sweeps his office during the week. Heathen nations watch Christian nations and are very quick to see defects in their actions. Russia spends $40,000,000 in the coronation of her Czar, while the peasant suffers as a result and the coronation is with solemn Christian services. Spain is like the Turk in in her policy of merciless extermination. To the injustice of the past is added the inhumanity of the present. Weyler has been chosen because of his severity as head of the Spanish forces.

"It is fitting that at this time we should pray for the success of Cuban arms. They are at a disadvantage, but God is on the side of the right and we candidly believe the right is with the patriots.

"This is the time when we are honoring the memories of the men who gave up their lives for the unity of our nation. The fight of the Cubans is as much a fight for honor and patriotism and we earnestly hope for their final meeting. In the language of their leader Gomez, 'We will conquer and be free cost what it may or happen what will, though we have to raise a hospital on each corner and a tomb in each home.'

"The succession of war in Cuba has impoverished the people. The 'policy of Spain has been plainly to use Cuba for a pasture land for political favorites,' says Halstead. Seventy-five per cent of the office holders are Spaniards, twenty-five per cent Cubans. The latter being the smaller offices. Her treatment of Cuba has been justly characterized as 'vicious' and therefore Cuba must win in the end."

Seeing the Sights.

Miss Sydenham, of the North Plainfield public school, chaperoned a party of her scholars to New York Saturday and visited the Stock Exchange, World building, Central Park and Trinity church. The following composed the party: Miss Stackhouse, Dora Waring, Adelaide Howard, Mildred Everitt, Julia Williams, Ida Fountain, Lillian Haberle, Bessie Martin, Ada Van Horn, Morgan Townsend and Roland Horne.

A Little Tot's Trip.

A very small boy wandered away from home yesterday afternoon and was found by a company of girls on West Seventh street. The youngster was taken to Mr. Dunham's house on Madison avenue and Roundsman Mattox was summoned to take charge of him, which he did. After some inquiry it was learned that the child belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Cramer, of South Second street, and he was returned to them.

A Little Girl's Fall.

Jennie Lane, the four-year-old neice of James Frisbie, took a tumble yesterday morning from a window in his house on Sycamore street that was miraculous in the fact that she was not seriously injured. The little tot fell fifteen feet and struck on her stomach. Dr. Berg was called and treated her. Beside a bad jar to her system there were no serious injuries.

TWO YEARS OF GROWTH.

CHURCH OF REDEEMER STARTS ON A PROSPEROUS THIRD YEAR.

Special Exercises Held by the Pastor, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, Yesterday Afternoon—Encouraging Words to Congregation.

The growth of the Church of the Redeemer, during the two short years since its organization, has been a very rapid one. And from all appearances, not only in numbers, but in prosperity and well-doing. The second anniversary of the founding of the church was celebrated yesterday. The services were a communion service at 7:30 o'clock in the morning; morning service, special sermon and holy communion at 11:15 o'clock; Sunday-school celebration with address by the pastor, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, D. D., at 3 o'clock; and evening service at 4:30 o'clock.

The special sermon in the morning was specially interesting. Rev. Dr. Johnstone's text was from the seventh and eighth verses of the second chapter of Acts.

He referred to the origin of the doctrine of the Holy Spirit and its intimate connection with the Holy Catholic church. He told of the evolution of the Christian church, of the humility of its origin and its rise from an obscure province and an obscure race to its present place. He spoke of the reasons given by Gibbon, in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" for the rapid growth of Christianity in early times and discussed the first two. The first was the zeal and enthusiasm of the early Christians. No work, said Dr. Johnstone, has ever succeeded without the aid of enthusiasm and earnestness. Everyone's future depends on himself. And young men, if they work with enthusiasm and earnestness, are bound to succeed. The second reason was the belief in the quick return of Christ.

"Today," said Dr. Johnstone, "we enter into the third year of our existence as a church. Peronally, I can express the greatest pleasure in looking back over the last two years." He then heartily thanked those who had assisted during those two years and told something of the growth of the church. They commenced with sixty-seven communicants, which number has been increased by one hundred. We cannot grow much larger, he said, in this place and it is the duty of all to provide us for greater successes. We are representing the broad division of the Protestant Episcopal church. We stand for liberty of conscience and toleration and believe that God loves all men alike. We realize that success will come to our church if we continue in these principles. Although small in numbers our interest is going out and we cannot measure it by mere numbers. His views, he added, were such as would not be received by many of the Episcopal churches, but he believed in the simple truths taught by Jesus Christ, and in liberty of faith and toleration to all. He closed by expressing a hope that the church would continue in the right path and grow spiritually and numerically.

Death of Captain Seth B. Ryder.

Captain Seth B. Ryder, one of Elizabeth's best known citizens, died Saturday morning at his Summer home at Liberty, Sullivan county, N. Y., to which place he had gone but a few days ago. Captain Ryder had been suffering from Bright's disease, but it was hoped that the change would benefit him. He came of Revolutionary stock, and served during the war in the Fifth New York cavalry. The last thirty years of his life were spent in Elizabeth, and in 1872 he was nominated for Sheriff on the Republican ticket, and was honored by the largest majority ever given for that office. In 1882 he was elected Mayor of the city. The funeral will be held in Elizabeth on Tuesday.

Justice Karet's Court.

Justice Karet's court of the borough is now a fact and Saturday the first summons were issued. They were in the cases of Clum against Allen, on contract, and Humble against Bird, on contract, both returnable on May 29th.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

HE PLEAD FOR PEACE

Moderater Withrow's Sermon Caused a Sensation.

NEW ERA IN PRESBYTERIAN QUARREI

Controversies of the Past Five Years Harmful and a Hindrance to the Preaching of the Gospel, He Declared.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 25.—Moderator Withrow's sermon yesterday created a positive sensation among the commissioners. Moderators' sermons in the past years, especially since the Briggs trouble, have been characterized by earnest and eloquent appeals to the commissioners to stand up in defense of the truth of the Scriptures and the standards at any cost. These sermons have come from staunch conservatives. Now it is the liberals who are smiling. Moderator Withrow's sermon was characterized as a veritable plea for peace and work, which, following upon the conciliatory sermon of Moderator Booth, seems to mark a new era in the Presbyterian quarrel. One ministerial commissioner said, in speaking of yesterday's sermon: "Dr. Withrow gave the committees to the conservatives and taffy to the liberals." Another minister said: "Such a presentation of the character and work of Jesus Christ as made by the moderator yesterday is unworthy of a Presbyterian pulpit." Dr. Withrow preached upon the subject of love being stronger than violence in the advancement of Christ's kingdom. He made a strong plea for peace in the church.

Controversies Harmful.

In his introduction he compared the spirit of violence and the spirit of love as exemplified in the ministry of Christ. He said that Christ might, if he chose, have cast Caesar from his capital and have thrown Herod off his throne and have introduced a new regime of righteousness. But he did not. No weakling was ever less disposed to strike a strong man than Jesus was to join a struggle with ruling powers and prevailing wrongs. Only one exhibition of irretistible energy is recalled, as when he used only a little switch of small cords to cleanse the temple, when he might have swept it with a cyclone of indignation which would not have left a single trader alive. He said that the bitter controversies during the first three centuries had done much to hinder the spread of Christianity, and that the controversies of the last five years, during which the church has been striving to defend the word of God from the attacks of the higher critics, had been harmful and had hindered the preaching of the gospel.

Reason for a Big Deficit.

He called to mind the fact that at the time of the reunion of the old school and the new school branches the assembly asked the church to raise a memorial fund of $5,000,000. The church responded by raising nearly $7,000,000. Last year the assembly asked for $1,000,000 to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of this reunion. The subscriptions do not amount to one-half of the sum asked. The preacher said that the reason for this deficit was known to all. He attributed it to the position which the church had taken against those who had attacked its standards. He said that the spirit of the church should not be that of the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," but that of the "Lamb of God." He said that zoologists believed that in 100 years the lion tribe would be extinct. He thought that the world would get along well enough without lions, and that the church would get along without the men who had the lion's spirit. "There may have been some reason for them once, but as Judah's lion was to Calvary's Lamb so is the world in want of those whose loving heart and not their awful head and eye and determination to rule everybody will mostly characterize them, especially in the church of Christ."

Grizzled Old Fighter.

It were not wonderful if a grizzled old fighter, hearing what has been said of love being better for the world than bickering, backbitings and beating one another, should grind his teeth and grumble: "Oh, fudge! That is only dayllabub and calf meat. Give us the strong meat on which our fathers fought and died." But if we must have a diet for making violent men, why not go back to the bestial age in which mothers fed their babes on tigers' milk as a means of making terrible men. The speaker closed by saying: "We cannot shake men out of wrong ways whether they are outside our membership or within both membership and ministry, can we?"

Fitz Again in the Law's Clutches.

New York, May 25.—The Australian fighter, "Bob" Fitzsimmons, who was arrested yesterday for assaulting Samuel Rosenburg, a tailor, who called on him at the Hotel Bartholdi Saturday to collect a bill of $3, will be arraigned in Jefferson Market court to-day. This may interfere with the pugilist's trip to Europe. He had proposed to sail to-morrow.

Annual Meeting Society of Friends.

New York, May 25.—The "public meeting" previous to the annual meeting of the Society of Friends was held in the meeting house on Fifteenth street yesterday. There was a large attendance. The annual meeting will open to-day.

Newark Sunday Paper Suspends.

Newark, N. J., May 25.—Thomas C. Barr's Sunday Standard suspended publication yesterday. The plant will be removed to Trenton, where the paper will be issued.

CZAR'S CORONATION.

Consecration of the Imperial Standard in the Armory in the Kremlin.

Moscow, May 25.—In the armory in the Kremlin at 3:30 yesterday afternoon took place the interesting ceremony of the consecration of the imperial standard. This standard will be a feature of the coronation to-morrow, when the emperor will swear allegiance to the colors in the Cathedral of the Assumption. At one end of the room was a sort of altar, on which was a golden vessel filled with with consecrated water. In the center was a golden cross, at either side of which were lighted candles. The standard, hanging from a staff, was held by a color-bearer, who stood at the left of the altar. The bishops and priests of the Kremlin cathedrals, in gorgeous chasuables of gold cloth, attended by acolytes bearing censers, stood in front of the altar, while at the right was the imperial male choir from St. Petersburg, dressed in black, with crimson cloaks. Behind the priests, at a little distance from them, was the emperor and all the members of the imperial family present in Moscow with their respective suites and ladies of honor. A short religious service was held, composed of prayers and responses and an anthem by the choir. The standard was sprinkled with holy water and formally consecrated by the metropolitan of Moscow.

Kissed the Cross and Priest's Hands.

At the end of the service, during the singing of the choir, all of the members of the imperial family filed before the altar and kissed the cross and the hands of the priest who bore it, after which the standard was taken from this room to another apartment to be safely guarded until the coronation to-morrow. After the service the emperor and empress drove back to the Alexandrina palace, escorted by a squadron of cuirassiers. They received along the entire route the loyal acclamations of the people. A grand review of all the regiments was to take place here at noon yesterday, but, as it was raining heavily, it was decided to abandon it. Later the rain ceased and the sun shone brightly. Large crowds of people continue to arrive daily, adding to the great multitude already here to witness the ceremonies attending the coronation.

Victoria's Birthday Honored.

Services were held in the English church yesterday in honor of the seventy-seventh anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the former who is here as the representative of his mother, the British queen, attended the services, accompanied by their suites. The Bishop of Peterborough, who will attend the coronation as the representative of the Established Church of England, preached the sermon. A prayer was offered for the preservation of the Russian imperial family. When the czar was mentioned a herald uttered his majesty's coronation titles.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Three Largely Attended Baptist Meetings at Asbury Park Yesterday.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 25.—There were three Baptist meetings here yesterday, and each was largely attended. In the morning the Rev. W. H. P. Faunca of New York delivered a sermon before the American Baptist Publication society in the Auditorium. In the afternoon the American Baptist Missionary union met in the Auditorium and were addressed by the Rev. George Bullen, D. D., of Massachusetts. In the evening the American Baptist Home Mission society conducted services in the Ocean Grove Auditorium. The sermon was preached by the E. J. Johnson, D. D., of Pennsylvania.

SOLD UNDER FORECLOSURE.

Erastus Wiman Purchases the Property of the Staten Island Electric Power Co.

New York, May 25.—Erastus Wiman, in the name of his son, Henry Dun Wiman, has purchased at foreclosure sale the property of the Electric Power company of Staten Island for $110,000. The company originally absorbed from Mr. Wiman $400,000, and, according to the report of the receiver, has continuously for the past three years earned full interest on that amount. Against the property there are liabilities of less than $200,000, mostly to Boston banks, who, through their attorney, are co-operating with Mr. Wiman in a reorganization of the company, in the expectation that their claims will be paid in full.

British Behring Sea Naturalists.

New York, May 25.—A special cable dispatch to the Sun from London says: I am enabled to say, despite the strangely persistent efforts of the authorities here to keep the matter secret, that the naturalists appointed to inquire, in behalf of the British foreign office, whether the present restrictions of the Behring seal fishing are sufficient for the protection and well being of seal life, are Prof. Darcy Thompson and Barrett Hamilton. Both sailed on the Lucania Saturday.

Woman's Home Mission Board.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 25.—The woman's executive committee of the home mission board held an interesting meeting yesterday afternoon in the church. Mrs. Darwin R. James presided. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Dickey and several others. A spontaneous collection to relieve the board in the support of certain colored girls' schools about to be abandoned from lack of funds resulted in a liberal addition to the treasury.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

UNITED STATES Civil Service Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has ordered that an examination be held by its local board in this city on Saturday, June 6th, 1896 commencing at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the grade of carrier and clerk in the postal service. Only citizens of the United States can be examined. The age limitations for this examination are as follows: Clerk over 18 years, carriers 21 to 40. No application will be accepted for this examination unless filed with the undersigned, in complete form, on the proper blank, before the hour of closing business on May 18th, 1896 Applications should be filed promptly, therefore, in order that time may remain for correction if necessary. The Commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens of the United States who may desire to enter the service, without regard to race or to their political or religious affiliations. All such citizens are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded, and certified with entire impartiality, and wholly without regard to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination.

For application blanks, full instructions, and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to

WEEK IN CONGRESS

Senate Begins Consideration of the Last Appropriation Bill.

OTHER SUBJECTS ON THE PROGRAMME

Final Adjournment Expected on August 8—The House Begins the Week Without Any Special Arrangement of Work.

Washington, May 25.—The senate committee on appropriations is surprised at the headway it has been able to make in the matter of pushing its bills through the senate. Of the fifteen great annual budgets all have now passed the senate except the general deficiency bill, and Mr. Hale, in charge of that measure, will call it up to-day. It is unusual for this bill to be reported so far in advance of the generally accepted date of adjournment, it being a catch-all for appropriations and deficiencies that cannot be got in until the last mement. Owing to the rapidity with which this bill has been acted upon, it may become necessary before adjournment to pass a small urgent deficiency measure covering items that the treasury may yet call to the attention of congress. It is expected that an agreement will be reached that will result in a vote on the Butler bond bill either to-day or to-morrow. The "filled cheese" bill, which Mr. Sherman is urging, is in a "parlous" shape owing to several proposed amendments. Now that the house has acted on the immigration bills before it, Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts will seek to pass one of the measures through the senate, so that, out of the many conflicting plans, some law may be secured which will remedy what are held to be existing evils in our present immigration statutes.

House of Representatives.

The leaders in the house expect that congress will reach a final adjournment for the session two weeks from to-day, which will be June 8. That was the statment made this morning by Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, a member of the committee on rules. The programme of business in the house in these two weeks will be a matter of arrangement from day to day, and only the most general outline can be given now. The comittee of affairs of the District of Columbia are entitled to the session to-day under the rules. The committee on rules are desirous of clearing up the election cases on the calendar, three of which, especially, will provoke some debate. They are Murray vs. Elliott from the first district of South Carolina, Johnston vs. Stokes from the seventh district of South Carolina, and Mitchell vs. Walsh from the eighth district of New York. In all of these the committee reports recommending that the contestants be seated. In the case of Yost vs. Tucker, of the tenth district of Virginia, the committee recommends that Tucker retains his seat, but Gen. Walker, the single republican from that state, will make a vigorous effort to bring in a political colleague. It is the expectation that these cases will be disposed of this week, should the consideration of conference reports, which is always first, leave time enough.

MRS. HILL'S REMAINS BURIED.

Final Chapter in the Colonnade Hotel Suicide Case Closed at Columbus, Ind.

Columbus, Ind., May 25.—The body of May D. Hill, the Colonnade hotel, New York, suicide, arrived here Saturday and was identified by the father and other relatives. The body was buried in the family lot. The diamonds she was known to possess were not found in her trunk. The family here believe she was murdered and robbed. The husband had requested that her body be cremated, but, standing by the casket, Col. Keith, the dead woman's father, declared: "I'll kill the man who attempts to cremate my daughter's body or disturb it after burial." Judge Hill and wife of Indianapolis, parents of the dead woman's husband, attended the funeral.

Hand Ball at Chicago.

Chicago, May 25.—Casey and Dunne of Brooklyn, N. Y., defeated Carney and Keegan of Chicago in three out of five games of hand ball in this city yesterday. The games were the first of a series of eleven for $1,000 a side and championship of the world. The other six games will be played in New York June 14.

Death of Frank H. Forbes.

Newton, Mass., May 25.—Frank H. Forbes, a well known Boston newspaper writer, died at his home in West Newton yesterday. Death was caused by typhoid pneumonia. He was born at Watertown, Mass., seventy years ago, and was the son of Abner Forbes, a noted prohibitionist.

Italian Troops Leave for Home.

Massowah, May 25.—Thirty-five battalions of infantry, seven battalions of artillery and four companies of cavalry have started on their return to Italy in pursuance of the government plan to abandon the province of Tigre and the campaign against the Abyssinians.

Three Men Drowned.

Philadelphia, May 25.—A row boat containing six men capsized in the Delaware river last evening, and three of the men were drowned. They were John Fox, John Goldman and Theodore Clinkett, day laborers.

NO FORMAL PROTEST MADE TO SPAIN

Only a Note of Inquiry from Washington Received in Madrid—Cruiser Ensenada, with Weyler Aboard, Stranded Near Havana.

Madrid, May 25.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that the cruiser Ensenada, which left Havana Saturday with Capt.-Gen. Weyler and his staff on board, their intention being to make a brief inspection of the troops and defences on the northwest coast, stranded in at Cabanas, a short distance to the westward of Havana. Tugs were sent to her assistance, and Gen. Weyler and his staff were transferred to another vessel. The damage to the cruiser is not serious. Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo has announced that the United States government has not formally protested against the decree of Gen. Weyler forbidding the export of tobacco from Cuba, but had inquired as to Spain's intentions regarding existing contracts. These contracts, the prime minister adds, will be respected.

Weyler Returns to Havana.

Havana, May 25.—Captain-General Weyler, who, with the vice-governor-general, Marquis de Ahumada, and the chief of the general staff, Gen. Ochando, who left here Saturday for Mariel and Bahia Honda, returned last evening on the gunboat Alerte. The cruiser Marquis de Ensenada, on which they sailed from Havana, grounded when attempting to leave the port of Cabanas. Gen. Molina reports an engagement with rebels under Bermudez and other leaders at Guacanar, near Consolacion. The rebels were driven from their positions, leaving twelve dead on the field and carrying other dead with them. The troops lost twelve wounded, including Col. Gelabert, whose wounds are serious.

SEVERED HIS JUGULAR VEIN.

Hot Springs' Mayor Kills the King of the Doctors' Drummers.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 25.—One of most sensational killings that ever occurred in this city took place late Saturday night on Whittington avenue opposite the Catholic church. The principals were W. W. Waters, mayor of Hot Springs, and H. H. Martin, a drummer, employed by doctors. Waters, since taking the office of mayor, has make a bold stand against the disreputable doctor drumming in this city, and has had many of the drummers arrested and heavily fined by the city court. Martin, who was the recognized king of the drummers, was arrested several days for drumming without wearing a badge and heavily fined by the police judge. Meeting Mayor Waters on the street Saturday night Martin stopped him and endeavored to get him to remit the fines. This the mayor positively refused to do and started towards his home. Martin followed and kept abusing him and finally caught him by the shoulder. A scuffle ensued, during which the mayor drew a knife from his pocket and cut Martin in the neck, severing the jugular vein. The latter died in ten minutes. Mayor Waters immediately gave himself up to the officers and is now under arrest.

TO AVOID ARREST.

A Well-To-Do Farmer Burns His Property and Blows Out His Brains.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 25.—Joseph Kohuke, a well-to-do German farmer, living near Triangular lake in Dorrance township, to avoid arrest for threatening his wife, who had left him, Saturday night burned to the ground his comfortable dwelling house and two of his barns, and then, going into one of the latter buildings while it was ablaze, blew out his brains with a shotgun. His body was found in the ruins burned to a crisp. There was no insurance on the property.

Two Men Killed by a Policeman.

Attleboro, Mass., May 25.—Policeman Nerney shot and killed Michael Connors and David Mountain while, as he alleges, they were resisting arrest for violation of the Sunday law at a picnic on Robinson's farm, near the state line. He will be arraigned today on the charge of murder.

Carl Pennington Frost Dead.

New York, May 25.—Carl Pennington Frost, M. D., LL. D., dean of Dartmouth Medical college and professor of the science and practice of medicine, died Saturday night at Hanover, N. H., of heart disease. Dr. Frost leaves a widow and two sons.

In Honor of Queen Victoria's Birthday.

Washington, May 25.—Yesterday in honor of the 77th birthday of Queen Victoria the flag of Great Britain decorated the British embassy, and a stream of callers passed through the gates to leave their cards early and late.

Comanche Floated.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 25.—The Clyde line steamer Comanche, from Jacksonville to New York, which stuck in the mud in the St. Johns river, twelve miles below this city Saturday evening, has been floated.

Miles Ross, for many years the Democratic leader in Middlesex county, announces that he will not take part in politics this fall.

Ex-Judge Thomas F. Noonon, of Bayonne, has his eye on the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Eighth District.

There are rumors that John Y. Foster, for many years secretary of the State Republican Club, will not be re-elected because he worked against the Republican candidate for Mayor of Newark.

Business principles enforced by the Union county Board of Freeholders will have the effect of reducing the annual tax rate. This body can be judged well by such praiseworthy results.—New York Press.

Plainfielders will be interested to hear that Roswell G. Horr, formerly Congressman from Michigan, now a resident of this city, is being urged to take the Republican Congressional nomination in the Eighth District.

The Tobacco Trust, as a way of getting around the Iowa anti-cigarette law, will make a cigarette covered with a light tobacco wrapper instead of paper, which makes it not a cigarette in the meaning of the Iowa statute.

When a woman, a witness in a celebrated will case, was asked to give the date of her birth she said: "I never make a statement under oath on what I know only from hearsay evidence." A slight extension of this theory would leave the individual in doubt as to his or her identity.—Evening Sun.

THE PATRIOTISM OF 1861

A SERMON PREACHED TO THE G. A. R. POSTS LAST NIGHT.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich Draws Inspiring Thoughts From the Civil War—It Means There is Equal Freedom to All Forever.

Members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., and Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, to the number of about one hundred, attended divine service at the Congregational church last evening and listened to a patriotic sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich. The front of the church around the pulpit platform and choir loft was prettily decorated with flags, one of which was a camp flag of the 3d New York Cavalry. The quartette choir, consisting of Miss Meredith, Miss Belluop, Herbert Schutt and J. M. Burnett, rendered several appropriate selections. Mrs. B. T. Barnes was the accompanist. Rev. Mr. Goodrich addressed the audience as follows, taking as his text:

Psalm 60: 5:—"Thou has given a banner to them that fear Thee that it may be displayed because of Thy truth."

"We have brought in the National flag and hung it up here to night. We believe that there are few more appropriate places for it than the church. No organization should teach more earnestly the truths of which it is the symbol than the church. One day in the year this church always devotes to patriotic thought, but with special pleasure we welcome the soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic here. Your presence will serve to arouse in us warmer feelings of patriotism.

"Memorial Day is no longer a day of mourning. It may well be a season for the recalling and teaching those principles for which the patriots died and suffered. The spirit of '61 was the same as the spirit of '76. It is one line, the patriots whose deeds ennoble our past, the line of those in whose heart the love of country burned fiercer than the love of life; who were borne on by a divine afflatus to deeds of heroism and endurance at which men of my generation marvel as they rerd, whose fruits men of every generation will enjoy as long as our flag waves, and whose glory can never die.

"It is well now to recall for what you of the Grand Army fought; and in doing so I shall be stating—in the phrase of the text—what the truth is because of which our banner is to be displayed, what our flag means as it floats among the national ensigns of the world. There were those who were ready to say when the war broke out that it was the inevitable breaking up of an impracticable scheme of government. What the soldiers of the '60's did was not simply to put down a rebellion, it was the vindicating the rightiousness and practibility of the principles in which the Union was founded.

"The principles we do well to repeat often and with much the same devoutness with which we repeat the Creed.

" 'To establish justice,' our national creed goes on, 'to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.' Justice, sang the bugle; Justice, echoed the tramp of gathering armies; Justice smiled on the great man at the head of the nation as he flung the Emancipation Proclamation across the Potomac after Lee's retreating troops; Justice, rang the rifle; Justice, bellowed the cannon; Justice writ across the serried ranks and in the set and awful faces pressing on behind the glittering bayonets in a mighty host that nothing could turn back, till in all the broad land over which the flag again waved unchallenged, there was no man called a slave. And it had been settled with sword and gun and sealed in blood, that caste is not for this new world; that this nation holds a man to be a man whatever his color or his race; that she guarantees him fair play and equal rights before the law, and pledges to him for their security the whole strength of the nation, the last dollar of treasure and the last ounce of blood.

"No wall of masonry surrounds our land; few and simple are the forts along our coast; small is our standing army; but let that flag be flung to the breeze, let a single shot be fired upon it and a living wall of manly breasts will spring to place which no armed foe from without or within has ever yet been able to batter down or pass over. That Concord and Yorktown began to say long ago, and Gettysburg and Appomattox have overwhelmingly proven 'to promote the general welfare' I think of those times. I think how men left their business and their homes, put on the blue, and marched away to the South, great, ever-renewing armies of them, 'to melt away in the awful fires.'

"I think of the wonderous slopes of Fredericksburg, of the blue wall behind the stone at Gettysburg, of the Bloody Angle at Spottsylvania, of the slaughter at Cold Harbor, and I know that these men were not doing and enduring all this for self, but for the country's good, and I am ready to heartily repeat the declaration, 'The one National debt which we can never repay is the debt we owe our soldiers.' "

"Patriotism for us Americans is loyalty to the American principles, those same principle which I have sketched from the preamble as those for which the Grand Army fought. To restall them is to stall our present duty."

It gives in concise but interesting manner the story of this famous battlefield, with five pictures describing the various points of interest. A copy can be had by writing to the company. It is especially interesting to veterans who intend visiting that section this year.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Y.M.C.A. IN RETROSPECT.

EARLY DAYS OF THE ASSOCIATION IN THIS CITY TALKED ABOUT.

Corydon E. Tyler, One of the Association's Oldest Members, Tells of Its Struggle for an Early Existence.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting yesterday was well attended, and was addressed by Corydon E. Tyler, who spoke as follows of the early days of the association:

"First, a word of congratulation to all connected with the Y. M. C. A. on the possession of so fine a building, so admirably adapted to every part of your work. The contrast between this beautiful buildng, this perfect equipment, and the first Y. M. C. A. room in Plainfield that I visited twenty-five or twenty-eight years ago, is as great as you can imagine. There was a little room, it was always kept clean and well lighted, and the Directors used to divide up the evenings among themselves which they used to spend in the room to be sure that no visitors should come and find no one to receive him; and I used to take my turn occasionally.

The visitor in those days always received a very cordial welcome. There was a warm handshaking and a warm greeting for every man that came into the room. But our visitors were not many.

"A great work of the Association then that interested the town most was the lecture course, a series of entertainments that were put before the citizens of Plainfield for the winter and which was the chief source of income of the Association; and it was through that that its power soon came to be felt in the then little town of Plainfield.

"If the results of your work now are in proportion to your modern equipment, you are doing a work that is a blessing to Plainfield beyond the power of language to express.

"There is a Y. M. C. A. work needed in Plainfield greater now than then—and then it was needed.

"There is a part of the work that in some Associations is quite overlooked by many of the members. I mean that of securing of additional membership. There are a good many members of almost every Association who feel kindly disposed toward the Association and who like to be in the Y. M. C. A., but who do not try that kind of mission work. If you have a friend who is not a member you cannot do better work for the Association nor for Plainfield than to bring him here and so interest him."

THEY KEEP COMING

Every day brings something new to this busy store and the little prices we are naming on new, bright goods mean a loss to someone. Not us, but to the manufacturer who must count on another season for his profits. Its why our business grows and the store is making friends

EVERY DAY.

Wash Goods.

From far across the sea, some French, some English, some Scotch, but the best of all are our American beauties, organdies, batiste, dimities, linen lawns, wash silks, in fact a list without limit in dainty dresden effects, fine warp printing, in sprays, vines, buds and blossoms. Its what you will say is the most perfect line of wash fabrics.

Specials.

Fine dress ginghams 5c, yard wide percales 6c, dresden linen effects 10c, jackonets 13c, tulle chatelame rejune dimities 13c, figured grenadine 10c.

PLEASES THE JINGOES

Germany's Policy in South Africa Catches Popular Feeling.

CLOSER TIES WITH THE TRANSVAAL

Big Order from Americans for German Machinery—More Than 200 Visitors from the United States at Budapest.

Berlin, May 25.—The resolution which was passed by the reichstag last Tuesday granting the government a credit of 2,000,000 marks for the purpose of adding 420 men to the military forces in German southwest Africa met with very slight opposition. The action of the house fitted admirably with popular feeling and has delighted the colonial jingoes, who continue diligently to advance their south African boom. The increase authorized by the resolution will give Major Leutwein, the administrator of affairs in German southwest Africa, command of 1,000 effective troops, which are regarded as ample to suppress the rising of the natives in that territory. The origin of the outbreak among the natives has not been officially explained, but the uniform belief of the colonial party that the rising was fomented by British intrigue was given expression during the debate on the credit resolution.

Germany and the Boers.

It is not the prospect of crushing the negroes in southwest Africa, however, that elates the colonial party in Germany. The Neueste Nichrichten, which is the foremost of the colonial organs, makes no concealment of the hopes of the colonials and reveals perhaps more of the aims of the government than is obvious on the surface. The paper, after remarking that there is a community of interest between the Transvaal and German southwest Africa. despite the fact that the two territories are separated by Bechuanaland, adds that by means of the force of 1,000 men which Maj. Leutwein will have at his command Germany will acquire a position in southwest Africa, the influence of which is already felt in Cape Town. The general situation, the Neueste Nachrichten continues, has undergone a change, and the Boers now indirectly receive support, of which time will plainly display the effects.

For an Offensive and Defensive Alliance.

The annual meeting of the German Colonial society will be held here on May 30, when a resolution will be submitted promising the support of the German government in promoting the neutrality of the Boer republic as most essential to the furtherance of German interests. This expression, however, will hardly have the effect of satisfying the more advanced of the colonials, who endorse the demand of the Neueste Nichrichten for the establishment of an offensive and defensive alliance between Germany and the Transvaal. The speech made by Joseph Chamberlain, British secretary of state for the colonies, upon the occasion of the South African annual dinner at the hotel Metropole in London Thursday evening in which he sharply criticised the Transvaal government in their vindictive treatment of the Johannesburg reform committee prisoners, is vehemently denounced by the entire German press.

Big American Order for Machinery.

American purchasers of German manufactures are devoting a great deal of attention to the Industrial exhibition, which is now running smoothly. Several orders have been lodged by Americans with one of the largest German firms engaged in the manufacture of machinery, aggregating 100,000 marks. Exhibitors of dry goods, however, complain of an utter lack of American orders. A great deal of interest is being taken in the Hungarian millennial celebration at Budapest, to which place it is expected that a large number of people will go from Germany during the summer. Reports received here say that there were more than 200 Americans in Budapest last week, the majority of whom went from there to Moscow to witness the coronation ceremonies. Before going, however, they ordered rooms reserved for them pending their return.

Wanamaker Negotiates for a Painting.

Hon. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia, formerly postmaster-general of the United States, during his recent visit here entered into negotiations for the purchase of Munkacsy's latest painting, "Ecce Homo," but with what result is not known. The Khone, trotting horse owners of Hamburg, have purchased the American trotters Bullet and Glorin and the Beerman brothers of Chorlottenburg have bought Doctor Austin and Lucy W. The horses will go into the possession of their new owners after the close of the West End races, in which they are entered.

Defends the American Missionaries.

Dr. Irmer, governor of the Marshall islands, in the Pacific ocean, makes occasion, in a report recently received from him by the colonial department of the foreign office, to deny the truth of the attacks recently made upon the American missionaries stationed upon those islands. Dr. Irmer pays high tribute to the maligned missionaries, who, he says, are peaceful and quietly devoting themselves to Christain work, holding themselves aloof from all agitation.

Winner of the Prix de Diane Race.

Paris, May 25.—The race for the Prix de Diane was run at Chantilly yesterday and was won by Maurice de Gheest's bay filly Liane. Achille Foud's Riposte was second and N. H. Say's Aunt Minie third. Fourteen horses ran.

PROFIT AND LOSS.

It Is Not Enough to Merely Hold Your Own.

Hard Times in Health as Well as Business. How to Attain Physical Prosperity.

Every successful merchant keeps two columns, one for "Profit" and another for "Loss." At the close of each year a balance is taken and the true condition of things revealed.

Unwise purchases or too many charges on the books may easily make the balance show on the wrong side. In dull and hard times the merchant often thinks he is fortunate if the books do not show a loss, even if there is no gain. He is almost satisfied if he "holds his own."

A great many young people, especially school girls, seem to be living in "dull and hard times," for they do not improve and develop as they should. They just hold their own, and that is all. They should be growing and making advances all along the line. Every day should show a balance on the Profit side of the health column. They should gain in weight, increase in height, and steadily develop in muscular and mental strength.

If there is a stand-still, just holding your own, then an effort should be made to aid nature. You only have to give her a little start in the right direction. Some good reinforcements will easily help her over the hill, then everything will prosper again. Give her power and vigor by supplying her with a nourishing food, a reconstructive, and strong nerve tonics.

All three of these are found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites.

The trouble with a great many is that they think one preparation of cod-liver oil is as good as another. Hence, if they try some clear oil and receive no benefit, then they are discouraged and give up in despair. When the body is weak and you wish to give it strength, what wisdom is there in making it do an extra amount of work? When you take raw cod-liver oil, this is what you do. The body has to digest the oil, and this work of digestion takes vital energy. Why not digest the oil before taking it, and thus save the body all this expenditure of force?

Physiology teaches that an oil is digested when it is emulsified, or broken up into most minute globules. An "emulsion" is a preparation of a digested oil. Therefore, in Scott's Emulsion the oil is digested. There is no loss of force in preparing it for absorption. Everything is on the Profit side. The body has the full benefit of the whole dose. The hypophosphites makes you hungry, and they give tone and stability to the nerves and brain.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Compan

Among the most delicate tasks falling to my lot was the securing of a servant for the invalid, but, here again, fortune being kind, an old negress was installed as nominal nurse and actual housekeeper. She had been born a slave, according to village talk, but had secured her freedom and migrated north. She was an excellent cook, but so surly and crabbed was her disposition—moreover, she was very deaf—that at last nobody would employ her. A recital of her disabilities sent me post-haste after her; for, if she was as unsociable as she was represented to be, she was the woman in a thousand for us. When she took charge of the kitchen we were relieved of one point at least; there would be no gossiping at that end of the house.

Meanwhile, I had contracted for food and lodging at one of the farmhouses, and had put out my shingle in due form—much to the satisfaction of my hostess, who confessed that it pleased her to have evidences given that there was "a grown man 'bout the place." She was Mrs. Elvira Weston, a widow, and the mother of two boys, neither of whom was yet old enough to relieve her of the cares of the farm. She was a cheery soul, who had endured many misfortunes without losing courage, and I was glad to secure quarters under her roof. She allotted to me a wing of the house, which, having an entrance of its own, would serve admirably as an office. I soon had my den fitted up in a way to excite considerable local admiration. A few books, a couple of antomical charts and some vials of drugs were disposed to the best advantage to impress patients with the mysteries of the healing art.

In its beginning my practice in Rodneytown was much like an early spring in New England—more promise than realization. A daily visit to Lamar was the basing-point of my routine. As a rule, it was very brief, though occasionally he let me understand that my post was no sinecure. Now and then he sent me on trips to Trent, a thriving hive of manufactories about 30 miles from the village. On the first of these journeys one of my duties was to mail a letter to a New York banking house; on the next I was informed that a large sum was on deposit to my credit with the principal bank of the place. Thus, while my patron kept some control over the purse-strings, I was the acting paymaster. From first to last there could be no charge of niggardliness made against him; he looked over my accounts now and then, but never questioned their accuracy.

As he finished his superficial auditing on one of these occasions, he looked up and asked, rather abruptly:

"The old fisherman who lives yonder—what do you know of him?"

"Not much," said I, "except that his name is Johnson, that he has been in the navy, and that he has the best of reputations for honesty."

"No more?"

"Well, he and his two brothers who live with him are an unsociable lot, who keep much to themselves. There's no woman with them; they're their own housekeepers."

"I may buy of their fish. Bid the eldest to come here to-night. You need not be present," said he. With his usual ceremonious bow at parting, he turned on his heel and stalked upstairs to his sanctum.

The order was surprising, in view of his desire to avoid his neighbors; but, though it puzzled me, I sought out Johnson and delivered the message. That night in my cozy office I tried in vain to discover a reason for the interview then going on in the house on the knoll. The old fish explanation was fishy indeed, old Martha, the cook, being quite able, in spite of her deafness, to bargain for any supplies for her department. It was improbable that Lamar had any notion of setting Johnson to spy upon my doings, for he had used me as a means of communicating with the man, a course he would not have adopted had he entertained any suspicions of my faithfulness. It might be that he desired to arrange for the use of a sloop owned by the brothers, with an eye to the possibility of opening a way of retreat by sea in case his present stronghold became untenable. Yes, that seemed to be the most reasonable explanation, although, so far as I knew, Lamar was not in the slightest danger of discovery by his enemies. Such a precaution at that time appeared to be about as necessary as a shipment of antidotes for frost-bite to the Hottentots.

Sleeping over the matter gave me no fresh light upon it, nor was I the wiser for my pains for many a day thereafter; but at last chance, the much-explaining, furnished the clew.

I had tarried at the house on the knoll unusually late that afternoon, and the sun was setting as I began my walk homeward. It had been a clear, pleasant day, with a good deal of warmth in the sunshine, although autumn was now far advanced; but as the evening came on the air grew chilly and the brisk off-shore breeze took on a touch of the approaching winter. With turned-up coat-collar and hands buried in my pockets, I stepped out briskly on the tramp homeward, rather reconciled at the moment to the slenderness of a practice which guaranteed me an undisturbed evening. With book and pipe and an easy-chair, and a bright fire, several hours could be passed very delightfully, with the stiff breeze whistling through the tree-tops and signaling warnings to good folk within doors to keep snugly under cover. Just at this point in my reflections there came a fierce gust which almost sent me staggering back. My hat, torn from my head, went seaward, spinning like a top in what might have been a baby whirlwind. I ran after it at my best gait, sometimes losing ground and sometimes gaining, only to see the gust with impish perversity sweep it from my very grasp. Then my toe caught in something, and down I went in a heap. As I regained my feet the hat, with a flight as clumsy as that of a hen clearing a barn-yard fence, flopped across a salt-water creek and dropped upon the opposite bank. The tide was at the ebb, and the stream was neither broad nor deep. Gathering such momentum as I could, I ran to the edge and gave a vigorous leap. My feet struck the farther bank, but slipped in the soft mud, and once more I measured my length, sprawling this time, however, half in the water and half on shore. In the worst of tempers I scrambled out of the slime, picked up the runaway hat, and then almost dropped it again in surprise; for right before me was a wire, strung as neatly as any telegraph line, and supported by posts about a foot in height. The chase had carried me into the Right before me was a wire.

marsh to the south of Lamar's house, toward which the wire extended in one direction. Where was the other end of it? That query could have but one answer — Johnson's cottage, the only habitation in that quarter.

In the course of the next day's visit to Lamar I told him of my accidental discovery.

"It is a trifle, a small contrivance to summon Johnson," said he, quietly. "He is useful in many ways; he may be more useful still in others. He is a stout fellow and a brave."

"Then you fear—?"

"You have the saying," he answered, with a shrug of his shoulders: "'In time of peace prepare for war.'"

VII.

Had the master of the house on the knoll been other than he was, this latest precaution might have served to excite a suspicion that his mind was beginning to give way under the depressing influences of his manner of existence. Afterward, it is true, suspicions of the sort came to me, though they were never long-lived, but at that time, while wonder was aroused, the feeling carried with it no suggestion that he was not actuated by some sufficient reason for the step he had taken. So far as I knew, his safety was not threatened; but I had to confess myself in ignorance of the character of the peril he dreaded, and to note his arrangements, without appreciating the need of them, much as a raw recruit might watch the many and seemingly excessive precautions of a veteran in charge of a magazine.

About a fortnight after the adventure in the marsh Lamar surprised me with an invitation to dine. He said very little while the meal was in progress, but when Martha had cleared up the table and shuffled off to her own domain he began to talk with unwonted freedom. He asked questions about the village, concerning which his curiosity was certainly new-born, and then about the progress I had made in building up a practice.

"Well," said I, rather sheepishly, "it's slow work. People hereabouts are conservative. Most of them have survived old Dr. Banks' attentions for a good many years and they are cautious about changing. Besides, most of them knew me as a youngster, and it takes time to live down the fact that I was a boy."

"You maintain the professional air?" said he, inquiringly.

"Yes, though they give me little cause to smell of drugs. Strange and powerful odors would impress them, I suspect; at least some of the older brethren seem to find such an aroma worth carrying about with them."

"You should possess a conveyance of your own."

"So far one has been unnecessary. In case of need, Mrs. Weston lends me a horse and buggy."

"That will not suffice. Procure a suitable vehicle and a horse—one of speed. The cost shall be mine."

"Very well," I answered.

He rose and bowed in the fashion in which he terminated an interview, adding, however, before he left the room: "Procure them at once."

I understood that in this order he had an eye as much to his own benefit as to mine, but it pleased me nevertheless. There was nothing in the way of horseflesh in the neighborhood which would meet the requirement of great speed, and I resolved to drive to Bassettville the next day to seek Sam Carpenter's assistance, his knowledge of the trotting stock of the region being encyclopaedic in its scope. To the shrewdness of a horse trader born and bred he joined a reasonable amount of honesty, and, as there could be no haggling over his commission, he could be relied on as a trustworthy adviser. When I drew rein the following morning before his stable he came out to meet me, with a twinkle of professional amusement in his eye as he glanced at Mrs. Weston's steady old mare and ramshackle buckboard.

"Sam," said I, getting down to business at once, "I want to buy a good horse."

"Like enough ye dew," he answered, dryly. "Many dews; some gits 'em."

"I want your help. What's more, I'll pay for it."

"Now yer talkin' sense," said he, warming up a little. "Buyin' a hoss 's like gittin' a wife; if yer don't know yer bizness, good looks 'll fool ye, nine times out o' ten. But what's yer pick, go or show?"

"Go," said I. "A horse that will stand without tying, that's easy to drive, that has no bad tricks, that will jog along till he's called upon, and then will give anything in the country his dust—that's the horse I'm after."

"D'jer ever try to name a baby so's to suit seven maiden aunts?" he queried, with what seemed to be unnecessary irrelevance.

"No."

"Wall, I reckon ye've got the same kind of a job on hand."

"Oh, come," said I, "you're my reliance in this. Scratch your head, and dig out what I'm after. It will be worth your while."

He reflected for a moment.

"Wall," said he, "there's nothin' to suit ye round here; but if ye'll come along to Trent, I'll show ye just the article yer after."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

So many accidents have happened lately that the following advice could not receive too much publicity:—In trying to pass a vehicle or another wheelman, every rider should pass on the left side instead of the right. It is almost an infallible rule for any rider or driver to unconsciously pull to the right when signalled to look out for some one back of him. In passing, after giving some warning, enough room should be given to prevent either the horse starting or some slight obstruction making the wheel unmanageable.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mrs. Frank Jones, of Somerserset street, has secured a new Union.

Daniel Teller, of the borough, enjoyed a cycle trip to Eagle Rock, yesterday.

James Ingram, of Newark, rode his wheel to this city yesterday and called on friends.

Charles Murphy, of Trenton, rode his wheel to Plainfield Saturday morning and was the guest of relatives.

A. H. Barnett, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, spent Saturday afternoon at his home in Cranford.

Charles A. Appley and Clarence Bird, of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, visited the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon on their tandem and did a little pacing.

Among the latest purchasers of Crescents from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are Miss M. C. Spear, T. E. Morgan, Paul Friedland, C. P. Cyphers, of Dunellen, and H. E. Lavell.

Reserved seats for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet will be placed on sale tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock at A. D. Mallinson's drug store on North avenue, opposite the station. The reserved seats are 75 cents.

Percy Sandford and Fred Sandford, of Washington avenue, returned Saturday from a week's fishing trip at Creskill. The water in the brooks was too low and clear for big catches but they managed to capture nearly 100 trout.

Don't ride without a light one hour after sunset, or without a bell at any time, for the new city bicycle ordinance is in effect today, and if you violate these two essential features you are quite liable to pay a fine of $5. Chief Grant gives proper warning in another column of The Press.

John H. Lake, of Port Richmond, S. I., arrived in Plainfield last week and is now training at the Crescent Oval for the big Decoration Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen. He will ride under the colors of the Harlem Wheelmen. Lake is a great friend of Ray McDonald, the famous professional now in Europe.

The Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day meet will be a big one. Up to this morning 108 entries were received.

J. W. VanSickle, the North avenue butcher, rode his wheel to Milburn yesterday and after leaving Springfield on the return home his front wheel collapsed completely, starting with the rim. Mr. VanSickle was thrown about eight feet and received several scratches and bruises. A man with a horse and wagon happened along and both rider and wheel were assisted to Fanwood where a train was taken for home.

A Daily Press representative in conversation with F. L. C. Martin, the President of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., learned a few facts of interest to wheelmen. The advance in bicycle construction during the past few years has been so rapid that some of the old manufacturers have hardly realized it, while the Western wheel works have stolen a march on the competitors by making a high grade wheel at $75 and a $50 wheel which is equal to any $75 wheel on the market. They are far behind in their orders though they are turning out 500 wheels aday. As a result of the above some of the high grade makers have been obliged to cut prices to keep up competition. There is no doubt but that the Crescent wheel is one of the best and more than the equal of some of the higher priced wheels.

The Y. M. C. A. cyclers have promised to be an important division this year, and from present prospects it looks as if they would keep their promise. The success of the two runs already taken has been very satisfactory to the officers, and the planning at least one run each week seems to work excellently. The next run will be held this evening, the destination being Somerville. The start will be made from the Y. M. C. A building at 7:30 o'clock, and the moon nearly at full, will make the run a delightful one. The side path between Dunellen and Bound Brook is a famous one. It will be easy to ride, however, as the moonlight will make it as light as day and the road officers of the club will look carefully after the safety and comfort of the riders. An experienced pacemaker, thoroughly acquainted with the road, will lead the procession. There will be no scorching.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The executive committee of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association held a meeting at Pingry's School, Elizabeth, on Saturday and made final arrangements for the athletic games at Bergen Point on June 6th. President George P. Smith was present from the Plainfield High School.

Yesterday's New York Journal devoted nearly half a page to a description and a series of pictures showing the manner in which Jesse L. Hurlbut, Jr., of Berkley School, formerly of this city, vaulted at the time when he made the interscholastic record for the pole vault of 10 feet, 7¾ inches.

AT THE TRAPS.

The Independent Gun Club will hold a shoot in Hyde's woods Decoration Day.

AROUND THE BASES.

The crowd of baseball enthusiasts that gathered Saturday afternoon to witness the game between the Plainfield and Westfield Y. M. C. A. teams in this city was much larger than on the Saturday previous, which fact proves that the interest is growing. The afternoon was perfect for the game. Those who like a good fielding game were not disappointed, for the battle was not confined to the pitchers. The crowd had expected that Johnson, of Scotch Plains, would pitch, but he did not show up. It was said that he played at Bayonne, having received more money. Manager McLaughlin was called away on account of the death of a relative. In consequence Cory was placed in the box, Townley on third base and Pierson in right field. The team played a good game and gave futher evidence of their improvement. Pierson is not a new man, having played before. He put up a good article of ball. Major distinguished himself at short stop, and his quick brilliant plays were the admiration of the crowd, as was also the playing of Townley. Dennis, the catcher, showed a marked improvement and he hit the leather sphere with a vengeance. Samson, as usual, played a good game. Eriksen, a new man, played centre field, and he missed no chances. The contest throughout was a lively one. There was lots of batting and good fielding, with a number of errors, made chiefly by the visitors. At one time two balls was knocked out of sight in some trees and considerable time was lost in searching for them. Finally another ball was secured and the game proceeded. A Simile.

Tom—That new office boy is like natural gas.

Jack—I don't see the similarity.

Tom—Well, he generally goes out when he is most wanted.—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

The Height of Optimism.

"How bright and cheerful Miss S. always is. She always makes the best of everything."

"Yes; she even pretends to believe that a single life is far preferable to a married one."—Brooklyn Life.

One Way.

Would you keep a woman's love
When you earn it,
Here's a way I'll tell you of—
Don't return it!

There Are Some of This Kind.

Estimable Citizen (in his after-dinner speech)—Every citizen must do his duty at the polls, no matter what the cost!

The Same Citizen (on election day)—No, Jacobs, I'm not going to vote. You see, I'm extremely busy—and—well—the fact is—I—I—neglected to register.—Chicago Record.

What Prevented Him.

"I can tell you, baron, that when my offer of marriage was rejected by the prima donna I was so miserable that I was on the point of throwing myself out of the window."

"What prevented you?"

"The height."—Karlsbader Wochenblatt.

His Verdict.

The Bachelor—Of course, I congratulate you. But, after all, isn't a baby a good deal of a nuisance?

The Young Father (dubiously)—Hardly that, you know. But there are times when it is a crying evil.—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

Adele Fairfax—Why, I thought everybody did sometimes.

Bob Harcourt—Well, Sage won't. He's afraid it will cost him something.—Truth.

The Why and Wherefore.

He knew that she owned a couple of farms.
And he said, as he fol'ed her tight in his arms:
"This treasure I'll take."
The smart servant maid, as she saw the embrace,
Remarked, as she threw her hands to her face:
"For the land's sake."

ENTRIES FOR THE RACES.

THOSE WHO WILL COMPETE FOR PRIZES ON THE OVAL SATURDAY.

Best Riders of the Country Will Pedal Around the Track—The First Big Meet in the Metropolitan District.

Decoration Day might be called the formal opening day of the bicycle racing season in this part of the country. Although races are always held before that date, yet it is looked upon as the real beginning of the season. On that day, the famous Irvington-Milburn road race is always held while last year the National circuit opened in this city the same day. This year the National circuit begins in the west, and comes eastward to reach Plainfield, September 26th.

The Crescent Wheelmen will hold a race meet on Decoration Day, however, and, as it is the first large open meet in the Metropolitan district, it promises to be a large one. The entry list, which closed last Saturday evening, is an unusually large one and includes most of the fast amateurs in this district. The professional class is also well represented by a number of the crack-a-jacks, including our own Jersey team. The number of entries in the one mile handicap is something extraordinary and it promises lots of excitement.

The entries for the different events are as follows:

ASSETS AND LIABILITIES.

Judge Coddington, Assignee for J. P. Laire, Determines the Amount.

Late yesterday afternoon W. A. Coddington, assignee for J. P. Laire, finished the work of determining the assets and liabilities of Mr. Laire's business. The assets are $12,561.10 and the liabilities $19,338.99. The assets consist chiefly of the stock in the store. There are but few Plainfielders who owe him, and Mr. Laire has no home debts himself. Outside of the debt to his brother he would have been able to have carried on the business. The hard times and the legal complications in which he became involved with his brother brought about the assignment. It is probable that as soon as the affair can be settled, Mr. Laire will resume business.

INCREASED ATTENDANCE.

Work of the Primary Union Attracting Many Sunday-School Teachers.

There was by far the largest attendance yet at the meeting of the Primary Teachers Union held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. The subject was "Destruction of Jerusalem Foretold," the lesson being taught by Mrs. Skillman, of New Brunswick.

Mrs. Skillman has had many years of experience in primary work and in consequence is particularly fitted to give to others many helpful ideas and suggestions. Her talk yesterday was interesting and inspiring to all, and the teachers gained a number of good suggestions which will help them in teaching the lesson.

Next week Miss Wangner, of Newark, will teach the lesson. A business meeting will follow.

—One of the new street railway cars is expected tomorrow, and will probably be placed on the Netherwood line.

Miss Biglow, a teacher in the North Plainfield public school, is detained at home by illness.

Malcolm Barnes, of Norwood avenue, is confined to the house with appendicitis. Dr. Davis is in attendance.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. TRIED TO TAKE HIS LIFE.

PAUL REUSCH, A DUNELLEN BAKER, ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

Put the Muzzle of a Shot Gun to His Mouth, Pulled the Trigger, and the Charge Tore Nose, Cheek and Eye Away.

The quiet borough of Dunellen, from one end to the other, was shocked last evening about 8 o'clock when the news of the attempted suicide of Paul Reusch, the baker, spread rapidly. Mr. Reusch had been to Elizabeth in the afternoon to see his brother on business and on returning home about 8 o'clock, it was noticed that he was rather despondent. He entered his store, picked up a shot gun, and remarked to his wife that he was going to end his life. He then went to his room, and after undressing himself, placed the muzzle of the gun near his mouth and pulled the trigger with his foot. The charge entered the upper lip and nose and completely gouged out his right eye.

His wife heard the report of the gun and rushing to his room found her husband lying prostrate and bleeding on the floor, with the gun near by. Mrs. Reusch was frantic. From the ghastly wounds blood was flowing profusely and the man was in a comatose condition. Dr. Brakeley was sent for immediately and gave the best treatment possible.

The flow of blood was partially stopped and Reusch was left as comfortable as possible. At 2 o'clock this morning he became worse and Dr. Long, of this city, was called. He found that the wounds were bleeding considerable and in a short time he again became quiet. The rest of the night was uneventful.

In looking back many reasons are given for the terrible act. Mr. Reusch has lost several horses lately, he has been unfortunate in building and only a short time ago he had a horse run away and completely wreck his bakery wagon. These things, together with hard times, has depressed him very much and his visit to Elizabeth was to see if he could not get help from his brother. Mr. Reusch has for a long time conducted a first class bakery and everyone supposed he was doing a good business. He is well-known and universally liked by his fellow-townsmen and everyone was completely surprised to to learn of this terrible deed. He has a wife and children who are prostrated with grief over the affair.

SURPRISED BY PYTHIAN BROTHERS.

Crescent Division Pay an Unexpected Visit to J. S. Higham.

The members of Crescent Division, No. 13, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, gave a surprise to one of their number, J. Stephens Higham, of Lafayette place, in honor of his entrance into matrimonial life. The evening passed very pleasantly with vocal and instrumental music. The host recovered from his surprise towards the last and served his guests with a bountiful collation. During the evening they presented him with a handsome umbrella stand.

The Late Captain Benedict.

Concerning the death of Capt. Geo. Benedict, the Marietta, Ohio, Register says: Captain Benedict was in his 82d year, therefore his passing would not be surprising and more especially since he had been in feeble strength. His visit to his old home and Marietta friends last fall, he considered as probably his last, which it has proved to be. Capt. Benedict was born at Belpre, this county, and resided here seventy years, always a respected citizen. In 1865 he was elected to the board of the County Commissioners, and at various times held responsible positions. He was a merchant for many years, retiring soon after 1879, when he disposed of his Front street property to the proprietors of the Register, on which site the business is still conducted. He was a kindly man, socially, greatly attached to his friends, and had the finest sense of business honor. His family are all at Plainfield and New York.

Hospital Statistics.

Dr. Boone, medical director for the hospital for this month, presents the following report today: Patients admitted, 23; discharged, cured, 14; discharged, improved, 4; discharged, not improved, 1; died, 2; total, 35; remaining, 14. The dispensary patients number 30. Eighty-one visits have been made to the hospital.

Private Inspection of the Police.

There will be a private inspection of the police force at the Jersey Wheel Academy this evening by the Police Board.

—Miss Kenyon has sent invitations for a rose tea to be given at the Seminary Saturday, May 30th, from 4 to 8 o'clock. This entertainment is for the benefit of the new home of the Plainfield Relief Association.

MANY BELLS AND LAMPS.

YOUNG BICYCLE RIDERS BURLESQUE THE NEW ORDINANCE.

Rode About Town With Bells and Lights of Every Size and Description to Make Fun for Themselves and Pedestrians.

Woe to the rider that now ventures out without a bell fastened to his wheel or "scorches" at night without a light. They have been warned and now the blue-coated officers of the law are on the watch for any unwary victim who may fall into their clutches.

The ordinance that orders the wheelmen to carry bells at all times, and lanterns between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise took effect last Friday, but not until last night was it strictly enforced.

Of course there were some, especially among the younger element, that decided to have some fun out of the new ordinance. Some fastened a little tin bell, of the kind used as ornaments, on the handle-bars by a thread. One facetious lad of the Third ward procured a large dinner bell which he rang with considerable force at every corner, frightening pedestrians half out of their wits.

But the event of the evening was the run of the Independent Yacht Club, an organization formed by some of the lads of the Second and Third wards. Shortly before 9 o'clock a terrible noise was heard on Park avenue. It sounded as if all the bells in town had gone on a drunk and then, to one looking up that thoroughfare, there appeared a perfect wilderness of lights, big and little. As the procession approached, the cause of the noise and light was explained.

"Ned" Waring led the procession with an immense barn lantern hanging at his handle-bars. He also carried six cow bells and a string of sleigh bells which made delightful music as they passed. Donald Stewart discoursed sweet music on a cow bell, while Roy Radford had two. "Manager" William Sweeney was on hand with a mighty dinner bell and bull's eye lantern. Roland Rockfellow had a doll's piano and a night lamp on his handle-bars, while David Demarest, Herbert Rockfellow, Frank Reinhart, Linden Stewart and Owen Fleming assisted with a varied assortment of cow bells, sleigh bells and an electric bell. All the riders had their regular bicycle bells and lanterns in addition to the extras, which assisted considerably to the fun. The party rode from Ninth street and Park avenue to Randolph's pharmacy and return, while the police on duty threatened to arrest them for disturbing the peace.

A Quiet Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Augusta Newman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Newman, of 219 Richmond street, and James Henry Adams, of East Third street, was celebrated last evening in a very quiet manner at the home of Rev. J. W. Richardson, who performed the ceremony. The affair was kept exceedingly quiet, so much so that Mr. Adams' room-mate did not know of it. A few intimate friends were on the lookout during the evening, but could find no trace of the happy couple, who had so completely evaded them. Mr. and Mrs. Adams will reside in this city. Mr. Adams is employed at French's carriage factory on Somerset street.

Contest Over a Line Fence.

The case of J. P. Wolf against Frank Stiles, both of Warren Township, was tried before Justice Wood, at the hotel in Mt. Bethel, yesterday afternoon. The case was the settlement of a division line fence between adjoining farms, and was for the amount of $100. W. A. Coddington, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, of this city, apperred for the defendant, and was successful in securing a non-suit, thereby winning the case for his client.

Must Pay the Loan.

The case of George W. Bird, assignee, against the estate of Charles E. Catlin, to recover $3,682.50, money loaned, was tried before Judge VanSyckle yesterday. Judgment was given the plaintiff for the full amount. W. A. Coddington, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, represented Mr. Bird. No new points of law were raised, but judgment was obtained on the merits of the claim.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

SWEETLY RENDERED MUSIC.

Choice Programme Given at the Recital Arranged by Prof. McClymont.

The vocal and instrumental recital given by W. E. MacClymont at the Y. M. C. A. building last night was largely attended and eminently successful. The Lotus Glee Club was assisted by Miss Lillian Nicholl, pianist; R. W. Smith, tenor; Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins, banjoists; Mrs. B. T. Barnes and Frank Adair, accompanists, and Howard M. Case, organist. The programme was finely selected and rendered, each number being heartily encored. The work of the glee club was especially good, while the playing of Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Miss Nicholl, W. E. MacClymont, and the singing of Mr. Smith was thoroughly appreciated. The programme follows:

CLUB WOMEN OFF TO LOUISVILLE.

New Jersey Members of the Federation Leave in a Special Car.

In a special car attached to the train that left the Pennsylvania railroad station in Newark at 2:26 o'clock yesterday afternoon was the New Jersey contingent of women bound for the convention of the general Federation of Woman's Clubs of America, to be held at Louisville Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The women represent different federated New Jersey clubs, and they took with them reports and papers to be read at the convention.

The part in the convention that has been assigned to women of this State includes a paper by Mrs. Yardley on the "Principle and Plans of Working Girls' Clubs," department social economies; paper by Mrs. Frank Hall on the "Montclair Woman's Town Improvement Society," same department; paper by Miss Marion Courtney Smith, of Orange, on "The Drama and Historical Novel as Interpreted of History," department of literature. Mrs. Edith McCarthy will advance the cause of Forestry, and Mrs. Frank R Smith will give the reports of New Jersey club work, while Mrs. Florence Howe Hall has obtained for the State the honor of the chairmanship of the department of literature. Mrs. Yardley has been chosen to act upon the reception committee at Louisville.

TOO LAZY TO WORK.

Two Brawny Polish Beggars Sent to the County Jail.

Two Poles, not the kind that Levi Bird cuts and trims, but from the land across several seas, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning. These natives of Poland, two big brawny fellows, too, were unable to work and had tried their hand at begging and from all appearances they were not new at the art for they knew all the tricks. They had a very pleasing way, pleasing to them, that is, of calling names when their requests for food and drink were not granted.

They were very meek, however, when the representatives of the law appeared and trotted along placidly to jail. Cash payments are necessary in the city court and, as City Judge DeMeza would not accept their note of $10 for thirty days, they took the thirty days in jail instead.

Put Under Bonds to Keep the Peace.

Lucy A. Willis, of Central avenue, and Albert Champion, of Madison avenue, both colored, appeared before Justice Newcorn last evening, when the former made a complaint against Champion for using threatening language last Friday. She said that she considered her life in danger and desired to have Champion put under bonds to keep the peace. The Justice placed the defendant under $100 bonds for that purpose.

—The Board of Health will meet tonight.

—The last meeting of the season of the Thursday Night Musical Club will be held at the residence of Miss Julia Ketcham next Thursday night.

TO ADDRESS GRADUATES.

REV. JOCELYN JOHNSON WILL GIVE THE COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS.

The Board of Education Finishing Up the Business of the School Year—Report on the Good Condition of the School.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education of North Plainfield was held at the school house last evening. The members present were Messrs. Honeyman, Overton, Brown, Loomis, VanWinkle, Fountain, Waring and McCutchen.

The president reported that Rev. Jocelyn Johnson, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, had consented to deliver the address at the commencement exercises.

The committee appointed to inquire into the condition of the school, as to its efficiency; the competency of the teachers, and the merit or demerit of the course, reported at length. The report gave a generally favorable report of the state of the school, but recommended certain changes in the course of study and the conduct of the school. On motion, the report was received and laid on the table for future consideration and action, and copies of the same were ordered to be prepared for the several members of the Board.

On motion, duly seconded, the compensation of the District Clerk was fixed at $150 for the year. The monthly salary list of current bills, amounting to $1,994.18, were approved and ordered paid.

The District Clerk reported a balance in the hands of the collector of $4,063.36. The Board then took necessary action for the engagement of teachers and principal for the coming school year and adjourned. Commencement exercises will occur on the evening of June 25th.

GONE FOR SIX WEEKS.

Michael Pickott Leaves His Young Child to the Care of Others.

Six weeks ago yesterday Michael Pickott left the house of John Barry, 41 Chatham street, where he had been boarding, to go to his work, as usual, and was never seen around again until this noon when he appeared at the back door of his former boading place. In response to the inquiries as to where he had been he promised to explain everything this evening.

Pickott had been employed by the street railway contractors up to the time of his sudden disappearance. Previous to that he worked on sewers. Last summer his wife eloped with one of the foremen on the sewer excavations, and Pickott was very much affected by the shock. Through the assistance of Father Smyth his little son was placed in a home at Newark. Pickott's little girl lived with him. Last March he took a room in Barry's house.

When he left six weeks ago, he left his small daughter behind. Mrs. Barry took care of her for three weeks, and then, as the child was sadly in need of clothes, she was turned over to the care of Overseer of the Poor Marx, who has placed her out at board and where she is now.

Last Meeting Till Next Fall

The Rasores Club held their last meeting for the season this morning at the home of Mrs. I. C. Pierson on Watchung avenue. Arrangements were made to accept the annual invitation from the Quiet Hour Club, of Metuchen, through Mrs. Wood, a former member of the Rasores. Each year the Rasores Club is the guest of the Quiet Hour Club. This year June 10th is the day fixed for the event. The club will not meet again until October.

Narrowing the Guage.

While the work of narrowing the street railway guage on West Front street is going on, the cars are only using one track. A transfer is made just below Giraud avenue. Superintendent of construction, Harry Yarnell, estimates it will require three weeks to complete the work.

Justice Nash's Court.

Justice Nash has issued summons in the cases of Whittiker against Allen, on contract, and Woodruff against Tunison, on contract, both returnable on June 3rd.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

SUGAR BOUNTY FUNDS

More Than $5,000,000 Available for Paying Claims.

TOTAL AMOUNT REQUIRED $6,111,500

Claims Will Either Have To Be Prorated or an Additional Appropriation Must Be Made—Payments Not To Be Made Before July 1.

Washington, May 26.—The effect of the decision in the sugar bounty cases by the United States supreme court will make immediately available for their payment more than $5,250,000. For the payment of the cane, beet and sorghum sugar claims congress appropriated $5,000,000. These claims amount to $6,111,500, and are classified as follows, cents omitted: Louisiana, 473 claims, $5,591,617 bounty claimed. third Texas district, 13, $123,812; Florida, 9, $5,655; California, 3, $293,-208; Nebraska, 1, $45,387; Kansas, 2, $6,259; Utah, 1, $45,862. Total, 502 claims; $6,111,500 bounty claimed. All these claims have been approved by the commissioner of internal revenue, and as the total amount allowed is larger than the appropriation the claims will have to be prorated, or an additional appropriation made to meet them. When the bounty was repealed certain sugar producers had completed their production and presented claims for bounty, and these claims, amounting to $238,386, remained unpaid. Of this class of claims 4,540 were for maple sugar, distributed as follows, cents omitted; New Hampshire, 2,859, $81,282; third Massachusetts, 33, $834; fourteenth New York, 74, $1,796; twenty-first New York, 876, $23,145; twenty-eighth New York, 136, $2,130; twelfth Pennsylvania, 15, $268; twenty-third Pennsylvania, 237, $5,284; Maryland, 78, $2,721; West Virginia, 12, $219; tenth Ohio, 28, $740; eighteenth Ohio, 130, $2,375, fourth Michigan, 50, $826; Minnesota, 6, $159. Total—4,540 claims, $121,799 bounty claimed. All these claims of every class have passed through the office of the commissioner of internal revenue and been approved. They will now be forwarded at once to the auditor's office and thence to Comptroller Bowler for his signature. It will probably be July 1 next before any of the claims will be paid in the ordinary treasury routine.

OF UNSOUND MIND.

Mrs. Kilham, Convicted of Kidnapping Celia Leonard, Paroled.

Boston, May 26.—Mrs. Etta A. Kilham of Lynn was placed on probation in the superior court by Judge Richardson yesterday for kidnapping the 3-year-old child Celia Leonard last October. Since last week, when she pleaded guilty to the indictment, an investigation into her mental condition has been made by Drs. Jelley and Morris, who are of the opinion that she is mentally weak. In view of the doctors' opinion the court disposed of her case as above.

Petitions for Boer Clemency.

Cape Town, May 26.—A movement has been started in every town in South Africa having for its object the promotion of petitions to the Transvaal government asking that leniency be shown Col. Rhodes, Messrs. Phillips, Farrar and Hammond and the other members of the reform committee.

Carroll Convicted of Murder.

Norwich, N. Y., May 26.—The trial of Patsey Carroll, colored, charged with the murder of Arthur Brewster, also colored, on September 12 last, was concluded here last night, the jury returning a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. The prisoner will be sentenced to-day.

Increased Canal Traffic.

Albany, May 26.—The canal traffic for the week between May 14 to 21 aggregated 166,570 tons, against 111,770 tons for the corresponding week last year. The increased tonnage this year was in carrying coal, wheat, corn and oats.

Mark Twain Visits Transvaal Prisoners.

London, May 26.—A dispatch from Pretoria says that Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) visited the imprisoned members of the Johannesburg reform committee on Sunday and found them in good spirits.

Deaths from Cholera in Egypt.

Cairo, May 26.—The following are the latest returns of deaths from cholera: In Alexandria, 13; Cairo, 18; old Cairo, 37; Touran, town and prison camp, 15. These returns are for Sunday.

Big Reaper Factory Burned.

Mansfield, O., May 26.—The Aultman-Taylor reaper works were destroyed by fire which started soon after midnight this morning. The loss will reach at least half a million dollars.

APPROPRIATION BILLS OUT OF THE WAY

Butler Bond Measure and Filled Cheese Bill the Subjects Remaining in the Senate—Alcohol Tariff in the House.

Washington, May 26.—Now that all the annual appropriation bills are out of the way, the last, the deficiency bill, having been passed yesterday afternoon, the senate has practically completed its labor for the present session. The Butler bond bill and the filled cheese measure will probably engross the attention of the senate for several days, the bond measure being on the programme for to-day. The deficiency bill as reported from the appropriation committee covered items aggregating about nine million dollars; about twice the amount that it carried when it came over from the house. In its progress through the senate the aggregate was still further increased by the appropriation of over a million dollars for findings in the French spoliation claims; of over half a million dollars for findings of the court of claims under the Bowman act. The bill was also heavily loaded with private claims.

House of Representatives.

The house to-day in committee of the whole is still considering the bill to repeal that section of the present tariff law providing for rebate on alcohol used in the arts and in medicinal compounds. Mr. Evans, rep., Ky., on behalf of the ways and means committee, offered an amendment providing for the appointment of three senators and three representatives to consider the question relating to the use of alcohol in the arts and manufactures free of tax and to report to the next session of congress. In advocating the passage of the bill Mr. Evans stated that the section had been found so faulty that no resolutions could be framed by the treasury department—as the language of the section directed—that would protect the government, and that the government stood to lose $25,-000 to $30,000 in claims every day since it was enacted. The repeal of the section was vigorously opposed by Messrs. Russell and Hill, reps., Conn., on the ground that it would be a reversal of one of the principles of the republican party in the matter of protection—the latter giving notice that he would move to strike out the repeal clause and insert instead the amendment for a committee of investigation.

GOVERNOR TOO ZEALOUS.

Expulsion of Missionaries from Bitlis Made Through Mistake.

Constantinople, May 26.—The Beirout journals recently published the following official communication: "A short time ago the Ottoman government had occasion to publish an irade expelling from the country those foreigners who were participating in conspiracy against the sultan. The governor of Bitlis started wrongfully to apply this irade against the missionaries, and so the government has found it necessary to publish a special irade that all missionaries are to be undisturbed in their work."

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was

Sick

and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep at night. My heart does not trouble me and I have realized great relief for asthma. I feel full of courage once more and life seems brighter and worth living. I would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all afflicted as I have been, for I know it will help them. If this statement of facts will be of benefit, you are welcome to use it as you please." HENRY J. WRIGHT, Box 502, Oxford, New York.

Well

Coughs, * Consumption.

The greatest cause of terror of the present day, formerly considered hopeless, is now conceded by the best physicians as curable under proper conditions. Its cause—a depleted condition of the system; a mal-assimilation of food; a wasting away of the tissues; an impoverishment of the blood. The result—a diseased condition of all the organs of the body; a formation of eating ulcers; and the result death from collapse or hemorrhage. But the cure is that greatest concentration into the least possible bulk of the vital elements of lean, raw beef. It is absorbed and nourishes with the least possible effort on the part of the stomach. It creates new tissue, enriches the blood, makes flesh, and by strengthening the great vital centres of the body enables them to perform their functions in a natural manner, and dispel disease. Thousands owe their life to its use.

Bovinine

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

BLOW TO FREE CUBA

Result of Supreme Court Decision in the Horsa Case.

MORE EXPEDITIONS TO BE SENT

But More Secrecy Will Be Necessary and They Will Labor Under Greater Difficulty—Executive Clemency Capt. Wiborg's Only Hope.

Philadelphia, May 26.—The decision rendered by the United States supreme court yesterday, holding that Capt. Wiborg of the steamship Horsa was guilty of a violation of the neutrality laws in conducting a filibustering expedition to aid the Cuban insurgents, is a great blow to the friends of free Cuba in this city, who say that, while other expeditions will undoubtedly be sent to that island, they will have to be conducted with much more secrecy and under far more difficult circumstances. Unless the president interferes Capt. Wiborg will have to serve the sentence originally imposed upon him. The opinion, which was delivered by Chief Justice Fuller, holds that the decision of the Pennsylvania court was correct on the point that the expedition was a violation of the neutrality laws. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed as to Capt. Wiborg, but reversed as to the mates of the Horsa, Johansen and Petersen, on the ground that they were ignorant of the purpose of the expedition. Judge Harlan concurred in the reversal of the judgment as to Petersen and Johansen, but dissented from the judgment affirming the sentence against Wiborg. This case was recently advanced by the supreme court at the request of the attorney general, who was desirous of securing a decision as to the condition of the neutrality laws and their effect in preventing filibustering expeditions against friendly powers.

LITERALLY SLAUGHTERED.

Crushing Defeat of a Spanish Force While Trying To Invade Cubitas.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 26.—Advices have reached here from a reliable source in Cuba to the effect that a strong body of Spanish troops recently made a second attempt to invade Cubitas, the seat of the Cuban government. They were ambushed in the mountain fastnesses and sustained a crushing defeat. The Spaniards were literally slaughtered by the insurgents and the force was compelled to flee in disorder, abandoning their equipments on the field. The advices further show that a filibustering expedition, having large quantities of munitions of war, has landed at a place to the eastward of Santiago de Cuba.

Cuban Fair Opens.

New York, May 26.—The great fair for Cuba Libre, or the Cuban-American fair, was opened last night in the Madison Square garden. The garden presented a gorgeous appearance, with many lights and the blending of the Cuban flag and "Old Glory," while the gaily decorated booths added to and heightened the general effect. There were everywhere hosts of dark-eyed beauties, who did their best to wheedle the seductive coin from the purses of the large number of visitors, and there were early indications that they were eminently successful.

Cubans Buy a Yacht.

Camden, N. J., May 26.—The Cuban junta has purchased a thirty-foot gas and electric yacht owned by a resident of Camden, and the little craft, the Lulu Snang, is now said to be on her way to Cuba. The yacht can make fifteen knots an hour and can carry thirty people. It is said that she will be used by the Cubans as a sort of a tender to the larger filibustering steamers and will convey the latters' cargoes ashore to the island.

Laurada Again Goes to Sea.

Charleston, S. C., May 26.—The filibustering steamer Laurada, which has been lying at the Quarantine station here for two days, went to sea again last night.

NEW YORK NOT TO COMPETE.

Fire Board Refuses To Permit The City To Be Represented in London.

New York, May 26.—At a meeting of the board of fire commissioners yesterday afternoon Capt. Beasley of the National Fire Brigade union, which is to hold a tournament in London, was present, and the board again stated finally to him that they would send no team to England to compete in the tournament. They asked Capt. Beasley if he would send a cablegram to London to that effect, but he said he would prefer the board send it. President LaGrange then sent the following cablegram to London: "We exceedingly regret that we will be unable to send a team to London to compete in the international tournament as heretofore intended."

The Burden Robbers.

London, May 26.—William Dunlop and William Turner, the two men accused of being the persons who stole the Burden jewels, will be handed over to the New York police officers to-day, with the recovered jewelry, and the party will sail for New York from Liverpool to-morrow by the White Star line steamship Germanic.

Johnson Loses Again.

Paris, May 26.—John S. Johnson, the American bicyclist, was beaten by Jacquelin by several lengths in both heats of the two kilometres match yesterday. Johnson came in third in the race of 2,000 metres, being beaten by Robone and Durand.

The Disturbances in Crete.

London, May 26.—An Athens dispatch to the Times says: "It is reported that there has been street fighting in the town of Canea, in the island of Crete."

Eighteen of the twenty-one counties in New Jersey will elect Sheriffs this fall.

It is said ex-Judge Alfred Walling will be the Democratic candidate for Senator in Monmouth county.

Speaker Louis T. Derousse, of the House of Assembly, will endeavor to be the next Sheriff of Camden county.

Here is a decision by the Attorney-General of New York State that will be of particular interest to Plainfielders just at present:

A careful reading of section 2 of the act (the Raines excise law) will lead to the conclusion that a pers n must hold a liquor tax certificate in order to lawfully traffic in fermented or hard cider.

Speaking of ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark's nomination for postmaster of Somerville, the Plainfield Press says:

He, if he should accept, will appoint someone to conduct the office, as his large law practice will not permit him to attend to such a small affair as a post office.

That will never do. No man has any business to accept a public office if he cannot attend to the duties of it. The people of Somerville would no doubt be pleased to have Mr. Clark for postmaster, but it would not be fair to them, the Government or himself, to accept and then do the work by deputy.—New York Tribune.

The New York World this morning impeaches the Democracy of Alvah A. Clark, who has just been appointed postmaster at Somerville, and insists that the appointment will not be conducive to party harmony in Somerset county. The charge is made that Mr. Clark violated all allegiance to the Democratic party last fall by working for the election of Charles A. Reed to the Assembly. It is likely that The World's comments are inspired by some of the disgruntled candidates for the place which Mr. Clark has been selected.

It is to the credit of Plainfield that the assignment of J. P. Laire is the first heavy failure that has taken place among her merchants in many a day. No town in New Jersey possesses a class of tradesmen who are so uniformly progressive and up-to-date, and to branch out to the extent that local merchants have, required, in the parlance of the day, nerve, besides a substantial reputation to meet their bills among the wholesalers. In the case of Mr. Laire, all sincerely regret the the financial straights in which he has become involved, and it is the hope that he may be able to resume business at an early date.

WILL CARRY IT HIGHER.

Lawyer Angleman Replies to the Interview of Counselor McClure.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—My attention has been called to an interview in your Saturday's issue with William K. McClure in reference to the case of Ford against Lawrence, which was brought to recover wages due a servant, and in which case I represented the plaintiff and Mr. McClure the defendant. Mr. McClure makes several inaccurate statements in regard to the case, which are not worth while contradicting, and then says:

"The article in The News says that the Supreme Court will probably be called upon to finally decide the issue. It has already done so. To carry such a case to the Supreme Court, that has held in Beach against Mullen, 5v. 343, that a servant can be discharged for impertinence solely, would be worse than inviting the wrath of the gods; it would be inviting the derision of the Court."

The case of Beach against Mullin, to which Mr. McClure refers, was decided in 1870 by the Supreme Court. Mullin sued Beach in the court for the trial of small causes to recover wages due her for one month's service as a domestic in his family from the 19th of July to the 19th of August, 1869. The contract of hiring was made on the 19th of July, at $16 a month. The plaintiff was discharged on the 14th of August. She recovered a judgment before the justice, and on appeal the recovery was sustained for the amount of $13, being compensation for the time she served at the rate of $16 a month. To reverse the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, Beach certioraried the case to the Supreme Court. And the Supreme Court refused to reverse the judgment. In giving the opinion in the case, the learned Judge devotes to pages to remarks, or dicta, in regard to the entirety of servants contracts, and then says: "But it nowhere appears that the Court whose judgment is under review disregarded these legal principles." The reasons on which the case was decided are then given.

It is to the incidental remarks of the Judge that Mr. McClure pins his faith that Mrs. Lawrence should not pay Eliza Ford for the work done prior to her discharge; but surely Mr. McClure is too good a lawyer not to know that such remarks are not binding as authority. The very point upon which the case was actually decided is the only part of the decision binding as a precedent. If Mr. McClure thinks otherwise, I should be pleased to refer hom to a number of cases in which the United States Supreme Court, the highest tribunal in the land, has so decided and to the opinion of that great and learned jurist, the late Chief Justice Marshall.

I may have been extremely rash and have shown great temerity in presenting an opinion of the law directly opposed to that held by Mr. McClure: but I am quite confident that ninety-nine out of a hundred people believe that a day's work is worthy of a day's pay, and that no juggling with the law should deprive a poor servant of that pay. Already a majority of the American States has repudiated the old doctrine that a servant was bound body and soul to the master, and it is only a question of time, in my opinion, when all will do the same. Great advance has been made in every other department of human endeavor since the incidental thoughts of the Judge in the Beach against Mullin were given expression twenty-six years ago. Has the law alone stood still? As the late Austin Abbott has well said, "If the law were not progressive, civilization would be stationary. We review its past to ascertain its course and measure its advances, to learn precisely what it is today, and prepare for its fresh and truer expression tomorrow."

If necessary the case of Ford against Lawrence will be taken to the Supreme Court, notwithstanding the "wrath of the gods" and the "derision" of Mr. McClure's fancy.

Mr. McClure claims that his position is "justifiable under the law." Shylock claimed his pound of flesh on the same ground. But was the claim just?

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. BEAUTIFUL FAIRVIEW CEMETERY.

The Public Officially Invited to Visit on Decoration Day.

The trustees hereby extend a cordial invitation to the lot owners and the citizens of Westfield, Plainfield, Fanwood, Scotch Plains, Springfield, Cranford, Roselle, Elizabeth and Rahway to visit this beautiful "city of our beloved dead."

On Saturday next, May 30th—Decoration Day—a committee from the trustees will be in attendance to escort visitors through the grounds and give any desired information as to price of lots, care of lots, trust funds, etc., etc.

The organization of Fairview Cemetery Association was perfected on the 13th of January, 1868, pursuant to the provisions of a general statute of this State, and a certificate was duly filed with the County Clerk, constituting the Association a legally corporate body.

The enterprise has met with favor and success even beyond expectation.

The Cemetery grounds are located on the public road leading from Westfield to Springfield, about one-and-a-half miles from the depot of the Central Railroad in Westfield, and about the same distance from Cranford station; convenient to each of the above cities and towns, at the same time not too far for the accommodation of Springfield.

The Cemetery embraces an elevation of land formerly owned by John R. Miller, and long known as Mount Pleasant, commanding a view of the surrounding country for many miles distant in every direction.

It is the often-expressed opinion of civil engineers and others who have been upon our grounds that in respect to their locality, the distant views in every direction from the summit, their wavy, rolling surface and woody slopes, the dry and suitable nature of the soil, and their general adaptation to burial purposes, they are not only the most desirable in this section of the State, but unsurpassed by those of any cemetery in the country.

The Superintendent, Charles W. Sortor, can be found at the Lodge and will at any time render to visitors any desired information as to burials, location of lots, prices, etc.

By order of the Board,
J. S. Irving, President,
B. J. Crosby, Secretary.

DUNELLEN.

Fifteen new members have been elected in the new fire company.

M. L. Frescoin is entertaining Mrs. Duschaur and son from Baltimore.

Miss Minnie Liable, of Somerville, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. W. Liable.

Mrs. John Hall, of Bound Brook, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Case.

E. F. Bashet has gone to New Ringhold, Pa., after stopping a few days at the Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Mohan have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. James Mohan, of Ansonia, Conn.

A. A. Parker, of Jersey City, has moved on the Kuenlen farm, recently purchased through the agency of C. W. Johnson.

Miss Minnie Combs, of Corning, N. Y., who has been visiting Mrs. J. B. Coriell, of North avenue, is visiting friends in New York.

Sunday afternoon, as Mrs. William Coles and daughter, Mrs. H. Hetfield, were passing through the lot between the property of John Huff and S. Richardson, on Front street, some miscreant shot a flobert rifle, the bullet striking Mrs. Hetfield's valuable Newfoundland dog. The bullet lodged in the animal's leg. It is very painful, and it will be some time before the dog can walk again.

—A silver collection will be taken at the Mt. Olive Baptist church next Sunday to help defray the expenses of repairing the church.

—Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, D. D., will lecture in the Church of the Redeemer Friday evening on the history of the church.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

NEW MARKET.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Newhall, of Brooklyn, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Titsworth.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will give a literary and musical entertainment tonight for the benefit of the Boys' Mission School at Shanghai, China, at which the Schubert Musical Club will furnish music. Ice cream and strawberries will be on sale after the programme.

—Judgment was rendered for possession yesterday in the case of Male against Clum, landlord and tenant, and the defendant agreed to go out of the house in question.

THE HONEST SHAKERS AND THEIR CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

The shopkeeper who cheats us by lying with regard to the quality of his goods, and the grocer or the butcher who gives us short weights, is a thief. However, their knaving touches nothing but our pocketbook. There is another widespread form of misrepresentation of a far more dangerous and villainous character.

We refer to the false statements and worthless guarantees that frequently accompany medicines. To guarantee a medicine to cure is to brand it as a quack product. If we can guarantee to cure disease, then we can guarantee everlasting life, for in a large majority of cases people die of disease, the proportion of violent or accidental deaths being very small.

The Shakers have always been known as a most upright and honorable people, and their success in the manufacture of medicines has also been well-known. It is therefore not surprising to find them pursuing a very original and novel plan for the introduction of their remedy for dyspepsia.

These God-fearing people, whose motto has always been "Try all things and hold fast that which is good," have put upon the market ten cent sample bottles of their product, or sufficient to give it a trial.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that for the trivial sum of ten cents, a person can usually determine as to whether or not it meets the requirements of his case. There are forms of dyspepsia which it won't help, but these are very rare. In most cases the first dose relieves all distress and an increase of appetite at once follows.

All druggists have it and the next time you are troubled wtih indigestion send out and try this popular and successful product. It represents nearly a hundred years of patient investigation and study.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Did you ever think how readily the blood is poisoned by constipation? Bad blood means bad health and premature old age. DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills, overcome obstinate constipation. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

HOME BOARD AFFAIR

Several Prominent Presbyterians Called to Saratoga.

THE ATTACK TO BE MADE THURSDAY

Assembly Committee on Missions Reports To-day—Proposition To Retire Those Members Whose Terms Expire This Year—New Blood Is Wanted.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 26.—The predicament of the home board on account of the Mission house investment has caused a gathering of the friends of the board in this city. Ex-moderator Charles L. Thompson of New York and Charles A. Dickey of Philadelphia arrived last night. John Hall, president of the board, is here. John E. Parsons, the board's counsel, has been called to its assistance, and other influential Presbyterians have been summoned. The date of the attack is fixed for Thursday. But to-day will have trouble of its own for the board. The assembly's committee on home missions reports to-day. This committee has digested the report of the board, including the schedule of the Mission house building committee. A prominent commissioner said last evening that a proposition is to be made to the assembly to retire those members of the board whose terms expire this year and elect in their stead Presbyterians from other parts of the country, thereby introducing new blood into the board and "breaking the clique of New Yorkers who play into the hands of the Wall street bankers." If the Hubbard resolutions are not discussed today there will be other matters to engage the attention of the visitors from New York. One of the foreign board, who is also an influential member of the assembly, said last night: "I think the proposal of Miss Kennedy to aid the boards to return to the old quarters most noble and generous. It ought to be accepted by the assembly with gratitude and satisfaction. It extricates in an honorable and easy manner the two boards from a most dangerous situation, from which they must retire sooner or later. We cannot handle the building at Fifth avenue and Twentieth street as profitably as a business man could. For instance, we were offered $30,000 rental for the corner room, but could not accept as an independent business man could, as it was wanted for a restaurant, and liquors are sold in a restaurant. Again, the space occupied by the chapel is worth $10,000 a year. A business man would avail himself of this space at a profit, but we cannot."

SOUND MONEY GERMANS.

To Support No Candidate for President Unless He Declares Himself.

New York, May 26.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the German American Sound Money league last evening, Philip Bissinger presiding, it was decided to adopt the circular agreed upon at a former conference with a few amendments, the principal one being in the third article. The amendment makes it necessary to support no presidential candidate unless that candidate comes out strongly and unflinchingly for the gold standard. The circular will be sent to all the representative Germans in the United States. The signers will be asked to take a decided stand against bimetalism and free silver coinage.

Bikes Good for Bail in New York City.

New York, May 26.—By the new laws any person violating a city ordinance punishable only by fine, may, instead of securing bondsmen, leave as collateral any valuable equal to the amount of bail and thus escape waiting in jail for bonds. This will prove especially beneficial to cyclists, who may, when arrested for "scorching" or not carrying lights, leave their wheels at the station house as bail for the owner's appearance in court next day.

Counterfeiters Convicted.

New York, May 26.—The trial of Joseph Weela, Charles A. Pachin, Morris Goldstein and Charles Murray, charged with making and passing counterfeit two-dollar silver certificates, resulted in a verdict of guilty as to Pachin and Goldstein, and not guilty as to Weela and Murray. The latter were immediately discharged and the former were remanded for sentence.

Blunder in New York Game Laws.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 26.—It has been discovered here that the section of the game laws of the state which are supposed to protect black bass during the closed season, through a blunder on the part of the lawmakers, applies only to the St. Lawrence river. Amendments remedying this error are now awaiting the governor's signature.

Big Premiums for Her Builders.

Washington, May 26.—Rear Admiral Beardslee has sent a telegram to the navy department announcing the result of the official trial of the battleship Oregon. The official speed made was 16.791 knots, which insures the builders of the ship, the Union Iron works of San Francisco, a premium of $175,000.

Fatal Barroom Duel with Knives.

Providence, May 26.—In a duel with knives in Nelson Cabana's saloon, in the Olneyville factory district, last night, John Sweeney, a weaver, mortally wounded Hugh Holland, a bartender.

Rebellion in China.

Pekin, May 26.—The Dungans are again in a state of rebellion. They have captured Kiayuk-Wan and are advancing westward.

Baron de Kuhnefeld Dead.

Vienna, May 26.—Gen. Franz Kuhn, Baron de Kuhnefeld, died last evening at Cervignano.

To Kill Thistles

It is not necessary to kill all the seeds of the thistles in order to exterminate these undesirable weeds. You can so cultivate the ground that they will not thrive; and at last will disappear altogether. It might be better to kill the seeds, but we cannot do it. It would be the wisest course to destroy all the germs, or seeds, of consumption, could we do so. But this cannot be done. So we must keep the tissues of the lungs, the soil, in such a condition that the germs will not thrive the

BY WILLIAM T. NICHOLS.

...Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

The proposal pleased me; for I had several errands to attend to in that city, and a ride of less than an hour by rail would carry us there.

"Come on, then," said Carpenter, when I had agreed to his plan; "let's get down ter the deepo. Train's due in ten minutes."

During the trip he told me something of the various happenings in Bassettville, and, in turn, sought news of Rodneytown in general, and of my patient in particular. He had heard, he said, a story that the invalid was a rich brewer from the south who had been sent to a less enervating climate. I prayed that the yarn might receive general circulation and credence, though how it had been started was one of the mysteries of countryside gossip.

"He's from Charleston, South Carliny, some folks allow," said Carpenter, suggestively.

"From that direction, certainly," I answered.

"He keeps mighty close."

"He has to. Quiet, absolute quiet, is the best medicine he can have," I hastened to explain.

"'Tain't much fun fer a man ter live like a clam," Carpenter observed. "Still, it's livin', and that beats dyin' every time. It's like fishin' fer bass and catchin' bull-heads."

When we left the train at the Trent station Sam led the way to the stable where we hoped to make a purchase. The horse, a big dark bay, long-legged and with a wisp of a tail, was brought out of his stall and trotted up and down the street for inspection. He was not a pretty horse in any way, but Carpenter gave me a nudge which might be taken to indicate that the animal met his approval. He drew me aside, after having made a long and thorough examination of the horse.

"Eight years old, sound as a dollar; wind and legs all right," said he, in a whisper. "I've seen him before. He's good fer a mile under 2:40. Quiet as a lamb, no fool notions; sensible as a Christian about trains—knows the injine can't hurt him if he keeps off the track."

"What's the price?"

"Five hundred—asked," said he, with a strong emphasis on the last word.

I whistled softly.

"Oh, that's the askin' price," he explained. "It's like a woman's chignon: it'll come off."

"I'm in your hands," said I. "Understand, I want your guarantee in this business, and you'll be paid for it. Besides the horse, I need harness and a buggy."

"Wall," said he, after a moment's calculation, "I'll be fair with ye. Will ye give me what I can clear under $500 fer the hull outfit, hoss, light-runnin' buggy, and a good harness?"

"It's a bargain. I'll go to the bank, draw the money, and bring it to you here. Will you drive the rig to Bassettville, so that I can get it there to-night when I come down by train?"

"By the time yer back from the bank I'll have made the dicker and be ready to start," said he. And he was as good as his word. Before noon the payment had been made and my new horse was trotting steadily along the road leading from Trent. Carpenter's praise of the animal had been enough to end my doubts as to his speed, but I could not but wish that the steed were more pleasing to look upon.

Though I wasted a good deal of time over a mid-day dinner and the various commissions I had to execute, I found upon reaching the railway station that there was nearly an hour of waiting ahead of me before the accommodation train should begin its journey down the road. The station, however, was not a bad place in which to kill time, for two lines met there, and the rapid ebb and flow of the human tide continued from morning to night. I rubbed elbows with stolid farmers, brisk townspeople and nervous women, chatted for a moment with an acquaintance, and then stepped out upon the platform in search of some sheltered nook where a cigar might be enjoyed in peace. A long train from the west monopolized one of the tracks. It appeared to be well filled with passengers, and I strolled the length of it, surveying with some amusement the faces flattened against the windows of the cars, faces old, middle-aged and young, but all alike in their expression of vague curiosity, as their owners watched the stream of travelers passing from the waiting-rooms. I had nearly reached the end of the last car, and had bent down to strike a match in the lee of it, when I heard my name called.

"Oh, Dr. Morris, Dr. Morris, dear doctor, that's you, isn't it? Do come here, quick, quick! The train will be starting in a second, and I must see you! Oh, doctor, doctor, quick, quick!"

I recognized the voice. It was that of Mrs. Loring, with all the old hurrying rush of words I remembered so well. Looking up, I saw the itinerant sufferer leaning far out of the car window, with one arm waving wildly, as if to assist in attracting my attention. Pulling off my hat, I sprang toward her.

"Oh, this is fortunate, fortunate, doctor—you can't know how fortunate!" she cried. "I've been anxious, so anxious, to see you. How is my health? Oh, doctor, it's terrible, terrible, worse than ever, doctor; worse, much worse, very much worse."

"And Miss Gray, is she still with you?" I asked, my eyes roaming over the windows and seeking her niece's face at one of them.

"Yes, yes, dear girl, dear girl, she never leaves me. How could she, and have a heart? Mine, doctor, has been up to 120 a minute."

"Indeed!" said I, throwing due professional gravity into the word. "I trust Miss Gray is well?"

"Yes, yes, as well as ever. And a temperature of 102, repeatedly, doctor, repeatedly."

"What, Miss Gray's tem—?" cried I, with no fictitious concern.

"No, no, mine. Dear me, doctor, didn't I tell you it was mine? Those springs in Kentucky—we've just come from them—they did me no good, I'm sure. And I was so hopeful, doctor, so hopeful; the water had so many strange things in it, I was sure some of them must help me."

"Your case is a marvelous one, Mrs. Loring," said I. "Will you kindly present my regards to your niece, and—"

She stopped me with a quick gesture.

"Please put your address here," said she, thrusting a note book toward me. "Hurry, please hurry—the train is beginning to move. I have an idea that—Oh, thanks; yes, yes, I see, 'Rodneytown.' So good of you, yes, so good. Good-by, doctor, good-by."

The train was fairly under headway now, and I stood bowing low, but not to the vanishing invalid. At the next window to hers I had had a glimpse of another face, one that dreams had kept fresh in my memory and that had figured in the little romance that had crept into my existence.

VIII.

Winter, as a rule, displays few of his milder moods on that coast, and I had dreaded the effect of the season's rigors upon Lamar, who certainly had had no experience of the protracted cold of the latitude. Luckily, the house on the knoll had been built to withstand storms, and I saw to it that an abundant supply of fuel was laid in, so that, on the whole, in spite of its exposed position, the dwelling was fairly comfortable even in the worst weather. Its owner made no complaints. He spent much of his time in one of the upper rooms, which he had fitted up as a sort of laboratory. His interest appeared to be divided between chemistry and electricity, though whether his experiments in either had any object save his own amusement I never learned. Two or three cases of books had been shipped from Trent to my address, but for his use, and, when he cared to read, a miscellaneous collection of worthies could be drawn upon. There were a few Portuguese books and a few Spanish, a good many in Latin, and a still larger number in French and in English. Burton's Anatomy, Cicero's Letters, and Voltaire's works seemed to be his favorites. I say "seemed," for he never took the trouble to speak of any of the authors he read.

He was still as cadaverous as ever, though his general physical condition was as good as could be hoped for by any man who led so sedentary a life. December dragged through its tempestuous length, and January followed with an even more trying stretch of gales and extreme cold. These conditions he withstood so well that I had hopes that the winter would pass without illness at the house on the knoll; but one day early in February I found him suffering from a severe cold and exhibiting symptoms which were most unfavorable. It was my first opportunity to earn the salary of his medical adviser, and fortune was kind. Although he developed a good deal of fever, and at the worst it was touch-and-go with pneumonia, a week saw him practically out of danger, though still quite willing to keep to his bed, and a good deal safer there than he would have been prowling about the house. He expressed no opinion of his treatment, no thanks to his doctor, no impatience to be about again. I was his physician, hired by the year, and so long as he was ill my orders were to be obeyed unquestioningly; there was no need of gratitude either way. It was all very logical, no doubt, but it increased my dislike for him. There would have been more real satisfaction in persuading a drooping sapling to keep alive.

After his recovery we slipped back into the old routine. He gave orders occasionally, and I obeyed them, without question and without any great heed for the reasons for them. In fact, speculating upon this man's history or his plans was such profitless business that, for the time, I gave it up in disgust. He was a person who was to be visited daily, who paid liberally for the attention, and who thus enabled me to pass my many leisure hours in careless, easy-going comfort. The people I met were no longer inquisitive about the hermit; the theory of the brewer from Charleston appeared to have spread widely and to have been accepted, finding believers far more easily than would have been the case with any statement of the facts concerning him, so far as they had fallen within my knowledge.

At last winter drew to a close, and spring came on, advancing coyly, as is the custom of maidens before whom the world is ready to bow in eager homage. Then the last of the snow-banks disappeared from the recesses of the hills, the slopes grew green, and the rank vegetation of the marsh flourished in all the vigor of its strong new life. Once more there were birds in the trees and flowers in the fields, and once more from the sea swept invigorating breezes.

To all about me spring brought renewed activities. There was a fine bustle on the farms, and even the sleepy village seemed to be awakened. For the first time my ease became onerous; I fell to inventing tasks to convince myself that one could be busy if he would. My horse, whose existence during the winter had been all that equine sloth could desire, was now in steady service, for the roads were excellent, being sufficiently sandy soon to rid themselves of undesirable moisture, and I explored the highways and byways for miles around. Near the village I let my steed choose his own gait, but when we found a level bit of road where there were likely to be no spectators the trotter had an opportunity to prove his speed. He was all that Carpenter had said for him; devoid of nerves, yet, when pushed, by long odds the fastest animal in the region. His appearance certainly was against him.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Peter B. Matthews, of Grove street, is riding a new Richmond wheel.

Miss Lida Pangborn, of Chatham street, has purchased a new wheel.

Madeline Evans, of East Front street, has been presented with a new wheel.

Phillip VanArsdale, Jr., of East Front street, has received a present of a new wheel.

Twelve more Richmond wheels were received by the Jersey Wheel Company yesterday.

A party of the cyclists of the New Jersey Athletic Club visited the Crescent Oval last Sunday.

The Jersey Wheel Company received a shipment of Richmond wheels yesterday. Inspection is invited.

Monte Scott won first time prize in a 15-mile road race at Providence on Saturday afternoon. His time was 40 minutes, 24 seconds.

Appley and Bird, the crack tandem team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, rode a quarter unpaced with standing start in 32 seconds, last Sunday at the Crescent Oval.

Al Hosmer, the crack amateur rider of Montclair, spent Sunday in Plainfield and took a good look at the Crescent Oval, where he will ride on Decoration Day.

"Baron" Ernest Hand, of Westfield, will ride in the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet under the club's colors. He now holds the track record of 2:09 2-5, and will make somebody hustle next Saturday.

Mifford Giles, of East Third street, who is stopping at Milburn while training for the road race, was seen Sunday by a few Plainfield friends. He is getting along finely and rides about twenty miles a day at present.

Harry Maddox, the famous Asbury Park crack, will not ride in the Irvington-Milburn road race on the 30th. He has decided to turn professional and will ride at the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet in that class.

J. A. Silvie, Jr., the well known professional from Port Richmond, S. I., is now in this city training for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet. He is a personal friend of Will Kiely, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The first daily newspaper devoted entirely to bicycling interests, made its appearance Sunday morning under the title of the Daily American Wheelman. It contains the latest cycling news from all over the world, and is of special interest to all bicycle riders. It deserves their solid support.

Charles A. Appley, one of Elizabeth's best riders, who will start in the Irvington-Milburn race, in conversation with a Press reporter, said that Plainfield's old favorite, Monte Scott, would have an excellent show for time prize in the Irvington-Milburn race. Scott is hard at work training for the race and is in excellent condition. He is located near Milburn and is able to do all his training on the course itself, which will be of great advantage to him on account of his thorough acquaintance with the peculiarities of the course.

Gus Burglund, the experienced trainer of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, entertained a number of his friends of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, of which he is a member, on Sunday afternoon. The club had a run to this city and visited the Crescent Oval, where Gus did the honors of the place. There were three tandems in the party, Charles A. Appley and Clarence Bird, Nick English and Walter Appley, Wm. Kline and Bettner being the riders. There were also a number of single riders, including Charles Brown.

The Jersey wheel will be represented at the Irvington-Milburn race on Decoration Day, although not by the Jersey Wheel Company's regular team. Two Elizabeth riders, Charles A. Appley and F. A. Brink, have sesected the Jersey as their mount and will race on it. Appley is well-known in this part of the state as one of the fastest all-round men on both road and track. He is one of the Elizabeth Athletic Club's racing team and rode for them in the Saltonstall trophey race at the Crescent Oval last September, finishing a close second. He will also ride on their team in the ten mile road race for the championship of Union county on June 6. Brink is a new man, but is said to be very fast.

A number of the boys living on this side of the brook have formed a bicycle club which they are pleased to call the Crescent Wheelmen, Juniors. They are now planning to hold a field-day at the Crescent Oval on Saturday, June 6th.

Among the entries published for the one mile tandem race in the Intercollegiate race meet at the Manhattan Beach track tomorrow afternoon, are those of Walter B. Rittenhouse and Robert Handloser, of Stevens Institute of Technology. Mr. Rittenhouse is a resident of this city and well-known as a fast rider on the roads. He has never ridden before on the track, Mr. Handloser is from New York, but is well-known here where he has visited a number of times.

W. J. Allen, has purchased a Hunter; Charles Smith, an Elmore, and Mr. Dunbar, a Keating, from Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer.

Chief Consul Gentle, of the League of American Wheelmen, has appointed W. J. Stephenson's restaurant on North avenue a league house for the ensuing year. J. H. McVey had it last year.

Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer, has received a Royal tandem for rental purposes. He will also receive about twelve new wheels this week also for rental. Mr. Lister is having a great sale on all kinds of cycle lamps at prices to suit all.

The Olympic bicycle is one of the best high grade wheels on the market. It has many modern features that no other wheel possesses, and which all wheelmen will appreciate. The Olympic is handled by J. R. Johnson, whose ad appears in another column of The Press.

E. L. Blauvelt, the well-known Newark professional, now riding for the Vim Tire Company, was out yesterday to the Crescent Oval with to other riders on his triplet examining the track as he expects to ride there in the Crescent Wheelmen's meet next Saturday.

Every morning and afternoon the fast riders are down at the Crescent Oval training under the care of Gus T. Burglund, the trainer of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team. Little brushes between the different riders are always in order, and yesterday afternoon Trainer Burglund arranged a little handicap trial of a mile. I. A. Silvie, Jr., started from scratch, A. H. Barnett had 10 yards, H. B. Mosher 40 yards, W. M. McCutchen 50 yards, J. H. Lake 60 yards, George B. Cobb, Jr., 70 yards, Joe Donahue 120 yards, and Joe Pike 125 yards. Donahue finished first as he plugged right ahead from the start and was never caught. McCutchen spurted for an entire lap, but could not overcome the lead, and finally fell back with the rest. The other riders bunched and loafed until the last turn when there was a grand spurt. Lake taking second place, Mosher third and Cobb fourth.

The wheelmen of Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., will meet at Lister's cycle store on North avenue this evening, and take a run to Roselle.

Letter carriers R. H. Loughlin, Dan Shea and Patrick Reville, will take their vacation together this year, beginning July 1st. The expect to take a trip on their wheels through New York State and visit friends.

The Quill Club Wheelmen have accepted the invitation of the Crescent Wheelmen and will be their guests on Decoration Day. A stage will be sent to Milburn to convey the party of cycling writers to this city after the Irvington-Milburn race.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

A. C. Vail drove his pacer Budd Onward a mile to road wagon in 2:35¼.

Charley Brower drove Mr. Fairbans pacing mare Lillian M. two miles in 2:29½ and 2:25½.

Nate Robins, of Metuchen, was at the Driving Park Saturday and drove his fast pair of Lamberts, Nate and Ollie, a mile to a top buggy in 2:51, first half in 1:23½, which shows they can go some, and good judges say they can outfoot any team in Middlesex county.

Linola, one of the most promising mares ever raised at the Woodbrook Farm, will soon be amongst Mr. Johnsons stable of roadsters at Plainfield. This mare is very fast and can trot on track close to 2:25 at any time, and she is not only fast but is bred to go the route, being by Bayone Prince, out of the great race mare Siola, 2:23¼, who, in the hands of Andy McDowell, made more than one successful campaign through the west and is now among Mr. Johnson's band of brood mares at the Woodbrook Farm.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Chas. Maltby and Cap Kirkner spent yesterday angling at Bound Brook and report good catches.

Fred Sandford and brother, who have been trout fishing in Pennsylvania for the past three weeks, have returned home.

INS AND OUTS.

Chauncey Burt, of this city, a student at Princeton University, will pitch for the Y. M. C. A. baseball team next Saturday morning in their game against the Woodbridge team. He is one of the crack pitchers at Princeton and a good game is looked for. The game will be called at 10 o'clock. In the afternoon the home team will play at Woodbridge.

LAWN TENNIS.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club announces a lawn tennis tournament for men's singles to be held at the club grounds on Watchung avenue, May 30th, at 10 o'clock a. m. Entries, limited to players of Plainfield and North Plainfield, will be received up to 8 o'clock Friday evening by any member of the committee which are as follows: A. H. Atterbury, 315 West Seventh street, J. H. P. Wharton, Third place, Carl Pfeiffer, Madison avenue, R. A. Beebe, 718 Madison avenue, and S. West, Central avenue. The entrance fee is fifty cents. A first and second prize will be given.

AROUND THE BASES.

The baseball nine of the Plainfield Athletic Club, the successors to the famous Arlingtons, played a practice game last Saturday. They will open on Decoration Day with two games with the Dunellen baseball club on the latter's grounds. The morning game begins at 10:30 o'clock and the afternoon game at 3:30. Sutphen and Mumford will be the battery for the visitors, and Hayes and Richardson for the Dunellens.

NOTICE TO BICYCLE RIDERS!

The ordinance to regulate the use of bicycles will be strictly enforced from this date. Riding without a light one hour after sunset, without a bell, or upon the sidewalks, is strictly prohibited, and if violated, is made punishable by a fine of $5.

THE CHORAL JAMBOREE

CLOSING EVENT OF THE SUCCESSFUL SINGING SOCIETY.

The Old Officers Chosen to Preside Over the Society's Affairs for Another Year—Planning for a Very Big Season

The "jamboree" of the Plainfield Choral Society is a great institution, and is the scene of a general rejoicing over the successes of the past. Last evening the Choralites turned out in large numbers to attend this famous annual event that closes the season for that prosperous society. It was held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and they were thronged with the members and their friends.

The entertainment which always occupies the first part of the evening consisted of selections by the Choral Society and the Cecelia Society. D. E. Titsworth presided, and his introductions and remarks were wittier than ever. The jamboree would not be complete without his humorous speeches.

The programme opened with a selection by the whole society, "Woodland Chase," and then, when the loud applause for that had died away, the Cecelia Society sang "The Spinning Song." Secretary Nelson Runyon made his report, telling of the growth of the society, and the good attendance at the rehearsals, besides other routine matters. Next came "Jack Horner," which the chorus rendered with their old-time vim, and then George T. Rogers made his report as treasurer. While the report was a good one, it showed the pressing need of more subscribers to carry the work along as it should be carried. While the visitors were thinking over this, the ladies of the Cecelia Society sang "Now is the Month of May" and "Old Madrid."

A burst of applause greeted E. J. Fitzhugh as he came to the front to say a few words. He congratulated the society on their excellent work and thanked them for their assistance to him in making the concerts so successful. The society did not forget their earnest and hard working leader, for they applauded as from their very heart. "Cupid's Lottery" and "The Little Sandman," arranged by Mr. Fitzhugh and dedicated by him to the ladies of the Choral Society, were then sung by the members of the Cecilia Society and the programme was over.

The nominating committee made their report and nominated the old officers as follows: President, C. W. McCutchen; vice president, D. E. Titsworth; secretary, Nelson Runyon; treasurer, George T. Rogers; directors, Rev. W. R. Richards, D. E. Davis and R. J. Shaw; librarians, N. Y. Hull and Stacy Raynolds. They were unanimously elected. A period of sociability and refreshments followed.

While the members and visitors gathered in groups, the young men passed the ice cream and the young women followed with the cake and everybody enjoyed themselves. As the hands of the clock gradually neared the hour of eleven, the crowd slowly departed and the jamboree of 1896 was a thing of the past.

The refreshments were a very important and pleasing part of the jamboree and were under the charge of a committee composed of Mrs. L. M. French, chairman, Mrs. G. E. Stillman, Mrs. Robert Gorton, Mrs. L. S. Bond, Mrs. H. E. Ryder, Miss Josephine Petrie, Mrs. J. H. Manning and Miss Gussie Runyon.

Merry George's Fiftieth Birthday.

Next Sunday evening, May 31st, George Thatcher, the well known minstrel and vaudeville performer who resides in this city will be given a testimonial at the Herald Square Theatre in New York. The occasion marks Mr. Thatcher's fiftieth birthday and the completion of his thirtieth year on the stage. A very strong programme, chiefly contributed by "star" actors and actresses, is promised. The committee having the affair in charge are Charles E. Evans, George W. Lederer, Jere Dunn, Frederick M. McCloy and Leander Richardson.

Sewer Diggers Strike.

The Italians working on the Roselle sewers struck Saturday and compelled a lot of Hungarians to join them. Monday the Hungarians resumed work, but the Italians have succeeded in intimidating them so that they would not return to work. New gangs were hired.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

LAST SALE OF THE SEASON.

Park Avenue Baptist Church Woman Conduct a Successful Affair.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held their last sale of the season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, of Central avenue. The house was prettily decorated with flowers, and especially attractive was the electric light arrangement by Mr. Phillips. There was on sale fancy articles, confectionery and refreshments consisting of strawberries, cake and ice cream.

Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson and Mrs. Freeman were in charge of the fancy table, while Miss Haynes, Miss Swazey and Miss Fish looked after the confectionery. In the refreshment room Mrs. Theodore Runyon, Mrs. Skaden and Mrs. Phillips were in charge and they were assisted by Miss Thompson, Miss Day, Miss Brokaw and Miss Cuming. Excellent vocal and instrumental music was rendered during the evening by the Misses Coard. Mrs. J. H. Doane and Mrs. Harry Moore had in charge the decorations and Mrs. Nelson Runyon arranged the music. Mr. Opdyke was the efficient cashier.

The attendance at the sale was very encouraging and the profits will no doubt be quite large. To Mrs. Haynes, the president of the society, is due much credit for the success of the affair.

THE BOYS' CAMP.

Sumner F. Dudley Explains Its Objects and How the Time is Passed.

Sumner F. Dudley, a director of the Y. M. C. A. at Orange, and an assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of New York State, gave a very interesting and instructive illustrated lecture in the Y. M. C. A. building last night on boys' camps for the summer.

Forty-seven views were shown, all of which were made by boys connected with the association on their various camping expeditions. The balance were taken in and about the proposed camp for this summer, which is situated on Lake Champlain, near Westport, about 300 miles from New York city.

The speaker said that the plan of having these camping expeditions was spreading very rapidly among the associations, as the methods and objects of the organization are more fully understood by the boys after an intimacy of camp life. If camp life grows too monotonous, excursions are planned to nearby places of interest, but with the excellent fishing, boating and bathing, which abounds about the camp, there is a small likelihood of camp life becoming tiresome. The board at the camp costs $5.50 a week, and the round trip car fare from New York is $8.

Made a Fine Appearance.

Plainfield's "finest" made their first appearance last evening in their new summer uniforms and in honor of the event marched to the Jersey Wheel Academy, between seven and eight o'clock and had a drill and inspection. They went through their different parts like veterans and everything passed off smoothly. Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely appeared in white duck police hats and their suits trimmed with gold. The whole department made a fine appearance and is a credit to the city. Those present to witness the affair included Mayor Gilbert, Councilmen Barrows, Dumont and Ginna.

A Forcible Speaker.

A large attendance greeted Rev. George A. Francis, of Westfield, last evening at the meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance in the W. C. T. U. rooms, and his earnest and forcible remarks, together with his excellent delivery made a deep impression on all who heard him.

His subject was "The Newness of Life in Christ Jesus." Miss Nora Herndon, the city Missionary, was announced as the leader for the next meeting on Tuesday evening, June 2d.

Will Not Locate at Garwood.

A bicycle manufactory will not be added to the varied industries at Garwood, at present, at any rate. The proposition made by H. A. Lozier & Co., of Toledo, manufacturers of the Cleveland wheels, who were considering the question of locating at Garwood, was not accepted by the Garwood Land Improvement Company, as the terms were not considered satisfactory by the company.

At White's.

'Twould take columns to tell of the many good things that this live house has to tempt the dollars of their customers. 'Tis new goods everywhere, on every counter and every shelf is loaded down with bright, crisp goods that are most pleasing to every one, and such little prices that are asked makes you wonder how they can do it. Their advertisement tells of many of the good things they are offering, and what they advertise you are sure of finding.

WORKING ON THE BRAIN.

EDUCATIONAL WORK IN THE Y.M.C.A. FOR THE PAST YEAR.

Classes in Many Studies Are Maintained and an Active Interest is Shown by Members to Accept the Opportunities.

The committee on educational work in the Y. M. C. A. has made the following report for the year past:

The work in this department was formally inaugurated on Monday evening, October 14th, by appropriate exercises in the large hall of the Association. Henry Coleman, president of the Business College in Newark, delivered an address, and there were musical selections rendered by ladies from Newark and also by one of our own members. About 160 were present, and after the public exercises an opportunity was afforded for enrollment in the different classes, and quite a large number responded.

The regular class sessions began early in November. In the following month a class was organized for the study of Spanish, and the sessions closed, with one exception, the last of April.

For many years mechanical drawing has been one of our most important studies, and in order to increase the efficiency of this class a change has been made which during the past year has fully demonstrated the wisdom of the new method. A course of study covering three years in mechanical drawing, physics and mathematics, has been arranged by W. S. Timmis, the instructor, who has been assisted by Geo. F. Scull, a graduate of Rutgers College. Most excellent work has been done in this class, which has had an average attendance of 23 for five months, and at the close of the term examinations were held and A. B. Clemens, State educational secretary, reports that eight members have attained the required standard and by means of a supplementary examination, which will include some who were unable to be present, a larger number will undoubtedly qualify and be entitled to the certificates which are to be given to the successful students. This class in mechanics is of great value to all young men in the different machine shops in our city, who will avail themselves of the special privileges which it offers.

Our class in bookkeeping was organized under the charge of E. H. Bonnell, who for several years has rendered most faithful and efficient service as its instructor. Owing to business engagements Mr. Bonnell was obliged to leave Plainfield early in the term, so that necessarily he has been present only occasionally. Messrs. Fuller and Moraller, his assistants, have been in charge and the work has been carried on without interruption and in a most efficient manner. The average attendance in this class for six months has been 12, commencing in November with 18 and closing with 8 at the end of April, but these figures are misleading as to the character of the students and the work that has been accomplished. The members are clerks in our stores and many of them work during the evenings and give the only night which is theirs in the week to study in this branch. As there is much work for the scholars to do out of class hours it is really difficult for these young men to command the time necessary to faithful work, and considering the peculiar disadvantages under which they labor, the class record is excellent.

Instruction in German has been given by Rev. Mr. Kionka, who organized the work last year, and the average attendance for the entire term has been 7, but for two months there were only a small number present, so that the average, excluding these sessions, would be 9. German is a language of great practical benefit to clerks in certain lines of business, and very good work has been done in this class which labors under the disadvantage, common to some of the others also, of only meeting once a week, so that the work is rendered more difficult both to teacher and scholar for this reason. However, the interest in the class has been maintained by those who have continued to the close of the present term.

Last year your committee considered the matter of including the study of Spanish in our curriculum, but there was not a sufficient number of applicants to justify such an undertaking, although Spanish is becoming more each year a study of practical usefulness to those whose business connections are with Spanish-speaking people. In December, '95, however, a class was organized with a membership of 13, with J. A. Costales as instructor, and the interest manifested by the students, and their attendance, which averaged 9 for the term and was the best record of any one class, certainly indicate that the undertaking has supplied a want and that the outlook is most promising for future results.

Of all the instruction given in our educational department none has been so productive of visible results as that in our shorthand class, and in order to show what has been accomplished the following statements will be interesting: Graduates from this class have in former years obtained positions through their knowledge of stenography in firms and offices as follows: Manhattan Banking Co., J. L. Mott Iron Works, Central R. R. of N. J., Long Island R. R. Co., Standard Oil Co., Lawrence Cement Co., Perry Stove Co., Gorham M'f'g Co., Scott Press Works, Freeman Bros., wholesale hats, D. P. Winne & Co., Cordage M'f'g Co., U. S. Leather Co., Pond Tool Co. One of the graduates also served as stenographer to the president of the college which he entered.

Our shorthand class this season was at first under the charge of John C. Whiting, our assistant secretary, but his removal to Westfield early in the present year, resulted in Edgar Sheppard assuming charge. Both he and Mr. Whiting are graduates of this class and are evidences of the practical results of this branch of study.

In thus outlining the work of our educational department, we realize that its full results will be evident only in the future lives of those who have gathered in the various classes. In addition to those who have in past years obtained positions through a knowledge of stenography, it may be noted that one of our instructors in the bookkeeping class has been either a student or teacher in that class since 1890, and that six others from the same class have obtained positions through the knowledge which they have obtained of bookkeeping.

The total attendance this year in all the classes was considerably larger than in '94 and '95, although the average for this year was 62, which is below last year's average. The largest attendance was 75, in December, and the smallest 24, in April, owing to the fact that the mechanical class completed its course on April 1st. The average age of 57 students was 19 years and 7 months, and 35 students reached 80 per cent. in attendance. Of all the Associations in New Jersey, Plainfield stands second in the number of students registered and third in the number of branches taught in our classes.

Our library is in the same condition as reported last year, about 1,200 books on the shelves, many of them having been in possession of our Association for more than a quarter of a century. Some are in very poor condition and the greater part are of such a character that there could be no call for them, and therefore are practically useless for our purpose. We have not abandoned that sometime our Association will have a library in keeping with its other appointments, but at present all our funds are required for other more pressing needs.

In our directors' room is a Bible reference library of about 130 volumes, and we wish all Sunday-school teachers, Bible students or any who may wish to consult such books, to freely use this reference library.

There are 47 magazines, periodicals and papers in our reading room. Of these 11 are religious weeklies, 5 monthly magazines, 8 daily papers, 26 weekly papers and monthly journals, 7 of these are papers relating to technical subjects and useful to men in trades and leading industries. This reading room is free to all whether members or not, is open week days all day and during the evening; on Sundays at stated hours.

Educational work, as formerly carried on by the Associations in this country, was designed to instruct young men along certain lines, but greater stress was laid upon getting them under Association influences, than in giving them the very best possible training for their respective callings in life. More recently our Associations have caught the true idea of this work, realizing that we should offer to our students in so far as practicable the same equipment for their work as our colleges afford to their students, so that the graduates from Association classes will receive corresponding advantages to those

NEEDS OF THE HOSPITAL.

SUGGESTIONS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS.

The Work at the Institution is Often Shamefully Obstructed by Lack of Room for Patients—Larger Income Needed.

The following is that portion of the annual report of E. B. Clark, president of the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital, which refers to the need of more extensive accommodations and better support:

I feel sure that when the necessities of the hospital in this direction are fully made known to the subscribers and to those of our good people who have not yet felt it a duty to aid in its support, funds for extension will be speedily forthcoming. Those of us who have personal knowledge of the at times crowded condition of our wards and rooms, it is not necessary to admonish, but for the information of those not having knowledge of the facts, I will say briefly that the work is often shamefully obstructed for lack of room for patients, and proper accommodations for the medical staff, and that those immediately charged with the care of the sufferers are put to their wits end to provide for the most pressing cases.

There are some funds in hand which may be used for this purpose, and the managing committee will shortly offer suggestions for its expenditure, but the amount falls far short of what is needed, and I call the attention of persons of large means and the disposition to support this charity, to the necessity for great generosity.

In my judgment there is nothing before us at the present moment at all comparable in importance with the necessity for a larger and more assured annual income from regular subscriptions. The work cannot stand still, it must go on, the cause is most worthy, and in view of the large amount of work done and good accomplished the expenditures are most conservative. The burden of support falls heavily on no one person, nor on any one set of persons, and I can conceive of no more satisfactory method of exercising that charity laid upon us as a command by our Divine Master. I suggest that the finance committee shall institute an active canvass for annual subscriptions, and present the subject to many of our fellow citizens who have not as yet seen light on this important matter.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONFERENCE.

The Union County C. E. Union to Hold Its Annual Meeting Thursday Night.

The annual conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will be held on Thursday evening in the Greystone Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth. There are over 2,000 Christian Endeavorers in the county, and it is anticipated that there will be a large gathering of delegates from all sections.

The conference will be of unusual interest. There will be the annual reports of the departments, and President Matthews will make his address. The outline of the State Convention, which will be held in this city in October, will be given, and the annual election of officers will take place.

The address will be by Rev. George A. Francis, of Westfield, who was a pupil of the late Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, and is an eloquent speaker.

The music will be a pleasant feature, and will be under the direction of the choir of the Greystone church. The badge banner will be awarded to the society having the largest percentage of its active members present.

The anniversary will close with a consecration service, to be led by Rev. Dr. Kerr, of the Third Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth.

BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS.

Escort From G. A. R. at the Funeral of Ex-Mayor Ryder, of Elizabeth.

The funeral of ex-Mayor and ex-Sheriff Seth B. Ryder took place yesterday from his late home on Salem street in Elizabeth. The services were conducted by Rev. Henry A. Mackubben, of Westminster church, assisted by Rev. George Miller, of Little Falls, who was a private in Captain Ryder's company. All the leading officials of the town and county were present. The casket was draped with the American flag, and on top of it were the sword, belt and hat of the dead veteran. The Veteran Zouaves and Dahlgren Post acted as an escort to the cemetery.

Transfer of Remains.

The remains and tombstone of Abraham Coriell, great grandfather of Wallace and Richard Coriell, of this city, who died September 22d, 1828, in the 91st year of his age, were moved to Evergreen cemetery Monday by Truckman L. B. Coddington. The stone is a very old one of brown color, and began to scale. It was removed from the private plot on the Coriell estate to allow the stone to be repaired.

A Dinner to Witnesses.

Drs. E. W. and B. VanD. Hedges gave a dinner Monday evening at the Arena, West Thirty-first street, New York, to the witnesses who testified for them in the recent case of Benner against Hedges. Covers were spread for nine, and those present had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

ANCHOR LODGE'S BIG TIME.

Visited by the Grand Officers of the Masons Last Night.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., held a regular communication last evening at which time the Grand Lodge officers of this State were present. The third degree was worked in a highly creditable manner on one candidate. Special mention is made of the instrumental music on the organ by Victor Beyer, of New York, a well-known organist. During the evening speeches were made by the visitors and a sumptuous repast was served by Anchor Lodge.

The Grand Lodge officers present included the following: G. W. Fortmeyer, M. W. G. M.; J. E. Moore, R. W. S. G. W.; Thomas H. R. Redway, R. W. G. S.; Rev. Henry A. Greisemer, R. W. G. C.; Elmer E. Smith, W. J. G. D.; J. A. Parker, David George, W. S. G. S.; Luther S. Skillman, W. G. T.; W. F. Burke, R. W. D. D. G. M., Third District; Edwin Venable, R. W. D. D. G. M., Fourth District; J. H. Wilkins, R. W. D. D. G. M., Sixth District; B. F. Wakefield, R. W. D. D. G. M., Seventh District; Alton H. Sherman, R. W. D. D. G. M., Ninth District; W. J. Hamilton, P. D. D. G. M.; William A. Freeman, P. D. D. G. M.; F. O. Herring, P. D. D. G. M.; Robert Moore, M. W. P. G. M.

There were about 300 Masons present from all parts of the State.

ANOTHER BUSINESS SUSPENSION.

W. J. Tunison Disposes of His Business Instead of Assigning.

The recent hard times are to blame for the closing out of another of Plainfield's well known business men, Watson J. Tunison, who has kept a flour and feed store on Watchung ave. under the Crescent flats. When he found that it was necessary to bring his business to an end he preferred, instead of making an assignment, to sell out.

Last Saturday he disposed of his entire business, stock, book accounts and all to the Plainfield Produce Company and yesterday the latter company took possession. They will not assume any of Mr. Tunison's liabilities, however.

Mr. Tunison has left town for the present and is going west, but says that he will earn enough to pay his creditors every cent he owes them.

The Plainfield Produce Company formerly kept a store in the building now occupied by the Jersey Wheel Company, but sold out its business about four years ago to L. A. Hummer. A. D. Thompson is president of the company and H. E. Rider, secretary and treasurer.

SUIT FOR A BREACH OF CONTRACT.

But the Jury Could Not Agree and the Case Will Be Re-tried.

The case of Pearson against Bohl was tried before Justice Newcorn and a twelve-men jury yesterday afternoon. The action was brought to recover $25 and damages for breach of contract in the erection of a house. The house was to have been completed April 1st, 1895, and the defendant claims it was finished all but the painting, but the plaintiff claims it was not. After a three hours' deliberation by the jury they were unable to agree, and the case will come up again for trial on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Lawyer Runyon appeared for Bohl and Lawyer Angleman appeared for Pearson.

The following men composed the jury: J. W. Pierce, C. M. Fine, Edward Baker, G. W. Rockafellow, Jr., Omer C. Moore, David VanBoskerck, Charles Glaentzer, Firman Godown, Joseph Miner, Victor Christoffersen, George Vroom, Andrew Mattis.

Ladies' Aid Society Elect.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church was held yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. The reports of the old officers showed that the society was in excellent condition and had done a great deal of work during the past year. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. E. C. Gambling; directoresses, Mrs. L. B. Borgan and Mrs. L. C. Batson; treasurer, Mrs. E. M. Laing; secretary, Mrs. B. T. Barnes.

Last Meeting Till Fall.

The Parliamentary club will meet tomorrow morning in the Y. M. C. A. building for the last time till the second Thursday in October. Papers will be read on art by Mrs Cooley and Mrs. Henry McGee. There will also be papers on foreign affairs by Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Eaton, Miss Bessie Brower and Mrs. J. D. Titsworth.

Faking News to Receive Attention.

Official action will probably be taken at the Borough Council meeting Friday evening, June 5th, in regard to the untruthful and malicious story published in the News about the recent alleged gambling in the borough.

Got Off Easy.

An Italian named Frank Fresio was arrested for being disorderly on West Fourth street yesterday. Sentence was suspended on him this morning.

MONEY ISSUE SUPREME.

NEW JERSEY REPUBLICAN'S DO NOT LIKE M'KINLEY'S STRADDLE.

Republican Leaders Would Like to See Some Straightout Man Put Up—As Time Passes McKinley Sentiment Dwindles.

The sentiment in New Jersey for McKinley is not as strong as it was at the time of the State Convention, says the New York Times. The wisdom in leaving the delegation to St. Louis uninstructed is now being appreciated. Only eight delegates have expressed themselves positively for McKinley.

If McKinley is nominated he cannot carry New Jersey. The State is naturally Democratic in a National election, no matter what is the issue. Cleveland in 1892 received a plurality of 14,074, as against 7,525 for George T. Werts, the Democratic candidate for Governor, and a popular man. The Republibans now admit that they can cary the State only by hard work. The Democrats have been successful in two of the largest cities.

The Republicans have begun to quarrell over the distribution of the offices in the gift of the Governor, while the Democracy is coming together fast under the new organization of the State Committee, which has brought together all the extreme elements. The Jersey City and Newark elections indicate a return of the dissatisfied Democrats.

The fights during the last eight years have been made on the high protective issues, because New Jersey is an industrial and agricultural State. With McKinley typifying the highest kind of protection, the result will be found to be no different.

The question of a money standard bothers all classes. The State is decidedly for gold. Both parties agree on this. New Jersey is largely influenced by New York and Philadelphia. In the populous sections the money question is the chief issue. In the counties above Mercer, the decline of McKinley is due to the doubts and suspicions of the people who are in touch with the New York money centre. In Union and Essex counties, where many of the prominent industrial operators of New York have their homes, there is a regular slump in McKinley stock.

The farmers are not so pronounced in their expressions. There are some few silverites in the State, mostly among those who still adhere to the Populist party, but in many of the local Granges, and even in the State Grange, there have been declarations favorable to the gold standard.

All the prominent Democrats claim that McKinley cannot carry New Jersey, and the leading Republican politicians like Gen. William J. Sewell, John Kean, Congressman Loudenslager, Senator Voorhees, and Congressman Gardner would rather see some one else named.

CAPTURED AND RELEASED.

Young Burke Arraigned Before Justice Nash For Theft of Money.

Joseph Burke, the young man who stole $13.50 from the safe at E. E. Marshall's wall-paper store, last Saturday afternoon, was caught yesterday afternoon on West Fourth street, by C. W. Runyon, who happened to see him pass.

He was taken before Justice Nash, who issued the warrant for his arrest, and committed to the station. This morning he was given a hearing before Justice Nash, who released the boy on his own recognizance in the sum of $50. This action was taken owing to sympathy for the boy.

Incidents of a Bicycle Trip.

Thomas Muir, Frank Marsh and John Maher, three well-known young men of the West End, rode to New York Sunday on their wheels. While there seeing the sights, Marsh mistook a trolley car for an ice-cream saloon and ran into it. He escaped injury. Maher ran into and knocked down a peddler of shoe-laces and narrowly escaped arrest thereby. When the three arrived home, Muir attempted to mount his wheel and in doing so badly damaged it that it had to be taken to the repair shop. The three think they had a good time as each one helped to make the day a memorable one.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

RUSSIA'S GREAT DAY

Brilliant Closing of the Festivities at Moscow.

CROWNING OF THE CZAR AND CZARINA

Imposing Ceremonies, Magnificent Sights and Touching Scenes at the Cathedral of the Assumption—Americans Who Were Present.

Moscow, May 27.—Nicolas Alexandrovitch was yesterday crowned emperor of all the Russias with the most gorgeous ceremonies the world has ever seen. In the Cathedral of Assumption the church was a blaze of gold and silver. The ornate richness of the cathedral, the splendor of the uniforms, the gleam of jewels, the assembled beauty of the empire, the glories of the vestments, the magnificent singing, and the clouds of incense bearing heavenward the many prayers, indelibly impressed the minds of those present that they were witnessing the most splendid of worldly functions. The thrones of the czar and czarina were in the center of the church. The czar's throne was the ancient throne of Michael Feodorowitch. It was covered with purple velvet and set with rubies and turquoises. The back was of gold. That of the czarina was the famous ivory throne.

American Representatives Present.

The most gorgeously attired of all those present was the shakur of Gondal and his wife, the maharonse of Gondal, who wore Indian costumes of green and red silk splangled with gems and gold and silver ornaments. They presented a scene of barbaric magnificence such as western eyes have seldom seen. At 8 o'clock the royal doors in the icohostas were opened and the metropolitans emerged. The entrance was lined with bishops and priests. As the procession moved a choir of bass voices and a single high soprano began singing a Te Deum. The cathedral was filled at 8:50 o'clock. All the diplomats and their wives were present, except the Turkish ambassador, who, being a Moslem, was not permitted by the tenets of his faith to enter a Christian church. The Hon. Clifton R. Breckenridge, the American minister, wore a full court suit. Gen. McCook, special representative of the American government, and Admiral Selfridge were in the full dress uniform of their rank.

Arrival of the Czar and Czarina.

At 9:10 o'clock loud shouts were heard ouuside the kremlin and a band began to play the national anthem. This announced the approach of the mother of the czar. A long line of gentlemen of the chamber preceded the metropolitans and priests and escorted her to the throne. She wore a court dress, over which was an ermine robe, and on her head was a diamond crown. The metroplitans then approached the southern door and blessed the insignia, which, borne in state, were placed on embroidered cushions on a table near the thrones. Shortly afterwards shouts again rent the air outside the cathedral, mingled with the booming of guns, the pealing of bells, and the swelling tones of the national anthem, all announcing the approach of the czar and czarina. At 10 o'clock their majesties entered the church, and as they did so the guards about the dais and on the steps saluted with their swords.

A Charming Scene.

The czar was in the uniform of the Preobrajansky regiment. The czarina was attired in a silver-corded gown, with a red sash across her breast. Their majesties were preceded by the metropolitans bearing a cross, holy water and a sacred icon. Both ascended the steps of the iconostas unattended and kissed the sacred icons on either side of the royal doors. Then, attended by a brilliant throng of generals, they turned from the iconostas and mounted the dais, where they stood in front of the thrones. The czarina was bare headed, and two curls fell upon her neck. Her cheeks were flushed with excitement and she looked charmingly beautiful. The scene was one that would have delighted an artist. Everything was in absolute harmony and the effect was magnificent. The gorgeous cathedral, the red covered tribunes filled with uniformed men on one side and ladies in gowns of blue, red, green and yellow on the other, the gold and purple dais, the rich baldachin under which the czar and czarina stood facing the picture laden iconostas, crowded before which in golden robes and jeweled mitres were the clergy, made a scene that will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

Recited the Creed.

The metropolitan then held the prayer book while his majesty in a voice that was everywhere audible in the church recited the creed, all those present crossing themselves as he did so. The metropolitan of St. Petersburg then blessed the czar and czarina, both humbly bowing their heads. After the blessing the metropolitan, who is an old white-bearded ecclesiastic, read an epistle from the Gospels in a feeble voice. Two metropolitans and their aides then assisted the czar to adorn the imperial mantle. His majesty then assumed the gorgeous diamond collar of the sovereign of the order of St. Andrew, as he did so the aged metropolitan said: "In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, amen."

Autocrat of All the Russias.

The metropolitan of St. Petersburg then blessed the crown and handed it to the czar, who firmly placed it upon his head. He then grasped in his right hand the sceptre of state and in his left the orb of the empire, all present bowing and crossing themselves. Crowed and holding the sceptre of a mighty empire the autocrat of all the Russias stood the cynosure of all eyes. The thundering of guns and the deep clanging of many bells gave the signal outside that the coronation of the czar was an accomplished fact. The word spread everywhere and men everywhere crossed themselves and prayed for "Badwshka." St. Petersburg and the remote parts of the empire were in touch with Moscow, and throughout the Russian dominions prayer ascended for the "great white czar."

Crowned His Wife and Tenderly Kissed Her

The emperor took his seat upon his throne, still holding the sceptre and orb. Then placing these emblems of power on a table he arose and turned to the czarina, who knelt before him on a velvet cushion, and placed on her head her own crown. He bent over and spoke to her and then took her hand and assisted her to rise. He tenderly kissed her, after which they both took their seats on their thrones. An archdeacon then proclaimed the many titles of the czar. The czarina serene and calm, and beloved by her adopted people, sat beside her august husband, whose throne she will beautify. Strong in innocence and womanly power she will be a potent factor to sustain him. Never was a queen more queenly, nor a woman more womanly, and the woman and wife predominate despite her regalness.

A Moving Sight.

After the crowning of the czarina the choir sang the "Salvum Fac Mari." While the singing was going on the dowager empress went to her son and kissed him four times and whispered something to him. She then kissed the czarina twice. The tears of the dowager czarina were near the surface. It was certainly a moving sight to witness the affectionate greetings which emphasized the domestic and sweet side of the imperial family. The immediate members of the czar's family also kissed him and the czarina. These greetings occupied twenty minutes, after which the emperor's prayer was said by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, who subsequently blessed the imperial couple. The services progressed with singing and prayers, the emperor standing.

The Closing Scenes.

The czar entered the iconostes, where no women are allowed to enter, the doors were closed and he partook of the communion. In five minutes the doors were opened and through them the czar could be seen kissing the metropolitans. The empress partook of the communion standing at an opening in the iconostas. Both then again ascended the dais and kissed the dowager czarina, who advanced to meet them. The metropoltan of St. Petersburg then mounted the dais bearing a jewelled cross, which the czar and czarina kissed. Finally the imperial couple emerged from the Cathedral of the Annunciation and walked to the Red Stairs amid the frantic cheering of the multitude.

THE MICHIGAN CYCLONE.

Later Reports Confirm the Appalling News of Loss of Life Received Yesterday.

Oxford, Mich., May 27.—The disastrous cyclone in this vicinity caused more loss of life than was at first believed possible, as many houses even on the edge of the storm were demolished and the inmates killed. It is now believed that fully one hundred persons met death in this part of Oakland county. The path of the storm was about three-quarters of a mile wide and thirty miles long, extending in a nearly straight course from the westward to the eastward.

Will Ask for Nerney's Arrest.

Pawtucket, R. I., May 27.—Deputy Sheriff Brown of Attleboro, after a conference in this city yesterday afternoon with the families of Michael Connors, jr., and Daniel F. Mountain, who were shot and killed last Sunday by Officer Nerney, left for New Bedford to make formal application to District Attorney Jennings for a warrant for the arrest of Officer Nerney of Attleboro on the charge of murdering the two men.

Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington, May 27.—The senate has confirmed the nomination of John Fowler of Massachusetts to be consul at Chefoo, China, and the following postmasters: Rhode Island—A. H. Cunningham, East Providence. New Jersey—A. W. Dey, Asbury Park; A. A. Clark, Somerville.

Advance in Price of Salt Cake.

New York, May 27.—It is announced that owing to recent advances in the prices of raw materials the manufacturers of glassmakers' salt cake have again been compelled to advance their price accordingly, to take effect early in June.

Killed by Lightning.

Elora, Ont., May 27.—John McLeod, a farmer living near here, was killed by lightning last night. His barns were burned and live stock killed.

SILVER IS THE ISSUE

Prohibitionists Will Grapple with the Subject at Pittsburg.

CONVENTION OPENS THERE TO-DAY

Bentley Insists on a White Metal Plank and Woman Suffrage—Levering Will Consent To No Other Issue Than Prohibition.

Pittsburg, May 27.—Just before the meeting of the prohibition national convention to-day the chief issue to be raised was declared openly and without qualification by the leaders of the two wings of the party. Each of the chief candidates for nomination was seen by the United Press representatives this morning. Mr. Bentley of Nebraska, the so-called "broad-gauge" champion, declared that without a free silver plank in the platform and an endorsement of woman suffrage he would not run on it. Mr. Levering of Maryland, the "narrow-gauge" man, asserted in equally positive terms that he would not consent to be the champion of the party unless the issue were confined to the one question of prohibition, leaving out all others, and ex-Gov. St. John of Kansas asserted that without positive declaration for free silver the party would not receive in any western state one-sixth of the support it would otherwise claim. Collateral issues are being raised by the "reform party," which held a meeting last evening and expects to exercise considerable influence on the convention. Prof. Seelye of Wooster, O., was elected permanent chairman of the national reform party, and H. E. Cole of Pittsburg, permanent secretary. A committee on resolutions was appointed.

Prohibition First, Then Free Silver.

Helen Gougar addressed the delegates of the new party. She scored both old parties, picturing "the apostle of protection" (McKinley) dramatically as plating the first sheet of tin at Piqua, and characterizing him as the demagogue leader who planned the whole tin mill scheme for the deception of voters, the great Tenescal mine, which the tariff was to benefit, having subsequently been sold for $5 and a mule. She claimed that the foreign syndicate saloon was the cradle of both the republican and the democratic parties, and that national policies were dominated by rum-bred voters. The only hope for the country, she said, in her opinion, was first in prohibition and then in free silver; and the sooner both were allied the better for every one. She held that the currency had been contracted in the face of increasing population and enlarging business. "Scarce dollars," she said, "make dear dollars, and dear dollars make cheap produce, low wages and idleness. Idleness made poverty and vice and crime; and the United States was the most criminal nation on the face of the earth. The motto of the prohibition party was: 'No liquor, no licker, no dicker.' The party," she continued, "was pronounced dead and buried every four years, but its powers of resurrection were the wonder and admiration of partisans."

Substance of the Platform.

Mrs. Gougar declared that a vast number of prohibitionists had come to the conclusion that it was as necessary for people to get something to eat as to be prevented from drinking, and that plenty of money was as essential as closed saloons. When delegates were kept away from a prohibition convention by gold bug, sound money Cleveland-Mammon-Carlisle-Sherman-McKinley rings, it was time to make declarations broad enough to include woman suffrage, land, money and prohibition. Mrs. Gougar had her audience with her and evoked enthusiasm. The platform of the convention pledges the new party to free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1, and embodies the delegates certificates, which form the fundamental planks of the platform.

Gov. Morton's First Veto.

Albany, May 27.—Gov. Morton has just vetoed his first bill for the present year. It was that of Assemblyman Cutler's which makes an appropriation of $50,000 to establish a normal school in Ramapo, Rockland county. The governor says there does not seem to be any apparent necessity for the establishment of another school at present.

Texas Democrats Split on Money.

Galveston, Tex., May 27.—Political circles in Texas were astonished by the withdrawal of ex-Gov. Roberts from the gubernatorial race. The "sound money" democrats bolted from the silverites and both factions will put out candidates for the governorship.

Essex at Havre.

Havre, May 27.—The United States training ship Essex has arrived here.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? MILLER TALKS BACK Severely Arraigns Platt for His Attacks on McKinley.

HAS INJURED MORTON'S CHANCES

The Buffalo Interview Substantially Correct—Platt, He Says, Is Only Furnishing Campaign Ammunition for the Democrats.

New York, May 27.—Former senator Warner Miller has given out the following statement to the press: "My attention has been called to a statement in the Buffalo Express of Tuesday of last week, purporting to be my views upon the political situation in the state. I only returned to the city last night, and then saw the Buffalo Express for the first time. The statement is substantially correct, with two or three exceptions. It says that I stated that I was for McKinley. I stated that I was for McKinley after Morton. It also stated that one half or more of the New York delegates would be for McKinley. I did say that one-half, or more, of the delegates would be for McKinley after Morton. I did say that I considered the attack upon McKinley by some leading republicans in this state was outrageous, and I repeat that statement. Mr. Platt in the papers of yesterday returned to his attack upon McKinley 'as a dangerous and misleading candidate.' My opinion regarding McKinley as a candidate and an honorable man has been fully stated by myself and need not be repeated here. But, Mr. Platt adds that 'the organization will make the stoutest fight it ever made for the republican ticket this fall.' If McKinley is nominated it will take all the time from June to November for Mr. Platt to explain to the people of the country why he supports the candidate he has denounced as incompetent and not fit for the office of president.

He Gave No Pledge.

"Platt has all the democratic papers now howling at McKinley and repeating his criticisms of McKinley. The principal campaign documents of the democratic party will be the publication of the denunciations already made by Platt against McKinley. Platt in his criticism of my course as set forth in my interview of the 15th inst. says that I was the first to pronounce for Gov. Morton at the Depew dinner. This statement by Platt demands that I should state some things which transpired at the meeting and previous to it. It matters not whether I was the first to pronounce for Gov. Morton at that dinner or not. The fact is that two or three other gentlemen spoke in favor of the candidacy of Gov. Morton before I gave any expression to my views. Further, a short time before going to that dinner I met Platt at the Fifth Avenue hotel where we were both living. I said to him that it had been reported to me that if the meeting decided to make a candidate of Gov. Morton that we would be expected to give a pledge to vote for Gov. Morton first, last and always, whether there was any hope of nominating him or not, and said that I would give no such pledge. That I would support Gov. Morton squarely and honestly so long as there was any possibility or probability of his nomination, but, after that would take such action as I thought best in my judgment.

Has Injured Morton's Chances.

"Now it is a well known fact among all people who have taken the pains to be informed upon this matter that Mr. Platt has always contemplated the possibility of being compelled to take some other candidate than Mr. Morton. During the past few months whenever the candidacy of Gov. Morton has been discussed it has been admitted that it would be impossible to secure enough delegates outside of the state to nominate him at the beginning and that the only possible hope or chance of nominating him was that, if there came a dead lock in the convention, New York could secure enough votes from those who supported other candidates to make his nomination possible. Under these circumstances I submit that no friend of Gov. Morton's candidacy would attack any other candidate, thereby rendering it impossible in case of a dead lock for us to secure any of the votes of the candidates thus attacked. The true policy of the delegates from New York was to treat every other candidate with courtesy and fairness, for in no other way could we hope for any consideration from them. Mr. Platt by his vicious attacks upon McKinley has made it absolutely impossible under any circumstances for any of the friends of McKinley in the convention to come to the support of Gov. Morton."

Platt Severely Arraigned.

The balance of Mr. Miller's statement is a severe arraignment of Mr. Platt and his political methods. He says that Mr. Platt talks a great deal about the regular organization and what it would do, as though he were the organization, when, in fact, there is but one republican organization in the state, and that must be controlled by the republican voters, and no man should be able to say that he controls it. If McKinley is nominated for president, Mr. Miller says, the party in this state will demand that the members of the state committee be honestly and earnestly in favor of his election. This is a most important matter, Mr. Miller declares, and he promises to take occasion later to call attention to it. Referring to the last legislature, Mr. Miller says that while its personnel was as good as we have had for a long time, and there were many independent men in it, but a majority of them were compelled through fear of Platt to support measures which should not have been passed.

FIFTY PEOPLE DROWNED.

Crowded Traction Car Goes Through a Bridge at Victoria.

Victoria, B. C., May 27.—One of the largest of the Consolidated Railway company's cars crashed through Point Ellice bridge while on its way to a sham battle at Macauley point in celebration of the queen's birthday yesterday afternoon, being at the time loaded to the roof with pleasure seekers. Between fifty and sixty are drowned and not a quarter of this number have been recovered. The work of recovering the bodies is now systematically in hand, but is greatly retarded by the fact that the debris from the bridge has buried the fated car with its many occupants in twenty-five feet of water. The car fell seventy-five feet.

APPEALS TO THE PRESIDENT.

Petition for a Pardon for Capt. Wiborg of the Steamer Horsa.

Philadelphia, May 27.—W. W. Kerr, counsel for Capt. Wiborg of the filibuster steamer Horsa, whose conviction and sentence in this city for violation of the neutrality laws was sustained by the United States supreme court, as announced in these dispatches, has prepared a petition to be presented to President Cleveland asking for a pardon for Capt. Wiborg. The petition, Mr. Kerr says, will be sent all over the United States for signatures. The petition states that Capt. Wiborg was not one of the principals engaged in the transaction, but was only employed as master of the vessel and was under the control and direction of other persons; that a proper construction of the law had never before been determined, that his sentence to sixteen months imprisonment and $300 fine was severe, and under all the circumstances it is asked that executive clemency be extended him. Mr. Kerr expressed his disgust with the treatment that the Hart Steamship company is receiving at the hands of the United States court in Philadelphia and hinted that the company may move its business to New York.

LEAVING FOR THEIR HOMES.

Exodus To-day from Asbury Park of the Visiting Baptists.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 27.—To-day there is a grand exodus of the visiting Baptists who have been here for several days in attendance at the anniversaries, the final session of which was held last evening and was devoted to work among foreigners in America. The first speaker was the Rev. Alexander Blackburn, D. D., of Massachusetts. His subject was "The French Invasion of New England." The Rev. Kerr B. Turner, D. D., of Pennsylvania, spoke on the "Foreigner in America." He gave statistics of the number of foreign born people among us and urged greater efforts in mission work among them. A vote of thanks to Founder Bradley for the use of the Auditorium and other courtesies was passed and the Baptist anniversaries for 1896 were ended.

LIGHT WITHOUT WIRES.

Tesla Perfects His Vacuum Tube for Electrical Lighting.

New York, May 27.—The Electrical Review in its last issue announced by authority that Nikola Tesla had perfected his vacuum tube system of electric lighting without wires, the possibilities of which he first brought to public notice about five years ago in a lecture before the American Institute of Electrical engineers. This light is whiter, more brilliant and more intense than the arc light and is produced with much smaller amount of electrical energy. A laborator photograph has been made by means of this light with an exposure of only two seconds. The detail in the photograph is remarkably fine. Tesla further states that his apparatus has been greatly simplified and he will soon have it ready for practical use.

For Obstructing a Railroad Track.

Laconia, N. H., May 27.—Stephen Vallier was arrested here last evening for obstructing the track of the Mount Washington railroad and officers are after Napoleon Gingras for the same offense. The men were on the top of Mount Washington last week and for sport constructed a large raft of railroad ties, placed it on the track and started it down the mountain.

The Prohibition National Convention will meet today in Pittsburgh. Mr. Bentley, of Nebraska, the "broad-guage" candidate for President, declares that, without a free-silver plank in the platform and an endorsement of woman suffrage, he would not run. Mr. Levering, of Maryland, the "narrow-gauge" man, asserted in equally positive terms that he would not consent to be the champion of the party unless the issue were confined to the one question of prohibition. Ex Gov. St. John, of Kansas, asserted that without a positive declaration for free silver the party would not receive in any Western State one-sixth of the support it could otherwise claim. The brethern need to get together.

Gov. Griggs yesterday appointed as Commissioners to investigate and report on the subject of equal taxation, Charles C. Black, of Jersey City, who is a member of the State Board of Taxation; Gen. James F. Rusling, of Trenton; ex-Senator George H. Large, of Hunterdon county, William H. Vredenburgh, of Freehold; and Abraham M. Reynolds, of Newark, who was formerly a member of the State Board of Assessors. Messrs. Black and Reynolds are Democrats, and the other three Republicans. The Commissioners are appointed in pursuance of a concurrent resolution passed by the recent Legislature, and are to inquire into the whole question of taxation of railroad and canal property. The Commissioners are empowered to summon witnesses and require the production of books and papers, and are to report to the next Legislature with recommendations.

It is said that the Republican State Committee will no doubt organize before they go to the National Convention. That, at least, is the gossip around the headquarters at Newark. It is generally thought that Franklin Murphy will be re-elected chairman, and some think that John Kean will be elected treasurer. Very little is said about the scheme to re-elect Colonel John J Toffey treasurer, although he is not a member of the committee. The fact that references have been made to the precedent that exists in the continuous selection of John Y. Foster, although not a member of the committee, has imperiled that man's office. And there is now a very positive demand made that a successor should also be selected for him. It is argued that he has only been continued in office by grace; has been there a generation, and the fact that he is a pronounced leader in an organization that takes considerable interest in politics from a patriotic standpoint and that he declared and worked against the Republican candidate for Mayor in the recent Mayorality contest has created a general sentiment not only in Essex county, but beyond its borders, for his retirement.

Guild Officers.

The Ladies' Guild of the Church of the Redeemer met yesterday afternoon and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr.; vice president, Mrs. Frank Brown; secretary, Miss Florence Stevens; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Townsend. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Plainfield Produce Company.

The flour, feed and produce business heretofore conducted by W. J. Tunison, on Watchung avenue, has been purchased by the Plainfield Produce Company, of which A.D. Thompson, is president, and H. E. Rider, secretary and treasurer. The company will build up the business on more extensive lines.

WORKING ON THE BRAIN

which college men take with them into their professions. The phenomenal growth of educational work throughout the country in our Associations during the last decade has fully demonstrated the existing need and the great advantage of such instruction. To train young men physically, mentally and spiritually is our aim as a Christian Association, and we labor to render our students such assistance as shall enable them to become more skillful workmen, more successful business men, better citizens, and better men, for all our agencies and methods of Association work has one specific ultimate end in view—the formation and growth of Christian character.

In closing this report your committee wish to put on record their appreciation of the faithful services that have been rendered during the past year by the teachers and their assistants. We believe that our Association, through these educational classes, offers to great numbers of young men in Plainfield substantial privileges at a low cost, that will be of the greatest practical benefit to them if rightly improved. To bring these advantages to the attention of a larger number and to enlist more scholars for next year's work is our purpose, and we especially invite those in Plainfield who employ young men to aid us in this endeavor, believing that the gain to employers and to their employes will be mutual. On behalf of the committee.

The association recently appointed a committee to interview its members on this subject.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

WITH THE STUDENTS.

Little Happenings of Interest Among the High School Scholars.

There are no handicaps allowed to the lower classes over the senior class and therefore the members of the Fourth, Third and Junior classes have to compete with the seniors on an equal basis for the essay prize. Several members of the lower classes are working very hard to win the prize and as the senior class does not contain all the literary talent of the school, it will not be surprising to see the prize go to one of the members of a lower class.

Members of the High School will be pleased to hear of the improved condition of Volney F. Green, of the class of '96. He has been confined to his home on East Fifth street for the past two weeks with a severe illness.

Yesterday morning Charles Noble rendered a declamation entitled "The Horse chestnut Bud." Felix Layat is on the list to declame in a few days.

The regular drill, both of the boys' and girls' companies, will be held next Thursday morning at nine o'clock, weather permiting. The week's drill will take the place of the third recitation of the day. The boys' company will pay especial attention to platoon movements in preparation for the parade on Decoration Day.

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Mary Hull, of Sing Sing, is visiting her mother, Mrs. W Slape.

Mrs. Abbott has returned home after a visit with relatives in Somerville.

Some mean thief entered the barn of Joel Giddis Saturday night and stole a bag of feed.

Mrs. Walter Apgar has returned home after an extended visit with friends in New York and Newark.

Samuel Dennick, of California, is home on an extended visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Dennick.

Miss Cecelia Syers, of Sheepshead Bay, is visiting her grandfather, John McCall, at the residence of Constable Warden, of Lincoln avenue.

Miss Stella Eike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Eike, who has been ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, for the last few weeks, has returned home much improved in health.

Several new sets of books have been added to the Methodist Sunday-school library, which were purchased from the money raised at the ice cream and strawberry festival held recently.

Sanitarium to Open June 1st.

The Daily Press has received a letter from R. E. Townsend, president of the Townsend Sanitarium, stating that the institution will open June 1st. Mr. Townsend says that it will be the first sanitarium ever instituted for the sole treatment of consumptive patients, and a guarantee will be given every patient that enters that they will be cured, though none in the advanced stage of the disease will be accepted. The managers have issued a neat circular describing the treatment and also containing a number of views of the Sanitarium.

To Assist a Missionary.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will give a missionary entertainment Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The proceeds of the collection will be sent to Miss Rachael Mair, Plainfield's missionary in Africa. Any friend of Miss Mair wishing to contribute, can do so through the superintendent, Mrs. J.O. EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—John L. Force has completed putting electric fans in the store of S. Schauer & Co.

—All bills against the city must be in the hands of the City Clerk by tomorrow evening.

—Jed Smalley, of Somerset street, has purchased a new runabout from J. P. Homan, the carriage-maker.

—The annual excursion of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school to Asbury Park will take place Thursday, July 30th.

—William T. Kirk, the contractor, started this morning the work of erecting the fire tower in the rear of Warren engine house.

—A special service will be held in the Baptist church at Scotch Plains next Sunday evening, at which time R. W. Barnes and W. Frazee will assist.

—Lyman R. Allen, the science teacher at the High School, will take his physics class to the First Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon to examine the organ.

—Engine Company, No. 2, will take their engine out for a wash this evening, and tomorrow evening the Hook and Ladder Company will take the truck out for a drill.

—A reception will be given to Rev. E. M. Rodman, D. D., and family at the chapel of Grace P. E. church on next Monday evening. The choir is practicing special music for that occasion.

—Edward Brown, of Cranford, aged fifteen years, is at the Jersey City Hospital suffering with lockjaw, caused by running a rusty nail in his foot one day last week. His recovery is doubtful.

—Great preparations are being made for the annual field day of the Knights Templar of this State which will be held in this city the first week in October. There is some talk of having a clam bake on Johnston's drive.

—At the regular meeting of Minerva Temple, R. S., last evening, a favorable report of progress was received from the anniversary committee. Three members were voted two weeks sick benefits at $3 each per week. A special meeting will be called early next week.

—Dr. L. S. Pocock, the veterinary surgeon, was called to the home of Mrs. Warren Ackerman, of Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock to look after a valuable horse which had been injured while working in a power press. When the doctor arrived he found an ugly cut in the animal's right flank, and the blood was flowing profusely. As quickly as possible the doctor took the necessary stitches in the break and thus saved the life of the horse.

THE FIGHT BEGUN

Elder McDougall Opens the Attack on the Mission Boards.

ASKS SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS

The Subject Was Not To Have Been Touched Until To-morrow, But the "Fighting Elder" Could Not Be Restrained.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 28.—Although it was agreed by the Presbyterian general assembly yesterday to postpone consideration of the resolutions in regard to the Presbyterian house in New York until to-morrow, Thursday, Elder McDongall could not restrain himself, and during the discussion of the report on home missions began his attack on the board's management of the now much talked about structure. Considerable excitement was caused when he called upon the committee to inform the general assembly on certain points of the debts of the boards. He read the statement of the treasury when the total current debt was set down as $299,000. He wanted to know if that was the entire indebtedness, or whether there were other iterms of indebtedness. He then turned to the schedule of permanent funds of the boards and asked: "Are these all?" Waiting a moment very dramatically for an answer, he read item twenty-four in Mrs. Stuart's will, whereby the two mission boards are given joint shares in the residue of her estate, the funds to be invested permanently by the boards. He also read the report of the two boards showing the receipt of $610,000 at different times from the Stuart legacy. "No reference to these sums," he said, "appears in the list of permanent funds; they are not listed anywhere in the report or assets. Where are they?" He then showed that the interest due on the sums received from the Stuart legacy to May 1, 1896, amounted to $375,000. "Who received this interest?" he asked. "Or, has it been received? If not received, who owes it? Whose assets is it, and whose debt? What is the real condition of the Stuart legacy? What interest is it earning and where is it invested?" He then started to show that $467,000 of the legacy was invested in the mission house.

Could Not Shut Him Off.

At the mention of the new mission house, Dr. John R. Davies jumped to his feet with an objection, stating that he had received pledges from Mr. McDougall that the matter of the mission house investment was not to be raised at this time. He called upon Elder McDougall to respect these pledges in the interest of peace. Dr. Davies' words were greeted with a long continued demonstration of approval in the assembly. Elder McDougall faced the fire of applause without a tremor. He attempted to speak, but the applause drowned his voice. Again he raised his hand; then the applause burst out anew. The moderator attempted to interfere, but Mr. McDougall's voice was heard above the roar: "Have patience, Mr. Moderator, have patience." At length he continued, explaining that he was exercising a duty as a commissioner, as he was sworn to do, to inquire into the details of whatever came before him. He said: "No man has a monopoly of peace, and no man has a right to lecture another on peace. It is understood by some that I have grown horns; but I look to this committee, as the people of the Presbyterian church will look to it, to explain what has become of the Stuart legacy. The largest givers in the Presbyterian church are waiting for your answer." Elder McDougall's speech was greeted with applause.

Unitarians in Session.

Boston, May 27.—The seventy-first anniversary of the American Unitarian association was opened in Tremont temple yesterday with 1,000 people present from various parts of the country. Ex-Gov. Long, the president, was too ill to be present and Horace Wadlin presided and welcomed the guests in a brief speech. Rev. Geo. Batchelor, the secretary, in his report stated that there are about 450 churches in the association and that the leaders in Unitarianism are in demand all over the country.

Raines Law Decision Unanimous.

Albany, May 27.—The decision by which the Raines law was yesterday declared constitutional by the court of appeals was unanimous, Judge Andrews writing the decision and all concurring. The case was a test brought to the court for a review of the action of excise board of New York city in refusing to renew an expired license for one year. The court refused to review it.

Struck an Iceberg.

St. Johns, N. F., May 27.—The British brigantine Emrys, bound for Harbor Grace with salt from Cadiz, struck an iceberg Monday night and carried away her bowsprit, cutwater, rigging, bulwarks and part of her keel. She reached port in almost a sinking condition.

Sunken Cargo Recovered.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 27.—The Boston Towboat company has succeeded in recovering 200 tons of the cargo of waterpipe from the schooner Enterprise recently sunk in Nantucket sound. The greater part of the pipe is in good condition.

In Memory of Frederick Douglass.

Rochester, N. Y. May 27.—Services in memory of the late Frederick Douglass will be held at his grave at Mt. Hope, Memorial Day afternoon. The services will consist of prayer and singing and an address by Rev. Clarence A Barbour.

A QUESTION OF VISION.

Incidents Which Go to Show That Mind and Not Eye Sees.

It is an admitted fact that the eye is the "organ of vision," yet there is but little doubt, even in the minds of opticians and physiologists, that the phenomenon of "seeing" is chiefly mental—in other words, that it is the mind and not the eye that "sees."

How often have you seen a friend who, seemingly, was engaged in looking intently on some object on the table, at the opposite side of the room, or at some picture, who, on being aroused from his day dream, would confess that he was "looking at nothing in particular." The explanation of the fact that he saw "nothing in particular" is plain enough if properly set forth. It was because his mind was busy with other times and scenes.

Faces, bits of wayside scenery, and the like, were being presented to view in the panorama of the mind, and the "mind's eye"—or mental vision—was engaged in eagerly scanning pictures of impressions made thereon months, years or scores of years before. Again, if you want to know whether your companion looked at his watch with his brain or his eyes, ask him the time of day after he puts the timepiece in his pocket.

PREPARED FOR EMERGENCIES.

Young Man Who Got a Clerkship in Anticipation of His Prodigality.

Here is a story that one of the southern members vouches for, according to the Washington Post. A young man, one of his constituents, applied to him for a $1,000 clerkship. The member secured the appointment, but the day before the constituent was to be sworn in he came to his representative in a troubled state of mind and said:

"Colonel, I have had $125,000 left me by an aunt, and, my God! just think what I have to go through again."

"Let me congratulate you," said the representative.

"No, don't do that," said the constituent; "you don't know what you're congratulating me on."

"Yes, I do," said the member, "for now you can live without working."

"Colonel," said the distressed young man, "I may as well tell you. Several years ago I had $100,000 left me by another aunt and it took me nearly a year to spend it. After I got through I had to go to the hospital for six months to get over the effects of my dissipation. The reason I came to see you to-day was to ask you to keep that place for me until I can spend this money."

A Slight Difference.

"Well, Mrs. Parslow, I suppose you are doing as many other ladies do nowadays, taking lessons on the bicycle?"

"No, Mr. Johnson, I am not. All the lessons I have had so far have been off the bicycle, but I hope soon to take them on it, as you suggest."—Harper's Bazar.

GOLD BRICKS.

Robbery of Life as Well as Money.

One of the Worst of Modern Swindles—Stones for Sufferers Who Want Bread.

If a doctor should prescribe candy and other sweets for each young girl who came under his professional care, he would probably be called, by these patients at least, "an elegant doctor."

If your child was desperately ill, and you knew that only some nauseous mixture would effect a cure, you certainly would not hesitate to give it, simply because of its taste. Suppose the druggist would think only of pleasing your child and should give you some mixture of honey, only labeling it with the name of the disagreeable remedy! What would you think of such a man? You would say he was willing to risk the life of the child simply for the sake of pleasing.

We all know what wonderful power cod-liver oil has over a number of diseases. It is also well known that no human skill can completely remove all its peculiar taste. Yet there are a few unscrupulous manufacturers who are so anxious to have a perfectly "tasteless" mixture, that they will leave out the cod-liver oil. They label their bottles as some "tasteless cod-liver oil," and yet there is not a particle of oil present. That is why it is tasteless. They believe you have confidence in their statements, and so are perfectly willing to deceive you if only they can sell their goods. Is such a course anything but a criminal one?

A perfectly tasteless preparation of cod-liver oil cannot be made. We have been making emulsions for twenty years, and we can speak with authority. The nearest approach to it is found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. This preparation contains the very best cod-liver oil with nearly all the fishy taste removed. Only a trace of it remains: enough to be detected, but not enough to make the mixture disagreeable even to the most sensitive stomach. This is why sick people find no trouble in taking Scott's Emulsion, and it also explains why so many persons recover their health under its use.

Nearly twenty-five years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion discovered a process of emulsifying or partially digesting cod-liver oil, so as to remove from it almost entirely its obnoxious fishy taste and smell, and at the same time increasing its food and remedial properties. They found also that by combining the Hypophosphites with it that they added still further to its power.

Since that time thousands of imitations have come into the field, but the original has never been equalled in its great strengthening, healing and flesh producing powers. The medical profession have obtained results from it probably unequalled by any other remedial agent.

MY STRANGE PATIENT.

By William T. Nichols

[Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Co.]

Arching the neck he left to the younger and less philosophical of his kind; his head was carried as low as that of the oldest and most decrepit plow horse in the town. He was free from the vice of stumbling, yet often seemed to threaten to lose his footing on the slightest provocation. A high knee-action was foreign to his notions, and his ordinary trot was a mere shuffle. Yet he covered ground surprisingly, even when apparently only lounging along. His only serious fault, from a practical point of view, was a hard mouth, which sometimes made it no easy task to pull him in after one of our spurts.

We were jogging along toward the village one day, when I heard a sharp patter of hoofs behind me, and soon Dr. Banks' clever little mare drew up alongside the dark bay.

"Good morning, Morris," her owner called out, in his cheery voice, which had done as much for his patients as half his prescriptions.

"Fine day, doctor," I shouted back to him.

"Very professional-looking nag you've got there," he continued. "Will stand without hitching, I'll be bound."

"He answers my purpose well enough," I responded, rather stiffly, for after awhile jokes about one's horse, no matter how well intentioned, lose the charm of novelty.

"Pity he hasn't more speed," said the other, and, with a twitch of the reins, he shot his mare a couple of lengths ahead. It was probably his scheme to trot a hundred yards or so and then pull up to watch in triumph my tardy approach. When he looked over his shoulder, however, the bay's head was close to his wheel. Much surprised, and no less disappointed, he brought his animal down to a walk, a proceeding which I promptly imitated.

"I've been wanting to have a talk with you, Morris," he said. "It has struck me that we might cooperate a little to our mutual advantage."

A week saw him practically out of danger.

"Indeed?" said I, wondering what might be in the old gentleman's mind.

"The fact is, I'm getting ancient," he went on.

"Not a bit of it," said I. "You're in your prime, fair, plump, and forty."

"Deny the first, admit the second, and make the third half as much again," said he. "I'm not broken down—and I don't want to be before my time. That's just the point. This last winter gave me a warning. Besides, I've enough to live on, and I'd like to have a little chance for play after 40 years of work. I want to travel a bit, to see something of this big country of ours. I'm like a mole that knows his particular garden by heart, but has hardly a notion of what may be on the other side of the fence. The long and short of it is, I'd like to shift my heavy work to younger shoulders, which will bear it more easily, and, I dare say, better."

"Not better," said I.

"The fact is, as you've probably discovered, this town is hardly big enough to support two doctors comfortably. It has seemed to me that we might make some arrangement which would be advantageous to both of us. There's a young chap in Trent who is trying to dicker with me, but I've put him off, for you're first on the ground, and I don't believe in making two people sleep in a bed that's large enough for only one. By the way, though, am I right in supposing that you've decided to remain here permanently? That would make a difference, of course."

"I can't say that I have any settled plans," said I, "but there's no expectation of moving immediately."

"Well, think it over. There's no hurry about it," he answered; and, chirruping to his mare, away he rattled toward the village.

I followed slowly in his wake, letting the bay choose his own gait. Dr. Banks' proposition had taken me by surprise; moreover, it had served to rouse me to a realization of the completeness with which my future was subject to the caprices of fate. For the present, to be sure, there was no cause for anxiety; but a week might change the situation completely. Suppose Lamar should choose to depart; there was no certainty that he would not leave me behind. Suppose he should die; it was hardly probable that I should profit by any bequest. Suppose his enemies should discover his retreat and descend upon him; the result, so far as I was concerned, would be the same. This last danger seemed to be the least imminent of the three, but it was as well to reckon it in. I had been in his pay for the better part of a year, but, in reality, was my position improved? I had lived in comfort, free from the cares which had burdened me in the city, I had accumulated a few hundred dollars, and physically I had been a gainer by the removal to the country. That was one side of the ledger. On the other could be read loss of the little progress I had made in my profession, absence of settled purposes of any sort, and a growth of that often disastrous docility which follows unquestioning subjection to another's strong will. Things could not go on as they were indefinitely. Sooner or later the end must come. And then? Was I prepared to devote myself to the narrow field of a country practitioner, useful and honorable as it was? Banks had done me a great service; he had roused me in most timely fashion; but the awakening had been far from pleasant.

From habit my horse came to a standstill in front of the village post office, and equally from habit I entered the place and asked for my mail. A letter, a medical journal, and a newspaper were handed out, and, mechanically thrusting them into my pocket, I walked to the buggy, climbed in, and turned my nag's head homeward. Still possessed by doubts and speculations, I rode to the farmhouse, and, reaching it, locked myself in my office, there to endeavor to arrive at some conclusion, to choose a way out of my uncertainty. I sat there for hours before I achieved a decision, and it was hardly more than a compromise. In justice to Dr. Banks, I would tell him it was out of my power to enter into a permanent arrangement with him, for eventually I should seek a more populous district; if he cared for a temporary alliance, such terms as he offered should be accepted.

Catching sight of the newspaper in my pocket, I drew it out, and, as I did so, the letter fell from its folds to the floor. I picked it up and read the address, written in a feminine hand, all angles and straight lines, like the framework of a house, yet clear and legible. The postmark was New York. With waxing curiosity, for my correspondence was extremely limited, I broke the seal.

"My dear Dr. Morris," the letter ran, "my aunt, Mrs. Loring, desires to learn whether it will be convenient for you to receive her as a patient, and whether rooms can be secured for us near your office. She has tried a number of treatments since the voyage from Rio, but none of them has been of marked benefit to her. She remembers gratefully the success attending your ministrations on shipboard, and feels confident that your skill will bring her the relief she has sought so long. She asks me to add that this plan was in her mind when our chance meeting made it possible to secure your address.

"Yours very sincerely,
"DOROTHY GRAY."

Again and again I read these lines, poring over them as joyously as ever did Egyptologist over freshly discovered hieroglyphs which set at rest a much mooted point. Out above the rest of the letter stood two words, "for us." Mrs. Loring's niece would hardly leave her, but here was proof that both of them would come to Rodneytown. That I could succeed in convincing the elder lady that nothing serious ailed her was hardly possible; it was quite on the cards that after a month or two she would depart in a huff; but, in the meantime—well, I didn't trouble myself with the details of that problematical period. The great central point of interest was that for several weeks, at least, Dorothy Gray and I would be thrown together. For the moment Lamar, Banks, and all my recent worries were forgotten.

"Mrs. Weston," said I, pouncing upon that good woman as she passed the door of the office, "please do me a great favor. I have an old friend—patient, I mean—who is anxious to put herself under my care. I must find a boarding place for her. Can't you take her in?"

"Well, now, I'd real like to, doctor, but I ain't got the room," she answered, with kindly regret in her tone. "Is she all by herself?"

"No, she isn't," I confessed. "Her niece is with her."

"Little girl, is she?"

"No; a young lady," I answered, trying to avoid the consciousness of a twinkle in my hostess' eye.

"It's too bad, I'm sure; but we're a pretty full house as it is," said she. "However, don't get discouraged. Try Mis' Clark across the road; she don't use half that big house since her boys went out west. It'll be a good place, too. Mis' Clark's a good provider, and as neat as a hull paper of pins."

Over the way to the house of Clark I hastened, only to find its mistress disinclined to receive boarders. "City folks' notions," she averred, were not to be endured. But she began to relent a little when I put her yielding on the ground of a personal favor; and when I dwelt generously on Mrs. Weston's praise of her as a housekeeper, she led me upstairs to two rooms, spink and span and very comfortable withal, and, with pretended ungraciousness, said that my friends could occupy them, provided they could "stand plain livin' and plainer comp'ny." I closed the bargain on the spot.

Mrs. Weston met me at her door, on my return late that afternoon from a drive, in the course of which the answer to Miss Gray's letter had been intrusted to the mail.

"You look like a new man," said she, approvingly. "Sakes alive! how gettin' a new patient does perk you young doctors up!"

"The more the merrier, of course," said I.

"You're lucky to get two such special sufferers. You'll be gettin' rich, what with the new one and the old one over yonder."

She pointed to the house on the knoll, which showed a dark spot among the lowlands lying about it fresh and green and bright in the slanting rays of the setting sun, now nearing the crests of the hills to the west.

"Seems like a blot on our landscape, don't it?" she said, with her eyes still fixed on the somber mound.

"Yes," thought I, "perhaps in more ways than one."

IX.

One evening, about a fortnight later, I stepped out of my office for the double purpose of enjoying a pipe and a stroll in the open air. The hour was late, at least for that community of early rising and early retiring, and few lights were to be seen in any of the cluster of farmhouses. A faint gleam from one of the upper rooms of the house across the way showed that Mrs. Loring was wooing slumber under the protection of her night-lamp. She and her niece, having arrived that day, were now in full possession of their new quarters. Both had stood the journey well. Mrs. Loring, in fact, was never more cheerful than when on the wing. The invalid had greeted me with effusion, while Miss Gray had displayed a cordiality that was almost too full of friendliness and too lacking in self-consciousness to please my fancy. Cheerful good-fellowship was, perhaps, all that I had reason to expect in her; yet it was a very flattering result of many a tete-a-tete in the moonlight of the tropics.

The night was clear, and, though there was no moon, it was pleasant to stroll along, reviewing the events of our acquaintance and speculating upon the effects of its renewal. I was following the path to the knoll, and so engrossed were my meditations that on raising my eyes from the ground I was surprised to find myself close to the base of its landward slope. I was on the point of turning back, when I heard a voice recognizable as Lamar's, which seemed to come from the northern side of the little hill, at the base of which, as has been set forth, was one of the salt-water creeks. The words were not to be distinguished, but his tone gave evidence that the business he was engaged in had nothing alarming about it, although, from the hour selected for carrying it on, it was likely that he desired to avoid observation. It might be well to prove to him that even at such a time and place he could not be sure that some loiterer was not about, and to give a practical illustration of the need of a sentinel; at least that was the excuse I framed for advancing. Cautiously I stole by the spring and up the ascent. On the dark surface of the creek the still darker outlines of a boat could be made out. The craft was moored to the rocks, to which a man was transferring a number of cases and packages. A little way up the slope, directing the operation, stood Lamar. Intent as he was upon the task in hand, his quick ear caught the sound of my steps, and he turned toward me like a flash.

"It's I—Morris," I called out. It was too dark to perceive his motion clearly, but I thought I detected a swift movement of his right hand toward the breast of his coat.

"Ah! You are a rambler until late," he answered. Startled as he must have been by the interruption, he spoke with all his usual deliberate coolness.

"Yes; I was wakeful and happened to walk this way. Hearing unusual sounds, I pushed on to investigate. There was a chance, you know, that a reinforcement might be acceptable."

There was nothing in his manner to indicate whether the explanation satisfied him.

"Johnson brings a small cargo, supplies that might cause talk if obtained through the village," said he. "He will place them presently in the house."

"An excellent plan. He buys them at the larger ports up the coast, I suppose."

"Yes."

"There seems very little danger that anyone should stumble upon you while the goods are being landed," said I, "but my experience to-night shows that it is possible. It might be advisable to post a sentry, for if a rumor of these midnight labors got about it would set the village by the ears."

"Hereafter the precaution shall be taken. Remain a little," he added, as I was about to go. "I, too, am wakeful. Let us converse."

He led the way to the front of the house and seated himself on the doorstep.

"How of your medical practice?" he asked, when I had found a resting-place near him.

I told him of Mrs. Loring's arrival and of the probability that she would remain a considerable time in the neighborhood. She was an old acquaintance, I added. That I had met her on the voyage from Rio seemed to be a detail which it was as well not to mention. Had he learned it he might have displayed a livelier interest in the matter. As it was, however, he merely said that it was to be hoped that she would recover her health, and then changed the subject to remark that he desired me to bring him a considerable sum of money in a day or two.

CYCLING COMMENT.

J. Philip Kirch is now riding a Warwick.

Clarence Rittenhouse has a new Crescent.

John P. Powers, one of the obliging clerks at Armstrong's pharmacy, is riding a new wheel.

Borough Councilman L. B. Woolston has purchased a Richmond of the Jersey Wheel Company.

Miss Rendall, the city nurse under the auspices of the King's Daughters, has purchased a new wheel.

Miss Julia Vroom, of the borough, rides a Richmond, which was purchased of the Jersey Wheel Company.

A large number of cyclists from this city visited the gypsies who are encamped near Ellis Campbell's, last night.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a shipment of eight Cleveland Swell Specials and two Daytons yesterday.

A shipment of ten single Columbias and two Columbia tandems was received by the Eldridge Bicycle Company, Monday.

Robert Jackson, formerly of the Potter Press Works, has accepted a position in the repair department of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The refreshment privilege for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet has been granted to the proprietors of the New York and Philadelphia confectionery store on West Front street.

Mrs. L. G. Timpson, of Grace Court, will give a cycling party and tea to a few friends this evening. About fifteen invitations have been issued, and after a moonlight spin tea will be served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Timpson.

President Sjostrom of the Epworth League of the Methodist church, of Westfield. in contra-distinction to pastors and members of other denominations, is opposed to wheeling on Sundays, and has begun a crusade against the sport on that day. It is likely that he will continue to be in the minority.

The "moonlight" run of the Y. M. C. A. cyclers was held Monday night and a very pleasant evening was spent. Seven started out and reached Somerville in safety. Second Lieutenant Stafford was in command. On the return, the tire of Clarence Rittenhouse's wheel punctured and he was sent home by rail.

Among the local riders who will make their first appearance on the track Decoration Day in the Crescent Wheelmen's races, is Albert P. Simmonds, the well-known tennis player. His first trial was made Monday afternoon, when he rode a mile from standing start with tandem pacing in 2:31. Very good for a beginner.

The New Jersey State Division will have a bill presented to the next Legislature of this State, similar to the Armstrong baggage bill. There will also be a bill enpowering county officials to construct and maintain bicycle paths. The division hopes with the assistance of the riding public to have in time a number of good cycling paths.

Secretary Brock of the Good Roads Association of Hudson county has had a conference with the Mayor of Jersey City, in which the latter promised to do all in his power for the improvement of the streets of that city. An asphalt route for wheelmen is to be built, extending from Jersey City Heigts to the Pennsylvania Ferry, over Mercer, Henderson and York streets. This route will connect with the Hudson County Boulevard.

One of the features of the Irvington-Milburn race on Decoration Day will be the use of the phonograph. The instrument will be of service to the scorers in calling off the positions of the men as they cross the line. Those who have attended previous road races have wondered how it was possible to score correctly with so many contestants, especially when a dozen or more were bunched at the finish. It required a man well up in his business to look after this important detail, and he was assisted usually by half a dozen men, quick of pencil and clear in their hearing. On Saturday, however, liability of error will be reduced to a minimum. The numbers will be called into the receiver, while the scorer watches the progress of the men.

The Crescent Wheelmen have no intention of disbanding, despite the statements of the News, which, with its usual ignorance and maliciousness, tries to make out that the Crescent Wheelmen ars on the verge of dissolution. The statement that the club is about to give up its present quarters, because the rent cannot be paid is also entirely false. The club is in a much more prosperous condition at present than it was last year, and, although it is in debt for the building of the Crescent Oval, yet the holders of the notes are prominent members of the club and are perfectly satisfied with the present state of things. It is hoped that enough will be made on the coming race meet to pay off most of the indebtedness.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Myrtletwig stepped two easy miles in her work in 2:32¾ and 2:30, with Charley Brower in the sulkey.

C. C. Brower will start "Highland Boy" at Waverly Park Saturday. Next week he will race at Fleetwood.

Mr. Tunison's sorrel mare, Miss Tunison, worked a half in 1:15, while Andy, driven by his owner, Mr. Hays, was given two miles in 2:44½ and 2:42½.

Young Stamboul, 11,777, the handsome and good-gaited son of Stamboul, 2:07¼, out of a daughter of Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, is looking better than ever this spring, and is still the premier stallion at the Woodbrook Farm.

W. Chatterly, of New York, was at the Driving Park Saturday, and Johnnie Osborne drove his good mare, by Bayonne Prince, a mile for him in 2:53, which was a very creditable performance, as this is the second time this season she has been to a sulkey.

LAWN TENNIS.

A special meeting of the governors of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held on Thursday evening at the residence of A. H. Atterbury, of Weet Seventh street.

AT THE TRAPS.

The shoot of the Iudependent Gun Club which was to have been held on Decoration Day has been indefinitely postponed.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Cranford baseball team went to Somerville last Saturday and defeated the local team by a score of 16 to 5.

On to the Mountains.

The first Mauch Chunk excursion of the season will be run on Decoration Day over the Central Railroad of New Jefsey. Patrons in former years that have enjoyed the pleasure of one of these excursions will be most sure to repeat it. It is a delightful ride to Mauch Chunk and through a country rich in wild mountain scenery. The road runs along the Lehigh River, and the cool invigorating breezes are filled with life-giving odor of the pines. The gravity railroad is another interesting feature of the excursion It costs but fifty cents to make a trip over the road, and it enables lovers of grand scenery to feast their eyes on lofty distant peaks and fertile valleys right in the heart of the coal region. Glen Anoko, with its delicate water falls, cool retreats and rambles, is the pride of the Blue Ridge region, and is so near Mauch Chunk that time is allowed for full exploration. There is no jostling or crowding on these trips and they are patronized by respectable and self respecting people.

Fix the Street Right.

The West Front street section of the street railway was running on a sort of go-as-you-please schedule yesterday West of Plainfield avenue, only one track was utilized for traffic and twenty-three Italians were endeavoring to tear up the other track and relay the rails to the narrow guage standard. That section of the main thoroughfare has been an eye sore to the community ever since it was first torn up, and it is to be hoped the Council will at least compel the Street Railway company to replace the roadbed in as good, if not a better, condition than before. Street Commissioner Meeker could lend a helping hand in this direction, for it seems a crying shame that one of the prettiest, and perhaps the most traversed streets of the city should be allowed to be so descrated.

—The Cecilia Society will not resume practice until next January.

—John P. Emmons, of Prospect place, has had his front piazza enlarged.

—City Judge DeMeza is in New York today settling up a case for one of his clients.

—Isaac R. Giles, of East Sixth street, is building an addition to the rear of his home.

—A party from over the mountains enjoyed a "strawberry" party at the Hotel Tuileries on Monday evening.

—The Real Estate News, volume 1, No. 1, Silas D. Drake, has just made its appearance. It is devoted to booming real estate between Jersey City and Bound Brook on the Jersey Central railroad.

The last sad rites following the death, on Sunday, of Mrs. A. Hibbits took place from the house on Liberty street this morning at 9 o'clock, and from St. Mary's church at 9:30. Rev. Father Smyth officiated and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Death of Mary O'Donnell.

Miss Mary O'Donnell, aged 38 years, died at her home, 218 Plainfield avenue, yesterday at 4 p. m. No direct cause, other than that of general debility, is assigned. She came from Ireland 13 years ago and located here. During her illness she has been faithfully attended to by the family of P. Moran and Mrs. Bridget McDonough.

To Float the Stars and Stripes.

A grand time is in prospect for next Saturday at the Berkley Heights public school, at which time there will be a flag pole raising. A. J. Cammeyer, the New York shoe dealer, who has a country home at this place, will present the school with a handsome American flag. There will be other interesting features.

Reuch Will Survive.

Paul Reuch, the man who attempted to take his own life at Dunellen last Monday, will probably recover. So Dr. Brakely, of Dunellen, told a Press reporter this afternoon. Mr. Reuch will lose one eye and his face will be badly disfigured. He is perfectly conscious and has been so from the first, but is unable to talk except in monosylables on account of the condition of his face.

Assignee to Open the Store.

W. A. Coddington, assignee for J. P. Laire, will open the latter's store tomorrow and sell the goods at private sale. There is a probability that the court will not appoint appraisers.

—D. McColl MacGregor, of New York, will give some of his original recitations on Bible history at the W. C. T. U. meeting in their rooms tomorrow afternoon at 3:30.

—A team of of horses belonging to Nicholas VanWinkle, of the borough, ran away this afternoon on Somerset street, and a considerable amount of damage resulted. A team of horses and wagon owned by Charles Beckman, of Liberty Corner, was collided with and the wagon was also damage to a great extent.

J. Smith Garretson is quite ill at his home on Lee place. Dr. Tomlinson is in daily attendance.

Edward Baker, of West Second street, was able to return to work today after his recent trouble with his knee.

David C. Vail has accepted a position with J. W. VanSickle, the butcher, where he will remain until the return of Mifford Giles, who is now training for the Irvington-Milburn race.

BOUND TO OCCUR.

The Drama of the Future.

The Manager—I want a play immediately for Mr. Bruiseman.

The Playright—All right. Pick it out. Here's heavyweights, next to 'em 's the welter-weights, and yonder's a pile of lightweights.—Puck.

He Was Right.

Teacher—Now, Patsy, would it be proper to say: "You can't learn me nothing?"

Patsy—Yes'm.

Teacher—Why?

Patsy—'Cause yer can't.—Judge.

SHE KNEW.

Mr. Brown—I've got a cold or something in my head.

Mrs. Brown—It must be a cold, dear, I'm sure.—Judge.

LEGS BEAT THE WHEEL.

UNDERESTIMATED AN OLD MAN'S SPRINTING ABILITIES.

Bicyclist Green Gave Fireman Jones a Handicap in a Foot Against Bicycle Contest and Loses His Wheel Thereby.

An exciting bicycle and foot race was witnessed last evening on South avenue, between Engineer Harry Green and Fireman S. Jones of the water works station. Mr. Green wagered that he could beat Jones on his wheel and give him a good handicap. The agreement was made that if Green should win, Jones was to give him $10 and if the latter came out ahead, the former was to give up his wheel. The race was arranged and Green stationed himself at Giese's lane below the Netherwood hill and Jones was given from that point to the top of the hill as a handicap. The terminus was fixed at Richmond street. A referee was placed on the hill and he gave the signal to Jones when Green started. The race was a lively one, with the result that Jones reached Richmond street first.

In view of the fact that Green is a young man and that Jones is nearly 60 years of age, the event was quite remarkable.

Jones was given the wheel and in turn presented it to his son. Mr. Green will be more cautious in the future how he makes bets with older men.

FINISHED HIS LAW COURSE.

Robert M. Clark Will Graduate From a New York Law School Next Week.

The commencement exercises of the Law Department of the New York University will be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Carnegie Music Hall, New York. Among the members of the graduating class is Robert M. Clark, of Washingtonville. Mr. Clark graduated from the North Plainfield public school in '91 and from the Plainfield High School in '93. He has now successfully passed his examinations at the university and is ready to enter the profession of law. His host of friends in this city will be glad to learn of his success.

The Cart Upset.

While driving a dumpcart on W. J. Buttfield's property on Rockview avenue, yesterday morning, David Blow, a driver for B. W. Hand, was thrown heavily to the ground by the upsetting of the cart. A heavy load had been placed on the cart and in driving across the property one wheel struck a stump of a tree and the wheel gave way, upsetting the cart. Blow was only slightly bruised by the accident.

A Serious Dismount.

D. V. Force, of New street, is now confined to his home with a sprained ankle, the result of a too rapid dismount from a wheel. He was out for a spin on Park avenue Monday evening when his hat blew off. He was going along at a good rate of speed and tried to dismount in such a hurry that he was thrown, spraining his ankle.

Exhibition of Boys' Club Handiwork.

The second annual closing exhibition of the manual training classes of the Boys' Club will be held this evening in the Boys' Club rooms on North avenue. The classes have been doing exceedingly well under the instruction of Olaf Sangstad, and it is hoped that the friends of the club will turn out as well as they did last year.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. STRUCK BY A TROLLEY CAR.

Several Persons in the Collision, But No One Was Hurt.

Trolley accidents have been very few and far between in this city, but one of the few happened this morning on West Front street, near Madison avenue. The carriage of John W. Murray, Sr., of West Eighth street, driven by Mr. Murray himself, was crossing the car tracks when the trolley car struck the carriage from behind, generally demolishing the rear wheels. Mr. Murray's daughter, Mrs. Townsend Rshimore, of Stelle avenue, and her little son, were also in the carriage. Mr. Murray says that he was driving across the track when he was run into, while the motorman claims that the carriage backed directly into the path of the car without the driver giving any notice. No one was hurt, and the horse which was badly frightened was led over to G. Q. Packer's stable on Madison avenue.

MISSES MARSH'S MUSICALE.

A Pleasing Programme Rendered by Their Pupils.

There was a highly pleased audience at the musicale given by the Misses Marsh and their pupils in vocal and instrumental music at their home, 915 Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon. The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Church of Christ held a meeting Tuesday night, and among other business the following officers were nominated, to be voted upon at the regular monthly business meeting of the society, which will be held next Tuesday night: President, Benj. W. Hand; vice-president, Miss Mabel Van Middlesworth; treasurer, Miss Maggie Moore; recording secretary, Percy Hand; corresponding secretary, Mrs. B. W. Hand; organist, Mrs. Ella Hand; assistant organist, H. Van-Middlesworth; chorister, B. W. Hand.

Proposed Hotel For Elizabeth.

Several capitalists and real-estate men have formed a temporary organization and are discussing the subject of erecting a first-class family and transient guest hotel at a cost of $100,000. A number of sites on Broad street have been looked at and $30,000 has so far been pledged. A D. Mulford is among the number of projectors. Forty suits of rooms with as many more single rooms will be provided, while the structure will be built of brick and stone.

Word From China.

A special meeting under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will be held in the lecture-room of the church tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, to which everybody is invited, The Rev. Dr. Paul Pollach, of New York, will be present and tell of his work in China, where he spent several years as a Catholic priest, but where he is soon to return as a Protestant missionary. Music will be a feature of the evening.

A Little Lost Child.

Patrolman Hartpence found a little child wandering about West Third street yesterday about noon. She was crying so bitterly that he could not tell where she belonged or who her parents were. Finally he quieted her, then she lisped her name and he had no trouble to take her to her home. The mother of the child then thanked him heartily as the child had been missing for an hour or so.

New Fire Alarm Box.

Chief Doane installed fire alarm box 38 at the corner of Stelle and Central avenues this morning. The firemen whose duty it is to respond to the alarm of box 37 will also respond to the new number.

OFFICIALS OF THE BICYCLE MEET OF THE CRESCENT WHEELMEN.

Chief Consul Robert Gentle Will Act as Referee, While the Other Officials Are Way Up in the Sport.

The Crescent Wheelmen have always been very popular among the bicycle men of this State and district, especially since the building of the track at the Crescent Oval. Their invitations to act as officials have always been accepted by the leading bicycle men, and the list of officials at the Crescent Wheelmen meets always include a number of the best known authorities on bicycling. This year is no exception and even the State Consul of the L. A. W. has honored the Crescent Wheelmen by selecting their club before all others as the one at whose meet he will act as referee. John C. Wetmore, of Elizabeth, the official handicapper for New Jersey, acted in that capacity for the Crescent Wheelmen. The track officials are as follows:

Referee—Robert Gentle, of Elizabeth, Chief Consul of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.

Judges—H. L. Saltonstall, of New York, The American Wheelman; James C. Tattersall, of Trenton, secretary and treasurer of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.; Fred. J. Keer, of Newark, chairman of the racing board of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.

Timers—Charles Brown, of Elizabeth, Elizabeth Athletic Club; George M. Archer, of Plainfield, Harlem Wheelmen; Charles E. Vail, of Plainfield, Crescent Wheelmen.

Scorers—Adolph Stahl, of New York, chairman of the racing board of the Greenwich Wheelmen; Robert Meeker, of Plainfield, Crescent Wheelmen.

Clerk of the Course—F. L. C. Martin, of Plainfield, Crescent Wheelmen.

Assistant Clerks of the Course—J. C. Kirkner, E. J. Serrell and N. R. Titsworth, all of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Starter—A. H. Chamberlain, of Rahway, Captain of the Union County Roadsters.

Announcer—A. S. Fritts, of Plainfield, Crescent Wheelmen.

Four Score and Six.

Mrs. Van Fleet, aged 86 years, died yesterday at the residence of her son, S. Van Fleet, 19 Jackson avenue. Owing to her advanced age she was very feeble and her health has been poor for sometime. She was well-known in this locality, having lived here for many years with her son. In early life she was a resident of Clinton, where she will be buried. One son living in Michigan survives her beside the one with whom she lived. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 from the house on Jackson avenue.

Volunteer Praise Meeting.

Saturday evening at Reform Hall there will be an enjoyable time at the Volunteers' meeting. A musical and praise service will be held, led by Lieut. Lang and others from Orange. Cream and cake will be served to those who hold tickets, which are only ten cents each. Specials from headquarters in New York are expected, but owing to demands from posts, it is impossible to designate them by name before the meeting. Admission free.

Broke His Collar Bone.

A cycle rider from Port Richmond ran into another rider last evening on Park avenue, below Randolph road, with the result of breaking his collar bone. He was picked up by friends, placed in a carriage and taken to Dr. McKensie's office at Metuchen, where he was treated. The man ran into was not injured, but his wheel was damaged.

Livery Business is Good.

A prominent livery man told a Press reporter yesterday that the livery business was, at the present time, the best it had been for several years, and that he could scarcely keep up with the demand.

Notice to Pastors.

No issue of The Daily Press will be made Saturday, consequently the church notices for Sunday will be printed tomorrow. Pastors should send their notices to The Press office by 10 a. m.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

TICKLED THEIR PALATES.

STRAWBERRIES AND ICE CREAM AT THE SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH.

The Ladies Aid Society Conduct a Festival and Sociable in a Successful Manner—Variation for the Mind Also Provided.

Strawberries and ice cream were the principal attraction at the closing sociable of the Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-day Baptist church held last evening in the church parlors. It was something on the line of a festival but, whatever it was, it certainly made a very pleasant evening for those that attended.

An informal programme was rendered during the evening. First came a song, "May," by a chorus of small children. Then Miss Myrtie Randolph recited "When Strawberries are Ripe" in a pleasing manner. The Messrs. Miller, Mosher and Naegle gave "Grasshopper Green" very well and the programme ended with another song by the children's chorus, "Forget Me Not." D. E. Titsworth acted as master of ceremonies in his usual amusing manner. The programme was arranged by Miss Mabel Maxson. The decorations, which were principally ferns and cut flowers, were arranged by Miss Lena Tomlinson and Miss Ida Spicer. A lemonade booth occupied one corner of the room and was presided over by Miss Lulu Clawson and Miss Ernestine Smith. The strawberry table was looked after by Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Mrs. Chas. Dunham. A number of tables occupied the class rooms at the side and here the delicious ice cream, cake and strawberries were sold. The waitresses were the Misses Anna Wooden, Lizzie Allis, Ida Spicer, Lulu Lewis, Grace Lewis, Ida Randolph and Etta Randolph.

A Floral Presentation.

The attendance at the last meeting of the Parliamentary Club for the season, held this morning at the Y. M. C. A., was unusually large and considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings. Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth and Miss Bessie Brower read papers regarding foreign affairs, and Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. McGee delivered papers on art. At the close of the business Mrs. Cooley, in a few well-chosen words, presented Miss Yates, the president, with a handsome bouquet on behalf of the club as a mark of esteem for efficiency and faithfulness. Miss Yates responded by thanking the members for their kindly remembrance.

Attacked by Highwaymen.

Theodore Hunt, nineteen years old, living with his mother at Junction, visited Miss Smith, the adopted daughter of Thomas Miller, of Tunison's Corners, near High Bridge, last night, and started to return home at 1:30 o'clock this morning. When about one hundred feet from the house he was attacked by two unknown men, and robbed of $25 in cash. The robbers made off without being identified. He carried a valuable watch which the highwaymen overlooked.

Grand Officers Coming.

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., will meet this evening and initiate two candidate and receive four propositions. Thursday evening, June 11th, four candidates will be initiated, at which time the Grand Lodge officers will be present, also members of Memorial Lodge, Newark, and Bernards Lodge, Bernardsville. An elaborate programme will be prepared, also a banquet. A smoker will follow the meeting this evening.

A Club of Many Pastimes.

The last game of euchre in the meetings of the Young People's Progressive Euchre Club of Dunellen and North Plainfield, for the summer, will be played on Friday evening at the home of Miss Jessie Haynes, of Dunellen. During the summer the club will be continued more as a social club, and lawn parties, trolley parties, moonlight walks and the like will be the order of the evening.

Put the Wheel in the Rookery.

A son of Alonzo G. Conant, of 727 Watchung avenue, left his wheel in front of Neuman Bros. grocery yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and up to 1 o'clock last night no one had claimed it. Patrolman Flynn noticed the wheel and placed it in the station house awaiting an owner. This afternoon Mr. Conant saw the wheel and identified it. He saw Chief Grant and succeeded in recovering it.

Hurrying Up the Work.

The guage of one track between Grant avenue and Somerset street, on West Front street, has been changed, and work was started at Watchung and North avenues this morning and will proceed through Front and Somerset streets to Johnston's drive, after which the other track on West Front street and Grant avenue will be changed.

EXAMS. AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The Students Made Aware of Time When the Tests Will Be Made.

For several years past the examinations have been sprung upon the High School students without the slightest warning. This method of the faculty was not appreciated by the students, but the change that has been made in this is greatly enjoyed by every pupil. Now the examinations are all announced nearly one month ahead, thus giving the students time to brush up all their subjects in the correct way and order. The final examinations will occur this year as follows: June 2d, the classes in Roman history, English history, English Literature and Greek, Xenphon will be examined; June 5th, the examinations will be in rhetoric, higher English and chemistry; June 9th is the day for examinations in beginning Latin, junior Cicero, senior Cicero, Cæsar, bookkeeping and geology; June 12th, those scholars taking first Greek, third Greek, French, physics, and English literature will be examined; June 19th the last of the examinations will be held and will be in geometry, arithmetic, algebra, third year, and algebra and geometry, fourth year.

On Friday, May 29th, the Kappa Delta Phi will hold its regular monthly business meeting for the election of officers and for the transaction of any other business which may come properly before them. After this meeting the society will adjourn indefinitely. The object of this meeting is to leave the society in good condition with some officers, a few of whom will surely return next year, to call the society together in the fall.

NEARLY PLUNGED INTO ETERNITY.

A Little Girl Narrowly Escapes Being Thrown Down a 15-foot Embankment.

An accident peculiar in its nature but fortunate in its results happened on West Front street yesterday. Mrs. R. Havens, of that thoroughfare, had just returned from a morning walk with a two-and-a-half-year-old child. She left the child in the baby carriage while she went into the house to attend to some household duties. During her absence a gust of wind started the carriage on a downward course towards a fifteen-foot embankment in the rear of the lot. William Brown, of 615 West Third street, happened to be near-by, and with the alertness of an Adirondack deer, hastened to the baby's rescue. He caught the carriage fore and aft, probably thus saving the child's life.

The rescuer does not cater for notoriety, but he is justly entitled to this brief notice for services rendered.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Lee, of East Fifth street, last evening, in honor of her birthday. It was arranged by Miss Lambert and Miss Fillmer. After the first excitement of the surprise was over, instrumental and vocal music and dancing made the evening pass very quickly. A wonderful birthday cake with candles on top of it, caused lots of fun, and refreshments were served toward the close. Among those present were the Misses Griffin, Billings, Lambert, Fillmer, Sims, Chelton, Low and Mabelle Force, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Harry Coward and Frank Howland.

Received With Old Glory and Roses.

It was a happy home at No. 82 Duer street, last evening about six o'clock, when Miss Lillian A. Force arrived from Pasadena, California, where she has been for over five months visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Dunn and her cousin, Fred S. Dunn, at Echo Mountain. Although she was ill for a week on her homeward trip, at the home of her cousin, Mrs. A. T. Smith, Sacramento, good nursing and a skilled physician soon mastered her affliction, tonsilitis, and she was enabled to undertake the long journey of nearly 4,000 miles, and arrived in Plainfield in good health.

Beautifying His Property.

W. J. Buttfield has a number of improvements in progress on his property at Rockview and West End avenues. A tennis court is being laid out and the wooded portion is being transformed into small parks. B. W. Hand is doing the work.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

TO KEEP THE CITY CLEAN

PROPOSED PLAN FOR A GARBAGE DISPOSAL SYSTEM.

A Stock Company Wanted to be Organized—To Erect a Crematory With a Capacity for a City of 50,000 Inhabitants.

Some time ago a committee was appointed by the Council to look up some sanitary method for the gathering and final disposition of garbage and other city refuse.

Through the results of their labors a form of plans was submitted to the Board of Health at their meeting on Tuesday night that meets the approval of the Board.

The Town Improvement Association and citizens in general should join with the Health Board in their efforts to establish a more systematic sanitary system, for Plainfield surely needs great improvements in this matter. The following is the plan submitted:

It is proposed to form a company with a capital stock of $50,000, under the title of "The Plainfield Sanitary Company."

To erect a crematory with a nominal capacity to meet the requirements of at least 50,000 inhabitants.

To establish a thorough sanitary system of gathering garbage, ashes, and all other refuse.

SYSTEM OF CREMATION.

The system to be used is known as the Vivarttas.

The most putrid animal or vegetable matter and animals of any size can be incinerated without emitting the least particle of odor or smoke, and is thoroughly sanitary in every way.

COLLECTING AND CARTING.

It is proposed to divide the city into four collection districts and establish a regular system as to time for collecting in each district. For the garbage it is proposed that the company will furnish each house with a thoroughly sanitary tight can (the designs of these cans to be approved by the Board of Health) to have a duplicate set of cans numbered in duplicate. The gatherer when he leaves the plant will have on his wagon the same number of empty cans that he is supposed to gather on his route. He will take the can from the house that contains garbage and leave in its place an empty can; this will avoid the agitation of dumping the garbage from one can into another receptacle on the street in front of the house, which always causes a nuisance, particularly in hot weather, and also avoids any fumes escaping while in transit to the crematory.

The cans as soon as emptied at the crematory will be thoroughly cleansed by steam at a high temperature, so that when they are returned they will be free from any sour, disagreeable smell and disease-breeding germs.

This method carried out in a systematic manner will undoubtedly prove to be a great sanitary improvement over the present crude and antiquated system.

GATHERING OF ASHES AND RUBBISH.

It is proposed to adopt tight carts with covers; this will avoid the sifting of ashes and the blowing of fine sediments while being carted through the streets.

The ashes and rubbish to be taken to the crematory and there separated and treated so as to remove all organic matter and render it thoroughly sanitary for filling-in purposes.

It is proposed that the Board of Health shall adopt rules and regulations governing all methods for a sanitary disposal, printed notices of which shall be sent to each householder by the company as often as may be required.

It is also proposed that the company shall make the following charges: For gathering garbage from ordinary residences, 50 cents per month; for gathering garbage from hotels, boarding houses, restaurants and markets, the price to be arranged according to services required. For gathering ashes and rubbish, 10 cents per barrel. These are the prices that are now charged. The incineration of the sludge from the sewers, subject to arrangement with the city.

By treating the sludge from the sewer beds by this method it surely will remove all fancied or real nuisances that may be generated from it.

The company, if it should be desired, would enter into an agreement with the city that after a reasonable number of years, say ten years, to sell its plant to the city.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the last week: Mountain Park Land Company to Henrietta B. Herring, $700; Peter Struve et ux and Chas. Schwed et ux to Catharine Goodman et al, $25; Annette Beeching and husband to Jeanette V. Boehm, $1,400; Sarah J. French and husband to Hobert E. Rider, $100.

MANY WERE KILLED

St. Louis Swept by a Furious Cyclone and Rainstorm.

FIERCE FLAMES ADD TO THE HORROR

Buildings Wrecked, Boats Capsized and a Train Overturned on the Bridge—Great Destruction and Loss of Life at East St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 28.—St. Louis was struck by a cyclone of frightful fury followed by a heavy rainstorm at a late hour yesterday afternoon. Many people were killed and the property loss is beyond estimate. At 5:20 p. m. the clouds that had covered the city since noon broke into a furious storm. Within ten minutes the wind reached a velocity of eighty miles an hour, sweeping with it dense waves of rain. The highest speed of wind previously recorded here was 72 miles an hour, in August, 1878. The screeching of the wind through electric wires, the crash of debris that it swept in every direction, the electric flashes from tangled wires and crashing thunder made a scene indescribable. The greatest loss of life was in East St. Louis, where probably 300 are dead. The steamer D. H. Pike, with thirty passengers on board, bound for Peoria, was blown bottom side up in the middle of the river and a number of persons killed. The steamer Delaphin with a crew of six and twenty lady passengers on board was blown against a bridge pier and broken in two. The ladies and two of the crew clung to the bridge stonework and were rescued. The steamer Libbie Conger, with only Capt. Seaman, his wife and three of a crew aboard, went adrift. The wreck of the boat was found opposite Carondelet. All on board were probably lost.

Death and Destruction.

Ottened's furniture store, at Broadway and Soulard, was demolished, and six men are reported killed. A saloon at 604 South Seventh street fell with nine men in the ruins. St. Patrick's church, at Sixth and Biddle streets, fell, and the debris fills the street. The electric railway line is burned out, as well as the electric plant. Fourteen fire alarms were sounded within fifteen minutes, and three alarms were sent in from the poor house, which building has 1,200 inmates. The roof of the poor house was blown off and several of the inmates killed. During the last race at the fair grounds the roof was blown off the grand stand. The crowd had gone to the open field for safety, and but four men were killed. The armory, at Seventeenth and Pine streets, is being used as a temporary hospital.

Sky Aflame with the Light of Fires.

At 7:30 p. m. the rain which had ceased for a time began afresh and fell in torrents. At 8 o'clock the eastern sky was aflame with the light of fires in East St. Louis. The metal roof of the Merchants' exchange was rolled up like a scroll and fell into the streets. The Louisville & Nashville east-bound local passenger train had just reached East St. Louis when the storm struck that city. The train was overturned but miraculously only a few passengers were injured. They were taken from the cars by railroad yardmen.

Train Overturned on a Bridge.

The Chicago & Alton eastbound train, which left St. Louis at 5 o'clock, was on the east span of the bridge when the wind picked the cars up and turned them over on their sides. The iron spans and trusses held the cars from toppling over into the river 100 feet below. The passengers were thrown into a confused mass. The network of wires made rescue difficult and dangerous, but all were taken out, some more or less injured. The east span of the Eads bridge is so badly wrecked that it will take three days to allow trains to pass.

Fire Adds to the Horror.

The report of the fatalities in East St. Louis is hourly increasing and at 9 o'clock it was estimated that the loss of life will exceed 250. It was impossible to cross the bridge or river all last night. Lightning struck the Standard Oil works and flames were soon pouring from a dozen buildings. The fire department was utterly powerless to cope with the conflagration and most of the business and a portion of the residence section was destroyed by flames which had not already been destroyed by the wind. Among the principal buildings in ruins are the National hotel, the Standard Oil works, East St. Louis Wire Nail works, the Crescent elevator, Hesel elevator, all freight depots and stores and residences on St. Clair avenue.

Probably 300 Dead.

The list of the dead in St. Louis cannot be estimated until the alarming reports of loss of life in collapsed buildings can be confirmed. Sixty lifeless bodies had been found up to 9 o'clock this morning. If half the reports are true the list will reach nearly 300. The city is in a state of panic. All electric wires are down, and the city was in darkness last night. To add to the confusion, the tornado was followed by a deluge of rain, accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning. Telephone wires are useless and livery men refuse requests for conveyances on account of prostrate electric wires.

Scene in East St. Louis Appalling.

The scene in East St. Louis is awful. The tornado struck the city with terrible effect, and it is now estimated that 300 persons are dead in that place alone as a result the wind, flood and flames. The tornado was followed by an outbreak of fire, caused by lightning, and before the flames were gotten under control property to the value of nearly $3,000,000 was destroyed. The tornado passed in an easterly direction and Vandalia and Caseyville, in Illinois, suffered severely. One report states that the railroad depot in Vandalia was blown away and thirty people killed.

Many Alarming Reports.

A startling report reached police headquarters that 200 girls were in the ruins of Liggitt & Meyers cigarette factory at Tower Grove park. Alarming reports of great loss of life in the southern portion of St. Louis from railroad tracks to Carondelet were also received. The greatest anxiety was felt for the safety of passengers on the different excursion boats which were on the river when the storm broke. the steamer City of Florence, with an excursion party, was reported lost below Carondelet. The steamr St. Paul with thirty passengers was also reported wrecked. The middle span of the roadway above the railroad tracks on the Eads bridge was blown completely away. It is not known whether any persons lost their lives while crossing the bridge.

In Other Parts of the State.

Wire communication with surrounding territory in the western and northern parts of Missouri is cut off, but it is feared that the loss of life in these sections will be very large. The damage to property in St. Louis is estimated at $1,000,000 and the loss in East St. Louis is over $2,000,000.

Damage Near Sturgeon.

Sturgeon, Mo., May 28.—A cyclone passed five miles north of Sturgeon yesterday afternoon. At Renick three men were seriously injured and a family of colored people were carried over a mile, two children being fatally hurt. Friendship church, north of town, was demolished. The funnel-shaped cloud was seen by half the people of Sturgeon. Bridges and fences were torn up for miles.

Eighty Children Reported Killed.

Roodhouse, Ill., May 28.—It is reported that eighty children were killed in a school house at Drake, near this city, by the cyclone.

STRICKEN WITH BLINDNESS.

Peculiar and Unfortunate Case of a Workman at Trenton.

Trenton, May 28.—William Ash, residing on Hewitt street, this city, was stricken with blindness Tuesday evening while at work in the mill of the Home Rubber company. A storm was gathering at the time and the shops became dark. Just then the electric lights of the mill were turned on. Suddenly Ash screamed that he was blind, and sank to the floor. It was found that the pupils of both his eyes were turned white as though they had been seared by the lightning, and the sight in both was totally destroyed.

River and Harbor Bill May Be Vetoed.

Washington, May 28.—There is good reason to believe that the river and harbor bill will be vetoed by the president. Secretary Lamont, having returned to Washington from New York, has been consulted by Mr. Cleveland on the subject, and it is intimated that the veto message is now in course of preparation. The president regards the measure as carrying to the extreme the plan of committing the government to large expenditures through the contract system.

To Sell the Mission House.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 28.—It is authoritatively stated that the committee to which was referred the proposition to sell the Presbyterian Mission house in New York has decided favorably to the plan and will recommend to the general assembly this afternoon that the building be sold and that the mission boards return to their old quarters in the Lenox mansion.

Smith College Memorial Services.

Northampton, Mass., May 28.—The 100th anniversary of the birth of Sophia Smith, founder of Smith college, was observed by a memorial service held in the college assembly hall yesterday. The college choir rendered several selections, and the address of the day was given by the Rev. Dr. John Greene of Lowell. Mayor Field of Northampton made a brief address.

Thrown from His Carriage.

Washington, May 28.—Capt. James E. White, general superintendent of the railway mail service, met with a painful accident while driving a spirited horse. The animal became unmanageable going through the Soldiers' home grounds, upsetting the vehicle, throwing Capt. White to the ground and severely wrenching his leg.

Distinguished Arrivals.

New York, May 28.—Among the passengers per steamer Spree which arrived last evening from Bremen, via Southampton, were his excellency Dr. Martin Garcia Merom, Argentine minister to the United States, and Prince Radziwill.

NAVAL BOAT RACE

Tars from the Cincinnati and New York To Contest This Afternoon.

THE STAKES ALONE AMOUNT TO $8,000

Over $5,000 Said To Have Been Wagered on the Outside on the Outcome of the Race—Return of the White Squadron.

New York, May 28.—The cruisers New York, Cincinnati, Montgomery and Raleigh, which have been in this vicinity for the past few weeks, returned to their anchorage off Tompkinsville, S. I., late last evening, after a four days' trip to sea. The ships left here Monday morning and steamed to a point sixty miles southeast of Sandy Hook. A target was set in the water and the different divisions on the men of war were put through the small arms practice. The result, the officers of the ships declared, was most satisfactory, the men proving themselves, as a rule, clever marksmen. A heavy fog set in Tuesday and interfered with the work considerably. Several hours of manoeuvring was indulged in and many new tricks of naval warfare dexterously carried out. Early yesterday the men were put through torpedo experiments and at 10 o'clock a start was made for the harbor. Yesterday was the day set for the race between the crews of the New York and Cincinnati. Owing to the late hour of arrival of the ships, and, incidentally, to the fact that the Cincinnati's stake money had not yet been covered, the race was postponed until this afternoon. The Cincinnati's bluejackets have raised $4,000. This sum they sent over in the custody of one of their officers to the New York this morning. As yesterday was pay-day aboard ship the amount will undoubtedly be covered by the flagship's tars, and then the race, which is causing great excitement among officers and men alike, will be assured. Coxswain Abel Davis of the New York says he will have his ten men in the cutter ready for the enemy at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Coxswain "Bob" Winters of the Cincinnati declares he will be on hand at the same hour with his crack ten. The cutters will be towed to a point a mile below Fort Lafayette, and the course will be four miles straightaway up stream. There are over 300 men on the Cincinnati, 500 on the New York, and the other men-of-war have nearly a full complement. Over $5,000 has already been wagered on the outcome of the race, and it is believed that a considerably larger amount of Uncle Sam's cash will change hands among the tars when the event is decided this evening. The New York's crew have so far vanquished all rivals for ten-oared barge honors.

Massachusetts Gas Bill Passed.

Boston, May 28.—The house has passed the Massachusetts pipe line (gas) bill to be enacted. There was no opposition. This is the Whitney gas bill which has already passed the senate and now goes to Acting Gov. Wolcott for signature.

Hood's

Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine leads everything ever produced. It is positively the best. Others may make the same claim. But there's this difference: We prove it. Not by antiquity, but by Merit. Not by what we say, but by what Hood's Sarsaparilla does. It has a record of Cures unequalled in medical history. It positively, perfectly and permanently cures when all other medicines fail. That the keen discrimination of the people recognizes its merit and the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, is shown by the fact that they buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference to the exclusion of all others. Hood's Sarsaparilla has a larger sale than all other blood purifiers. It wins confidence everywhere, because the statements in its advertising and testimonials are verified by all who take it. No other medicine has ever received such praise, or so many voluntary testimonials of wonderful cures. No other medicine possesses the peculiar combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which give it merit peculiar to itself. This is the secret of its wonderful power, of its wonderful sales, of its wonderful hold upon the confidence of the people. This is why it cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism, all Humors, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, That Tired Feeling, builds up the nerves, creates an appetite and strengthens the whole system. Its merit, its sales, its whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms—the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? THE TARIFF LOOMS UP

Revenue Amendments Offered to the Filled Cheese Bill.

GENERAL DISCUSSION MAY ENSUE

Senator Hansbrough Attacks the President—Messrs. Butler and Elkins Indulge in Predictions as to the Result of the November Contest.

Washington, May 28.—In the senate to-day, besides the filled cheese bill and the Butler prohibitory bond measure, considerable time is likely to be occupied by Senator Daniel in the delivery of the remainder of his speech in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, independently of the action of any other government. The filled cheese bill is likely to produce several more amendments, and from the tenor of those already offered and the speeches made upon them it is possible that a general tariff discussion will be precipitated. Senator Morgan's amendment, proposing a tax of one cent a pound on all American cheese offered for sale, and Senator Mitchell's, proposing an import duty on all wool, are likely to come up today, and the fact that the amendment to place an additional tax on beer, ale and porter was defeated is no guarantee that either or both of the others will not be adopted. Considerable discussion has been aroused by the speech of Senator Hansbrough in favor of the Butler bond measure, in which he declared that it was necessary to limit the "overshadowing power of the executive," which was "bordering on imperialism." He favored action at the present session to increase the revenue by a duty on tea and coffee and by an additional tax on beer. He declared his belief that, if congress adjourned without such action, there would be a new issue of bonds within a month after adjournment and another issue before next session, and that congress would be open to the suspicion of being in league with the bond syndicate. The bond bill was opposed by Senator Elkins as a measure that might bring the government to a standstill. An interesting discussion took place between Senators Elkins and Butler, in which the latter foreshadowed the election of a populist president in November, and in which the former said that the next republican administration would be compelled to borrow money to carry on the government. The partial conference report on the naval appropriation bill was concurred in, and a further conference was ordered on unadjusted matters, including the question of battleships.

House of Representatives.

The principal matter before the house to-day is the conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill, which shows an agreement upon everything of importance in that measure except the public building items. The conference report on the bill for the relief of the settlers on the Northern Pacific indemnity lands was agreed to. The fight against the adoption of the senate amendment to the general deficiency bill, providing for the payment of the French spoilation and war claims under the Bowman act, adjudicated by the court of claims, amounting to $2,000,000, was vigorous and hotly contested, but it was finally adopted by a vote of 111 to 97.

CONFIRMED BY THE SENATE.

Dominic I. Murphy's Nomination Acted Upon Favorably.

Washington, May 28.—The senate in executive session yesterday afternoon made the following confirmations: Dominic I. Murphy of Philadelphia, to be commissioner of pensions. Napoleon J. L. Dana of New Hampshire, to be first deputy commissioner of pensions. William Franklin Sands of the district of Columbia, to be second secretary of the legation of the United States at Tokio, Japan.

Change of Venue Denied.

Manchester, N. H., May 28.—The petition of Dr. J. C. Moore, ex-president of the failed Derryfield Savings bank and the People's Fire Insurance company and ex-treasurer of the Union Publishing company, for a change of venue for trial upon the state indictment charging crookedness in connection with the two former institutions and with overissuing stock of the latter company has been deniend by Judge Pike in the supreme court.

Woman's Board of Missions.

Northampton, Mass., May 28.—At the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions in the Edwards church in this city, about 600 women present, among them delegates from churches all over New England, the report of the treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Cowing of Northampton, was read. It showed $2,569 in the treasury. All but $24 of this sum has been turned into the woman's board.

More Emigrants Coming.

St. John's, N. F., May 28.—The steamer Portia sailed last night for New York, having on board 190 emigrants. Before starting a number of lifeboats and belts were put on board, so that all might sail with a feeling of security.

Blanket Ballot Bill Signed.

Albany, May 28.—Gov. Morton has signed the Raines bill which revises his blanket ballot law of last year. The blanket ballot is retained and provision is made for a separate column for independent nominations.

The Gunhilde a Total Wreck.

Louisburg, C. B., May 28.—The Norwegian bark Gunhilde, Capt. Thorup, from Copenhagen for Quebec or Montreal, is ashore near Louisburg harbor. She is reported to be a total wreck.

VERMONT DEMOCRATS.

They Declare for Gold and Praise Cleveland and Russell.

Montpelier, Vt., May 28.—The democratic state convention for the election of delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention declared for the gold standard, opposed the coinage of silver, except under international agreement, denounced protection under republican methods and demanded tariff legislation for the constitutional purpose of providing revenues for the government and not for fostering trusts. President Cleveland's administration is highly commended and his action in the Vonezuela matter is especially praised. Thanks are extended to Secretary Carlisle for his management of the treasury department. Sympathy is extended to the Cubans in their struggle for liberty. J. J. Monahan of Underhill moved to substitute a free coinage substitute for the gold plank in the platform. He was hissed but was allowed to continue. This was the resolution: Resolved, that the democrats of Vermont, in convention assembled, demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold into money of redemption at a ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for the approval of any other government. The resolution was voted down, about half a dozen delegates recording themselves in its favor. The platform expressed no preference for a presidential candidate. Permanent Chairman McGettrick made a speech eulogizing Cleveland's administration, but saying that they were there to advocate the candidacy of William E. Russell, "Massachusetts' favorite son and ideal governor."

SERVICE PENSION BILL FIGURES.

200,000 Persons Will Be Benefited at a Cost of $24,720,000.

Washington, May 28.—In his report accompanying the service pension bill in accordance with the action of the committee on invalid pensions, Chairman Pickler said that, in round numbers 200,000 persons not now on the rolls will be benefited. Should they all apply for pensions and their claims allowed the total amount to be paid them will be $24,720,000. The cost of the increase of the pensions of all those receiving $6 and $8 a month would be $5,784,000, a total annual cost of $30,504,000. This was the largest possible sum that could be charged against the government within the first year, Chairman Pickler said; the probable amount he estimated at $21,464,000.

DEMAND HIS PROSECUTION.

Charges on Which Italy Is Asked to Try Gen. Baratieri.

Rome, May 28.—The demand for the authority of the chamber of deputies to prosecute Gen. Baratieri, the Italian commander alleged to be responsible for the defeat sustained by the Italian army at Adowa, has been published. It asks that the general be arraigned on the ground that he attacked the Abyssinians on January 3 from inexcusable motives and under circumstances rendering defeat inevitable. It is also charged that he abandoned his command for two days, thereby failing to give the orders required for lessening the consequences of the defeat.

Bicycle Races at Cortland, N. Y.

Cortland, N. Y., May 28.—The bicycle races here yesterday afternoon were stopped by a rain and hail storm after two events had been run off. The other races were declared off. The six and a half mile road race was won by Brownell Bulkley in 17 minutes and 50 seconds. One mile (open) was won by William Birdsall, Syracuse, in 2 minutes and 56 seconds.

Still Unable To Secure Bail.

Washington, May 28.—Francis J. Kieckhoefer, late disbursing officer of the state department, who has been under arrest since Sunday, charged with embezzlement, has not yet succeeded in securing the $25,000 bail fixed by the court. Unless security is furnished to-day Mr. Kieckhoefer will be comitted to the district jail.

Twelve-Year-Old Boy Commits Suicide.

Flemington, N. J., May 28.—Harry Rittenhouse, the 12-year-old son of Hiram Rittenhouse, a farmer, living in Barbertown, Hunterdon county, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself to a rafter in his father's barn. He was displeased because his parents told him to go to school.

Float the Stars and Stripes next Saturday.

The storm broke loose over St. Louis ahead of scheduled time. It was due June 6th, though such disastrous loss of life and property was not anticipated.

Speaking of the report that Plainfield girls smoke cigarettes, the New York Tribune says:

If that be true it would seem to be the duty of Plainfield's Moral Vigilantes to organize a crusade. They could begin with a mass-meeting and have James E. Martine, the "Farmer Orator," deliver a Ciceronian appeal to the girls.

The merchants in nearly all the towns and cities of New Jersey have inaugurated the early closing hours for the summer months. What a graceful action it would be towards the hard-working clerks if Plainfield merchants would follow suit.

Ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh has appeared as the champion of dog rights. Genial Fred thinks that the canine is a much maligned animal, and that to muzzle them is a high breach of the humane law, for the dog, as a rule, is meek and faithful, and bent on minding its own business. The muzzle, he claims, makes more dogs mad than the heat, and in Elizabeth, where he lives, a public meeting has been held asking the Common Council to strike out the ordinance compelling the use of these instruments of torture for the bow wows during the summer months.

How frequently Editor Runyon reminds one of the nursery rhyme which runs "Little Jack Horner sat in a corner eating a plum pie; he pulled out a plum and said 'What a big boy am I.'" Yesterday was one of the days when the erstwhile Cornellian story-teller and former stranded advance agent for a barnstorming troupe of actors, emulated the hero of the nursery rhyme. On Tuesday he published a story of the attempted Dunellen suicide, which some kind friend was graceful enough to say was fairly accurate. Now it is a well known fact that this journalist has a cranium enlargement, or, to be plain, a simple case of swelled head. To receive a compliment is to him a virtual recognition that he is the whole thing, and with this line of thought permeating his limited cephalic extremity, it follows in the natural course of events that he must give such a complimentary remark all the publicity that is possible in his sweat shop sheet. That action is to be expected from this Jack Horner example of a man, but the sweat-shop editor goes farther. Not content with gloating over what he calls his own success (and here is the gist of the moral taught by the nursery rhyme) he decries the efforts of others along the same line of work—that is to say, he criticises with sarcasm and derision those employed on The Daily Press. So far as the grammatical and rhetorical gracefulness and skill with which he writes is concerned, it is only necessary to say that his productions are inculcated with slang and epigrams, often suggestive, and always devoid of originality—terms eschewed by every intelligent writer by reason of their age. Yet with the unmitigated gall characteristic of the man who essays to be the Great Iam of the community, he poses as the example of perfect journalistic effort. The Daily Press young men may be "school boys," but they have some sense of decency and professional courtesy, which are notoriously lacking in the make-up of Editor Runyon, and if a prosperous and increasing business is any criterion the people of Plainfield are appreciative of the work they are doing for The Press.

—Lusardi, the North avenue fruit dealer, has just received 60 bunches of bananas and asks the public to not forget him when looking for first-class goods.

—The Daily Press was misinformed yesterday regarding the Pierson and Bohl case. Lawyer John Kirch appeared for Bohl and Lawyer Runyon for Pierson.

IS THE THING TO SUIT YOU.

The old gentleman with decaying sight often sighs:

"Oh for one hour of youthful joy,—
Give back my twentieth spring,
I'd rather laugh a bright haired boy
Than reign a gray haired King."

But if he had his vision restored to enjoy the beauties of nature and read his favorite newspaper as of yore, by going to Collier's and having his glasses fitted to suit his sight, he needn't repine, for he is a magician in restoring and mending sight. Defective vision is only neglect when Collier is ready to relieve you. 103 Park avenue. Established 1869.

—The late general tearout made by the sewer contractors on West Front street, west of Central avenue as far as Plainfield avenue, has left that thoroughfare in a most despicable condition.

—The pall-bearers at the funeral of Mrs. Fintin Hibbits, of Liberty street, which took place yesterday morning, were Peter Flynn, M. Muldowney, Ed Gavin, Mr. Claire, Ed Kline and M. Galbraith.

—Rehearsals are being held frequently for the entertainment to be given June 9th at Vincent chapel under the auspices of the Epworth League and Junior League of the First M. E. church.

—The horses attached to the South Plainfield stage balked at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Third street yesterday afternoon and narrowly missed backing the stage onto a young lady bicyclist who was following the stage.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

READY FOR WORK.

The Town Improvement Association to Start Spraying Trees.

The following is contributed by the Town Improvement Association:

Owing to the non-arrival of the proper hose the work of spraying the trees was not commenced Tuesday. Everything else is in readiness, Mr. and Mrs. Mali kindly loaning their spraying apparatus and the required number of subscribers having been obtained. Mr. Tobin will begin the work at once. The necessity of prompt effort if anything was to be done this season to exterminate the elm beetle, has occupied the attention of the Association rather to the exclusion of the work of the other committees. Some of the committees are not fully organized, but it is hoped that by the next meeting every committee will be at work.

Quite a number of suggestions have been sent to the Association in regard to certain matters. Noticeably, the careless manner in which the garbage is collected; also the number of apparently ownerless dogs roaming at sweet will through the streets. One thinks if the dog tax was collected thoroughly that Plainfield would be able to pave all its streets, and lay out parks, judging from the number of dogs in the city.

The interest of bicyclist is desired. They are all over and must see much that would make their suggestions of value to the Association, and it is to be hoped that they will report to the Outlook Committee. The following is a list of the various committees and the names of the ladies who have consented to serve on them, viz:

Committee on Cruelty to Children, Mrs. Horace Kimball, chairman, Mrs. Aaron Powell, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. H. C. Bowen, Miss Edith Leonard, Miss Haviland; committee on cruelty to animals, Mrs. D. W. Pond, chairman, Mrs. George Mellick, Miss Carrie Haviland, Miss Annie Murphy; committee on streets, chairman not appointed, Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Mrs. J. T. Baker, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. W. W. Howland; committees on trees and parks, Mrs. E. D. McCarthy, chairman, Mrs. J. K. Maxson, Mrs. K. T. Titsworth, Miss Mary Browne, Mrs. P. Mali, Miss Kate Martine; sanitary committee, Dr. Ida Hunt, chairman, Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, Mrs. Dr. Simpson; humane committee, Mrs. J. K. Meyers, chairman, Miss Isabelle Tweedy, Mrs. Dr. Murray; committee on railways, stations, etc., Mrs. M. H. Eton, chairman, Mrs. Charles Ellis; young peoples auxiliary, Miss E. E. Kenyon, Miss Adeline Newton, Miss J. Scribner and the principals of all public schools; press committee, Mrs. A. S. Patterson, chairman, Mrs. S. Taylor and secretaries of all committees; finance committee, chairman not appointed, Mrs. J. E. Tracy, Mrs. M. Tyler, Mrs. E. L. Walz, Mrs. C. J. Fisk, Mrs. H. Tracy; outlook committee, Mrs. S. R. Krom, chairman, Mrs. S. Haff, secretary, Mrs. O. R. King, Miss Emma Brown, Mrs. G. H. Frost, Mrs. Charles Schemerhorn, Mrs. D. P. Hall, Mrs. Edgar Smith, Mrs. W. B. Maxon, Mrs. C. Draper, Mrs. Edgar Mumford, Mrs. C. Reed, Miss Mary Martine.

—Mrs. J. J. Coard, of East Ninth street, has purchased a new horse.

—City Judge George W. DeMeza went to New York today to try a case before Judge Smythe.

—About twenty-five children from the public school enjoyed an outing yesterday in Hyde's woods.

—Edsall's Commercial Palace will remain open tomorrow evening and close on Decoration Day at 12 o'clock noon. The biggest bargains of his great sale are advertised in his new ad today.

—The first grand picnic of the Plainfield Catholic Club will be held at Vail's Grove Decoration Day afternoon and evening. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music.

—A delegation of about twenty men and women stood admiring the interior of the new First National Bank building at 11 o'clock last evening, and one woman was heard to remark that hereafter all her "pin money" would go there. The new safe deposit vaults will hold anything from "pin money" up to the surplus in the United States treasury. Even with all this there is plenty of room for the regular and transient depositors.

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. Perfect safety may be assured those who keep on hand DeWitt's Colic and Cholera cure, and administer it promptly. For cramps, bilious colic, dysentery and diarrhoea. It affords instant relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

A Deception Easily Practiced

is the offer of a reward for "any case of catarrh not cured" by certain "cures" or "blood medecines." Nothing is said regarding the number of bottles required, and therein lies the deception. The makers of Ely's Cream Balm have never resorted to such devices. Cream Balm is an elegant preparation, agreeable to use and immediate in its beneficial results. It cures catarrh. You can rely upon the fact that it contains no mercury nor other injurious drug. 50 cents.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SIGNS OF HARMONY

Peace Promised at the Prohibition Convention To-day.

FACTION TROUBLE MAY BE SETTLED

Broadguage Men Seem To Have the Best of It So Far, But the Single-guage Element Expect To Be on Top in the End.

Pittsburg, May 28.—The factional strife which characterized the first day's proceedings of the National Prohibition convention promises to be amicably arranged to-day, although the differences were not entirely adjusted when the convention reassembled this morning. While the broad-gauge element have, so far, shown the greatest strength the narrow-guage faction claim to have the majority with them, and express confidence of ultimate success. Yesterday's proceedings, it must be admitted, were not of the character to be expected from such a distinguished gathering. Chairman Dickie, replying to the address of welcome delivered by H. L. Castle of this city, said that he had attended many conventions of the party when it was a party of minor importance in the eyes of the older political bodies, but he thanked God that he had lived to see it become of such proportions that it was now recognized throughout the nation. Both speakers were frequently interrupted by applause. Mr. Dickie then presented the name of A. A. Stevens of Pennsylvania as temporary chairman. Chauncey G. Dunn of California presented, as a minority report from the committee, the name of E. J. Wheeler, and moved that it be substituted for that of Mr. Stevens. He was requested to sit down by Mr. Dickie, but refused. An uproar followed. Mr. Stevens took the chair. Mr. Dunn still refused to sit down and appealed from the decision of the chair. He was agaid requested to sit down and there was another storm of disapproval. "I am asking Mr. Dickie to rule upon the appeal," said Mr. Dunn; "we won't submit to this gag rule." There were cries from all parts of the house for Mr. Dickie to come forward and make a ruling on the appeal. He came out at length amid considerable uproar and said that there could be no appeal taken in an unorganized body. Finally for harmony's sake Mr. Wheeler withdrew his name and was loudly cheered.

First Victory for Narrow-Gaugers.

The acceptance of Mr. Stevens as temporary chairman was a victory for the delegates favoring a single issue declaration. Mr. Stevens, addressing the convention, reviewed the history of the Prohibition party, and paid a tribute to both of the presidential candidates who in turn had borne the standard of the party. In conclusion, he said that the republicans would at their convention declare for tariff reform, the democrats for sound money and the populists for free silver. Each had a dominant issue to advocate. The Prohibition party should now come forward with its dominant issue. It should have prohibition and none other. A. B. Wilson was named as temporary secretary. The convention then took a recess.

Broad-Gauger for Permanent Chairman.

When the convention reassembled a resolution was passed expressing regret for the sudden death of Hon. J. C. Brock, one of the delegates from Massachusetts. The committee on credentials reported 810 delegates present. A resolution pledging the convention not to abate its relentless war on the licensed rum power was ordered telegraphed to various religious bodies now in conference, also to congress, and to Miss Frances Willard and Lady Somerset in England. Mrs. Helen Gougar, chairman of the committee on permanent organization, reported the name of Oliver W. Stewart of Illinois, one of the broad-gaugers, as permanent chairman. Mr. Furguson of New York presented a minority report on behalf of the narrow-gauge men, recommending the continuance of Mr. Stevens in the chair as permanent chairman. A tangle over a point of order threw the convention into confusion, which last for half an hour.

Mr. Stevens Gives Way.

Some ill-feeling developed and Chairman Stevens himself was for a long time refused a hearing, but when at last he gained the attention of the disturbing elements he said that though he believed he had been put forward as a representative of the element in the convention which believed in prohibition and non-divisive issues, and though he believed that on a call of the states he would be sustained, he desired to withdraw his name. This announcement was received with cheers and the majority report of the committee was then adopted and Mr. Stewart was escorted to the chair, Mr. Stevens retiring with the thanks of the convention. Mr. Stewart in taking the gavel said it was not part of his duty to outline the platform of the party and he promised fair treatment to all. A motion made by Mrs. Gougar to hold a mass meeting last night, in lieu of a business session, was carried after considerable opposition, and at 6:15 p. m. the convention adjourned until this morning.

Outline of the Platform.

The committee on platform agreed to report a series of resolutions which recites the evils and corruption wrought in private and public life by the liquor traffic, rejecting all plans for regulation or compromise, such as local option, taxation, license or public control, and appeals to wage workers and church people to support the party. A minority report will be submitted by the broad-gaugers embodying a free silver plank, election of United States senators by direct vote and government control of railroads, telegraphs, etc.

Some say that the hypophosphites alone are sufficient to prevent and cure consumption, if taken in time. Without doubt they exert great good in the beginning stages; they improve the appetite, promote digestion, and tone up the nervous system. But they lack the peculiar medicinal properties and the fat found in cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites are valuable, and the cod-liver oil is valuable.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites contains both of these in the most desirable form. The oil is thoroughly emulsified; that is, partly digested. Sensitive stomachs can bear an emulsion when the raw oil cannot be retained. As the hypophosphites, the medicinal agents in the oil, and the fat itself are each good, why not have the benefit of all?

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

MY STRANGE PATIENT.

By William T. Nichols

[Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Co.]

"It is for Johnson," he condescended to explain.

"Very well; you shall have it," said I. "By the way, is your telegraph line to his house still in working order?"

"Yes; but it is not a telegraph, only a simple signal," he answered. "Enter, if you choose, and I will elucidate it."

We stepped into the living-room, on one wall of which he showed me a knob, so tiny as hardly to be noticeable. By pressing it, he explained, a metal disk was made to fall at the other end of the line, conveying the intelligence to the fisherman that he was to hasten to his employer. If he was absent from home, one of his brothers would respond to the summons.

"But if all three are away?" I asked.

"That will not occur," he replied, decidedly.

"But in case they are asleep?"

"The disk, in falling, strikes a gong. There is a provision for the chance."

Here was a further illustration of the ingenuity the man displayed in preparing for possible dangers. But, if he had taken the pains to insure support from Johnson in case of need, why had he not arranged a method of calling upon me also? Rather piqued, in spite of my dislike for him, I asked, bluntly, if some signal could not be devised.

"It is not a necessity," said he, dryly. And even had I been disposed to argue

He turned towards me like a flash.

the point there would have been no opportunity to do so, for Johnson entered the room, staggering under the weight of one of the cases. He gave me his customary curt nod, and carefully deposited his burden upon a table, Lamar stepping to the door and beckoning me to follow him before I could more than guess at what the contents of the case might be. But I walked home that night possessed by a notion that, when the cover was removed, a small arsenal might be found stowed away in the box, designed to supplement the brace of revolvers I had bought for Lamar soon after our coming to the shore.

X.

There was a struggle the following morning, in which courtesy and obstinacy were finely blended, when Mrs. Loring and her medical adviser came together for a discussion of her case. The points at issue were the length, particularity and minuteness with which she should describe her symptoms, real or imagined, the systems of treatment to which she had been subjected, the effects, good, bad or indifferent, produced by them, and the opinions thereof, weighty or valueless, of many persons unknown to her auditor. It was a contest, valiant but unequal, and at last the woman had the man at her mercy.

"Oh, doctor, dear doctor," she rattled on, "you can't imagine how pleased—yes, rejoiced—I am to be under your care. I wish I could tell you, describe to you, the miseries I've suffered, the horrors I've undergone at the hands of those wretches. Ugh! it makes me shiver to think of them. But I can't tell you; I can't bear even to think of them. Now there was that last one, so highly recommended, too. I went to him, doctor—picture my going to him—absolutely putting my life in his charge, doctor—just after I had escaped from that quack who had made me take electric shocks and ride a horse—such a dreadfully hard trotting horse, too—four hours every day. And what, doctor, do you imagine that next wretch did? Think of it! He thrust me into what he called a 'rest-cure;' absolutely nothing to do, nothing to see, nobody to speak to. Why, doctor, it was maddening, simply maddening!"

"My dear Mrs. Loring," I broke in, "pray do not agitate yourself with such memories. If you please—"

But she had regained breath and was again in full career. Rest-cures, water-cures, milk-cures, steam-cures: drenchings internal and external, pills, pads and plasters; sea air, mountain air; massage, calisthenics, and outdoor exercise; drugs by wholesale, diets without number, treatments representing a range from the latest and best in the medical science to a close approach to the superstitions of voudooism—all these she had survived. For two long hours her tale flowed on in a flood which overwhelmed all interruptions, and when she paused at last it was rather from weariness than from an exhausted subject.

For a woman of such experiences she looked remarkably well. Her complexion was pale and sallow, and her nerves were "on edge," as she herself phrased it; but the stethoscope showed that her lungs were not affected, and there was nothing to cause alarm in the action of the heart. Her digestion was weak—it could hardly have been otherwise after the trials to which it had been put for so many years—and unquestionably she had had some genuine twinges of rheumatism, but these were not very weighty reasons for traipsing about two hemispheres. As many of my predecessors had probably decided, it seemed clear to me that the best plan to pursue was to let her entertain herself wih some harmless dose, and to strive to induce her to forget that she believed herself an invalid.

"Your case, Mrs. Loring, is most interesting," said I, gravely.

"And complicated," said she, earnestly. "So many physicians have spoken of complications."

"They could hardly avoid it. But that is not the point just now. I shall have to ask you to submit implicitly to my guidance. I shall give you a prescription of great efficacy, but one which must be used with rigid care. You will arise at a regular hour—let us say seven o'clock. You will then take three drops of the medicine in a wineglass of water—the glass must be full to the brim. Then go out of doors and walk slowly for 15 minutes in the sunniest spot available, not for exercise, of course, but in order to have the circulation at its best to promote the action of the delicately powerful combination of drugs. I will arrange with Mrs. Clark for your breakfast diet. After breakfast you will sit in the open air for an hour, at the end of which time you will take a walk or ride. Don't return from it until the dinner hour, when you may take a second dose. Rest for an hour after dinner, and then pass your time as you please out of doors. A third dose should be taken at supper-time, and a fourth before retiring. I rely upon you to carry out these directions to the letter."

"Indeed I will," she promised, and then her face fell, and she leaned toward me as she asked: "Doctor, have I a tuberculous diathesis? There was a Frenchman, such a delightful man I thought at first, who talked so beautifully about that. Tell me, truly, do you think I have one?"

"Mrs. Loring," I declared, earnestly, "take my word for it, you have nothing to fear on that score."

"But there was that London doctor," she persisted, "he said that I was anaemic; and he looked so wise, with his great white beard like an ancient sage. If it had not been for the snuff, perhaps—but, doctor, do please tell me if he was mistaken; I had to give him up; really, doctor, I had to; the snuff was too much."

"Another instance of groundless fears," said I.

"And hereditary tendencies? So many advisers have spoken of them, doctor, but always so indefinitely; that is, all but one was indefinite, and he—would you believe it, doctor?—he insisted that there must be gout in the family, and he would have it so, though I knew, doctor, I knew he must be mistaken, for I never remembered—never, doctor, never—my father suffered in his feet but once, and then, doctor, I knew it was chilblains; I'm sure it was, doctor."

"Really, Mrs. Loring," I urged, "you have no cause of complaint against your ancestors, except, possibly in that you inherit from them susceptibilities of unusual keenness. There can hardly be an escape from some of the penalties nature exacts from the possessor of an artistic temperament. The finest porcelain demands the gentlest handling. I think you catch my meaning."

"Just as I have thought so many, many times," she declared, with a smile of delight. "You put it so feelingly, doctor—so feelingly. You can't realize how rejoiced I am to know that I am under your treatment. I shall expect you to accomplish wonders, doctor, really wonders."

"We shall do our best, you and I, and much can be counted on from the medicine you are to take. But remember, please, that the directions for its use are to be followed exactly."

Her face brightened.

"You won't mind showing me the prescription, will you?" she said. "I dearly love to see them, although of course I can't read them. They're like the hieroglyphics in the museum, so interesting and instructive; don't you think so, doctor?"

"Why certainly you can see it," said I, scribbling away on a sheet of my note book. "Here it is."

She took the paper, and surveyed it with something approaching awe, in spite of her long acquaintance with such documents.

Probably it was well for both of us that she could make nothing of it. There was quassia, to give an impressively vigorous flavor to the compound; tincture of asafoedita, for the sake of its bouquet; burnt sugar, to supply the proper color effect; and aqua pura to the amount of eight ounces. It would be an evil-tasting, evil-smelling, evil-looking mixture, quite capable of satisfying the patient's craving for gruesome potions, but harmless enough, notwithstanding its warnings to the senses.

"So reassuring, isn't it, doctor, to have things in black and white?" said she. "One sees them so much more vividly, don't you know?"

"Proof of the value of the eyes, Mrs. Loring."

"Indeed it is. That thought has occurred to me often, yes, so often." She sighed gently, as if there were something melancholy in the reflection.

"I shall drive to Bassettville this afternoon to have the prescription made up," I told her as I bade her good-morning; and her thanks pursued me as I hastened down the stairs and out of the house. Once out of range of her sight and voice, I paused to wipe my forehead, as a man will after finishing a long and trying task, no matter whether he be philosopher or navvy. I had a very kindly feeling for Mrs. Loring, and it was as much a part of my business to listen to her plaints as it was to endeavor to remove their cause, but no amount of reiteration of the fact sufficed to reconcile me to the infliction. She spoke so rapidly, and with so many exclamations, that her talk jarred on one's nerves as quickly as a brisk but irregular hammering. The lot of her niece as her constant companion was not to be envied: it was strange that it was not the girl who was in need of medical attendance. What an agreeable patient Miss Gray would have been! But, after all, I reflected, Dorothy Gray well was to be preferred to Dorothy Gray ill. And the next reflection, in natural sequence, was, where was she to be found?

No one was visible about the Clark premises; evidently the young lady was out for a stroll. Somewhat regretfully, I crossed the road to Mrs. Weston, who was enjoying one of her rare respites from household duties.

"I've got a new hired man," she proclaimed; "come 'long to-day, and I jes' hired him on the spot. My, but it's a relief! Till them boys grow up, I'll never feel real easy unless we've a good, steady man on the farm."

"Who is he? and where is he from?" I asked, knowing that a failure to evince interest in her acquisition would be highly unwise.

"I guess he's a tramp, though he looks kinder spruce for one of 'em. His name's Hiram Jones. You can see him weedin' over yonder."

"It strikes me he's a little awkward at it," I suggested, after a brief survey of the newcomer.

"Well, he comes cheap; seemed like he'd take most anything, he was that set to get work."

"Then he's not a tramp," said I. "By the way, will you have him harness my horse about two o'clock? Excuse me," I added, hastily, for Miss Gray had come into view as she turned the corner of the house over the way—"excuse me, I want to speak to that young lady."

The girl saw me as I hurried toward her, and, pausing, awaited me at the porch steps.

"Good morning, doctor," she said, with a hint of a smile, perhaps at the speed with which I made toward her.

"Good morning," I responded. "I hope you find your rooms comfortable?"

"They are very pleasant. But what do you think of my aunt?"

"Oh, she's well enough," said I, unguardedly. "That is, I mean, she's well enough comparatively; well enough, you know, to encourge me greatly, though of course you understand, far better than I can tell at first, how much she suffers."

She probably gauged my diagnosis correctly, although she said, gravely: "I am very glad to learn that you are hopeful."

"Of course we cannot expect any rapid improvement," I added, in my most professional tone. "Chronic cases involve slow recoveries."

"I must go to her now," said the girl, paying, it seemed to me, rather slight heed to the great truth I had stated. "I'm afraid I've sadly neglected her this morning."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Mary Mowinkel, of Duer street, has purchased a Crescent from F. L. C. Martin.

Fred VanEmburgh, of the dry goods firm of VanEmburgh & Son, rides a new wheel recently purchased.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's team, arrived home from Chicago yesterday covered with prizes and fame.

Samuel Dreier, proprietor of the West Front street pawnshop, is one of the latest converts to cycling. He is learning to ride at the Jersey Wheel Company's Academy.

There were only two members elected from this place in the L. A. W. during the week ending May 22d, and they were Mrs. J. R. Joy, of Willow avenue, and Isaac Risley.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received a shipment of seventeen wheels yesterday. There were six Crescent racers, nine Crescent road wheels and two Cleveland Swell Specials.

The list for the week ending May 22d has 1,894 new members, and the tatol L. A. W. membership is now 44,675. The New Jersey Division elected 118, making their total membership 3,003.

What is the matter with the L.A.W. members in Plainfield? Do they know anything about the list of premiums offered by the New Jersey Division to secure recruits? If not they should obtain an application blank at this office or of their local consul, Charles C. Lister.

In appointing new League hotels, Chief Consul Gentle of New Jersey requires contracts with the hotel men providing for a special discount to League Wheelmen. Violations of contracts are punishable by a $25 fine. The discounts will run from fifteen to thirty three and one-third per cent.

Some fast time was made at the Crescent Oval Tuesday afternoon. J. A Silvie, Jr., was trying a flying quarter, paced by Barnett and Carpenter on a tandem, and W. M. McCutchen followed Silvie. McCutchen finished ahead of Silvie and the tandem making the distance in 28 seconds. Silvie's time was 28 1-5 seconds.

The first collision of the season on the Crescent Oval happened yesterday morning when the bunch of riders who are training there started to spurt. J. A. Silvie, Jr., and Joe Donoghue came together and Donoghue was thrown. He was not seriously injured beside sundry scratches and bruises and a general shaking up. Neither wheel was damaged.

Riders on a century or other long road run, will find that by stopping every twenty-five miles or so and changing the position of their saddle and handle-bars even the least bit they will find great relief from any soreness or tired feeling which they may have experienced. The same result is accomplished by two riders of about the same stature changing wheels every few miles.

One of the latest conveniences offered to cyclists is a neat book containing soap. It is an oddity, but is sure to become popular among the wheelmen and women. The pleasure of a refreshing wash, in a trickling wayside brook, is often prevented by the absence of soap. A cyclist cannot carry a cake of that article about, but the new-fangled soap sheets in book form are prepared in such a way that anybody with a pocket can have soap handy, no matter how they travel.

The Jersey wheel made its first appearance on the track Tuesday afternoon when all the cracks, including Gus T. Burglund, the trainer of the team, had a try on it. Burgland declares that, aside from any interest he may have in the wheel, he believes it to be several seconds faster than any other wheel on the track. Charles A. Appley, of Elizabeth, was also there and was trying his new Jersey. If he does not win the Irvington-Milburn, he says, it will not be the fault of the wheel.

The riders who are training at the Crescent Oval enjoyed another little training trial last Tuesday afternoon. Trainer Burglund arranged the men as follows: A. H. Barnett, scratch; H. B. Mosher, 40 yards; W. M. McCutchen, 50 yards; J. H. Lake, 60 yards; Joe Donoghue, 120 yards and Joe Pike, 125 yards. Lake jumped at the end of the second lap and spurted the entire third lap. McCutchen hung on to him until the stretch and then came in a length ahead. Mosher pulled up and took second and Lake finished third. The time was 2:23, the last quarter being ridden in 29 seconds.

Mr. Archer, of the Jersey Wheel Company, has received for his use a handsome up-to-date Victor wheel.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's team, returned home to Elizabeth Tuesday and was up at the Crescent Oval yesterday.

Tuesday afternoon on the Crescent Oval, I. A. Silvie, Jr., rode one-quarter mile in 29 1-5. He was paced by Carpenter and Darling on a tandem.

Mifford Giles and Monte Scott, who are in training at Milburn for the road race Saturday, rode to Plainfield yesterday afternoon and spent a few hours with friends.

The L. C. Smith Gun Company, the makers of the Hunter wheel, have received an export order for 1,500 1897 wheels. There were about fifteen makers in the competition. Lister, of North avenue, is agent for the Hunter.

Chief Consul Potter of the New York Division intends to appoint official repair shops in the towns of the State where members of the League may have repairs made at a rebate. Each repair shop will have to pay a registry fee and execute a contract with the division.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—We ask privilege to issue challenge through your columns to ride a tandem wheel against any single rider in the State of New Jersey, distance, one-quarter mile, flying start, to take place on the Crescent Oval track on May 30th, 1896. R. Kissam, Fanwood; A. Mifford, Elizabeth.

AROUND THE BASES.

In the morning of Decoration day at 10 a. m. will begin a very interesting struggle between the Woodbridge Athletic Club, composed partly of the noted Brown brothers, and the Y. M. C. A. team. The batting order will be as follows: Y. M. C. A.—McKelvey, 2b; Dennis, c; Major s.s.; McLaughlin, 1b; Sanson, l.f.; Cory, 3b; Simmonds, r.f.; Townley, c.f.; Burt, p. Woodbridge Athletic Club—D. Brown, 1b; C. Rrown, 2b; A. Brown, 3b; Valentine, r.f.; Anness, l.f.; Hibbard, c; Bracken, s.s.; Gravenhans, c.f.; Smith, p; W. Brown, extra. The entrance to the ball field is on Washington avenue, first off from Front street, and directly across the brook from the Park club. Admission to grounds fifteen cents, including grand stand twenty-five cents. The grand stand is now in course of erection and accommodations will be reserved for ladies until within a short time of call of play. There will be no game in the afternoon owing to the bicycle meet to be held on Crescent Oval.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Some of the boys of this city have been arranging for field games to be held on the Crescent Oval, June 13th. Entries may be made with Stanley Peck, of Second place.

WITH ROD AND GUN

Bailey Mack, of West Third street, caught a three pound eel in the brook near Cadmus' mill yesterday afternoon.

—There will be tennis playing all day Saturday on the courts adjoining Grace M. E. church.

—There will probably be no rehearsal by the choir at Grace M. E. church Saturday night.

—Workmen have about completed the extensive improvements on Frank Schuck's house on Vine street.

—Perseverence Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, meets tomorrow evening. Routine business will be transacted.

—The Sunday-school teachers of Grace M. E. church met last evening and talked over plans for increasing their efficiency.

—Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of Monroe Avenue chapel, will preach at Grace M. E. church Sunday morning in exchange with Rev. H. J. Johnston.

—Superintendent Adleman has received word that the new street cars were shipped to Plainfield today. As soon as possible they will be put into service.

—No. 2 engine was taken to the Westervelt avenue bridge last evening for a wash and everything worked fine. With a 1¼ inch nozzle a stream was thrown 260 feet and with a two way nozzle the stream was thrown 150 feet.

Miss Emma F. Gamberton, of this city and Miss Katherine Bennett, of Manasquan, left Plainfield this morning to spend two weeks in Norfolk, Va. They will visit Baltimore, Suffolk and Washington.

Henrietta, the four-year-old daughter of Katie Jackson, of 302 Plainfield avenue, was stricken with spasms on Tuesday afternoon and for a time her life was despaired of. Dr. Gaston, the attending physician, is bringing the child around, however.

HUNDREDS KILLED.

Impossible to Tell the Exact Number of Fatalities in St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 28.—A conservative estimate this morning placed the loss of life during yesterday's tornado in St. Louis and East St. Louis at about four hundred persons, although it was utterly impossible definitely to determine the number of dead.

Two hundred lives were lost in this city, and two hundred in East St. Louis. Thousands were injured, many of them so badly that they cannot recover. The damage will amount to many millions of dollars, but cannot be estimated now with any degree of accuracy.

The number of bodies which may be buried in the ruins of the many collapsed buildings is a matter of conjecture only, and the extent of the disaster is such that it may be many days before the work of recovering the bodies can be accomplished.

A Paradise for Wheelmen.

Park avenue is at present a perfect paradise for wheelmen, and North avenue is fast becoming one. Two or three days more will be needed to complete that and then the steam roller will go to work on Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Franklin place.

Treated at the Hospital.

Wm. Osborne, colored, employed as hostler by Terrill & Cole, was struck in the eye yesterday, sustaining slight injury. He went to the hospital and received proper treatment, and was able to leave the institution today.

The Reason, Perhaps.

"I wonder," mused the fluffy girl, looking in the fire in a musing mood, "I wonder why June is the month supposed to be the best suited for weddings?"

"Perhaps," ventured the sharp-nosed girl, "perhaps it is so arranged in order that the young couple shall not have the honeymoon spoiled by any rows as to who shall get up on cold mornings to light the fire."—Indianapolis Journal.

MAY EVENT IN SOCIETY.

RECEPTION GIVEN BY MR. AND MRS. RANDOLPH STELLE LAST NIGHT.

Marked by the Absence of Formality and the Geniality of the Host and Hostess—Guests Who Were Present.

The grandeur of Plainfield's society people was never more resplendent than last night when they gathered at the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph M. Stelle, who were recently married in honor of the event. The home was graced by wealth, beauty and culture, and the entire absence of formality in every particular made the event a happy one.

The genial manner of the host was only equalled by the personal charm of the hostess whose introduction into Plainfield's society was thereby made. During congratulations, Rogers' orchestra rendered a selection of classical music which gave additional charm to the event. A number of the guests sought the spacious veranda where they enjoyed their supper amid the cooling breeze.

There were no special decorations, save here and there a cluster of beautiful roses, while the dining table had for its attraction a large bowl of roses.

The following guests offered congratulations during the evening. Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Miss Ida Yerkes, Miss Grace Yerkes, Mayor and Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, Councilman and Mrs. Harold Serrell, ex Councilman F. E. Marsh, Miss Florence Marsh, Miss Anna Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. White, Miss White, Miss Martine, James E. FRANKLIN COUNCIL ENTERTAINS.

Central Council, of Westfield, Pays Franklin Council a Fraternal Visit.

After the regular business of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., was transacted at their meeting last evening the Council went into a social session and were entertained by the members of the home Council and of Central Council, No. 131, of Westfield, who paid the local Council a fraternal visit by a stage load of about twenty-five. The evening was passed very pleasantly by remarks for the good of the Order interspersed by several banjo solos by W. C. Force, accompanied by A. Carpenter on the organ. Speeches were made during the evening by Stamets, Ward, Hall, Cox, Pickel and others of Central Council, and Young, Long, Pangborn, Thorn and others of the home Council. After the meeting the members and their guests adjourned to the banquet room above where a bountiful repast was served. The members of Central Council left for home about midnight well pleased with their visit.

Salvationists to Farewell.

Captain Minnie Bryant and Lieuts. McElroy and Dammes will farewell from the local corps of the Salvation Army Sunday night. Captain Bryant is a California girl and at the farewell meeting she will give her experience in the Salvation Army. She and Lieut. Dammes will go to Danbury, Conn., while Lieut. McElroy will go to Asbury Park.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. ADDRESS BY MRS. BOOTH.

A PARLOR CIRCLE OF WOMEN HEAR THE COMMANDER'S WIFE TALK.

Mrs. Booth Says the Volunteer Movement is in No Way Antagonistic to the Salvationists, Though it Closely Resembles It.

In spite of the unpleasant weather, the delightful home of Mrs. Francis E. Wood, of Franklin place, was crowded, yesterday afternoon, with Plainfield women, who had been invited to meet and listen to Mrs. Ballington Booth, the charming woman who, with Commander Booth, her husband, is at the head of the new American Volunteer movement.

Mrs. Booth was introduced by Rev. Erskine M. Bodman and stood on the landing of the wide staircase to deliver her little informal talk, making a very pretty picture, with her sweet, young face and military costume. Hearty applause greeted her appearance, and her address was listened to by all present with the deepest and most sympathetic interest.

The new movement, Mrs. Booth said, is now only in its infancy, it having only been in existence about three months. She believed, however, that it was well-pleasing in the sight of God, and that He would prosper it. The movement was started by the Booths at the earnest solicitation of people all over the country, and already it has been shown that it has a great work before it. It is in no way antagonistic to the Salvation Army, though in some way it resembles it. Its purpose is, as the Booth's purpose has always been, to save the lost, to lift up the fallen and to cheer the disconsolate. Slum work and the work of the rescue homes have not yet been begun, as the financial state of the Volunteers will not admit of it, but they will be started as soon as possible. Mrs. Booth is especially interested in the prison work which she inaugurated last Sunday at Sing-Sing. Over fifteen men that day publicly announced their determination to begin then to live the Christian life, and the whole prison felt the influence, many men being found by the wardens in their cells weeeping from thoughts aroused by that morning's service. From some, Mrs. Booth has since received earnest, manly letters; one man begged her to go to see his wife, and help her also. A wide field of work has thus been opened up to the Volunteers; work that shall surely receive the "Well Done" of Him who shall say to them, "I was in prison and ye visited me."

The Volunteers have already a "Defenders' League" numbering twelve hundred and daily increasing. The Defenders pay a yearly subscription of five dollars and are only required to speak a good word for the Volunteers when occasion offers. They are entitled to wear the silver pin of the league and are given a pass which gives them special privileges at meetings, etc.

Cards and pencils were then distributed among the guests, that any who wished to join the league might sign their names. Quite a number did so, then Mrs. Booth answered a few questions from the audience, after which the ladies gathered around her and sociability reigned for the remainder of the afternoon. All came away thoroughly fascinated by the bright, womanly commander and heartily interested in the noble work which the American Volunteers are so earnestly striving to do.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

ELECTRICITY PLAYS LIVELY PRANKS IN THIS SECTION.

A House on Somerset Place Damaged by a Sudden Visitation.—Conductor Dodwell's Family Get a Very Bad Scare.

The lightning visited the borough yesterday afternoon and succeeded in partially unroofing the house of Charles E. Wakefield on Somerset place and damaging the front hall.

At about 3:30 o'clock, the residents of the borough were startled by a blinding flash and a tremendious clap of thunder, both coming together. Mrs. M. A. Wakefield and S. W. Wakefield, respectively mother and brother of Chas. E. Wakefield, were sitting in the front hall of the latter's home when the flash and crash came. The room was brilliantly illuminated and a shower of plaster was sent over them. They were stunned by the shock and did not completely recover from it for sometime.

The damage was not great. A portion of the slate roof was torn away, and the plastering and part of the woodwork, loss probably $100, insured. Mrs. Bennett, a neighbor, and her little boy, were also in the house at the time and were stunned.

Another place where the lightning played havoc yesterday afternoon was at the home of Charles Dodwell, in Dunellen. Mr. Dodwell is the well-known conductor of the 8:30 express train and was out on the road when the accident occurred. Mrs. Dodwell was working near the kitchen stove, singing a hymn to keep up her courage, while her little boy sat near. The stove was overturned by the lightning but Mrs. Dodwell did not feel the slightest shock. The dining room and kitchen were a complete wreck while the walls of some of the other rooms were partially damaged. The debris caught fire and there promised to be a lively conflagration to add to the excitement of the storm. Mrs. Dodwell's screams attracted the neighbors and the fire was soon extinguished.

Eighteen lights of glass were smashed. The accident happened at 3:15 o'clock, for when the clock was found amonst the ruins it had stopped at that time.

The wind blew a gale in Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, and rain fell in torrents. At Elizabeth the fall was 1.60 inches in less than an hour. The sewers could not carry off the water, and the principal streets were flooded. Broad street, under the Central Railroad bridge, was submerged to a depth of three feet. The trolley system was blocked half an hour. At Cranford and Westfield much damage was done to trees by the wind and lightning.

James Slack, a lineman for the Telephone Company, was knocked ten feet by an electric shock on Westfield avenue, and his hands were burned. He was hauling a coil of wire when the lightning struck it. Frank Williams, chief lineman for the company, was knocked over a box by the same shock.

During the shower yesterday afternoon, William C. Smith was working on the North Plainfield fire alarm tower and he was nearly paralyzed from shock.

One of the women employed about the new Mountainside Park Hotel was so overcome by schock during the shower yesterday afternoon that medical attendance was found necessary.

A BIRTHDAY SOCIAL.

The Approaching Storm Dispersed the Affair at an Early Hour.

The thunder rolled in the distance, and, in consequence, the attendance at the "birthday" social of the Sunday School of the Monroe Avenue chapel was comparatively small, but those that did brave the threatening storm had a very pleasant evening. A programme was rendered in the first part of the evening, which consisted of a piano duet by the Misses Etta and Edna Philips, recitations by Miss Edith L. Burt and Walter L. McGee, and a vocal solo by Miss Ada Rogers. Then followed the birthday offering by months. November furnished the largest collection, $5 49. The total amount was $25.50.

The refreshments next occupied the attention of those present. They were served by a committee of which Miss Georgie Beekman was chairman. The thunder became quite demonstrative while the lightning also suggested a coming storm. There was a general exodus to reach home before the storm arrived and the social broke up rather suddenly.

Appealing From a Borough Decision.

The appeal case of Jeremiah Rowe against the North Plainfield Board of Health occupied the attention of the Somerset County Circut Court this morning. It will be remembered that in February last Rowe was arrested and fined $10 for a violation of the health ordinance of the borough in having killed an animal on Grove street in front of his meat market. Ida Coon made the complaint to the Board of Health and the prosecution was made by them. Judge DeMeza represented Rowe and Charles A. Reed represented the Board of Health. The argument of the case was quite lively. Judge Bartine reserved decision until next week.

Laying Pipes Delayed.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company has experienced some delay in laying the gas mains on Central avenue, south of Randolph road. This delay has been occasioned because the company was unable to get the required size of pipe, but with the next shipment it is thought the work will not be further retarded, and that the contract will be speedily carried to completion.

Improving the Church Edifice.

The trustees of Mt. Olive Baptist church met Wednesday night and considered bids for painting the church. The contract was awarded to Marsh, Ayres & Co. Work will begin next week. Bids were also considered for putting a new slate roof on the parsonage, and the contract was awarded to Charles Graves. Work on the slating will commence immediately.

Taken With an Apopletic Fit.

Eugene Bramun, aged fifty years, who gave his residence as Newark, was taken with an apoplectic fit at Taylor's hotel, Dunellen, last evening. The ambulance was sent for and removed the man to the hospital, where his condition remains about the same. This is his second attack. For sometime the man has been working at Dunellen doing odd jobs.

—Tomorrow afternoon there will be bicycling at the Crescent Oval.

—Soda water free at Edsall's Commercial Palace tonight after seven to 9:30. The store will close tomorrow (Decoration Day) at 12 o'clock noon. Special attractions by way of great bargains are announced in his new "ad." today.

A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

THE MAY FESTIVAL AT THE M. E. CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

The Ladies Aid Society Conduct the Event With Their Usual Dash of Completeness—To Whom Credit is Due.

May has almost gone but the May festival, held in Vincent chapel last evening, was by no means out of season. It was a delightful affair and the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. church, under whose auspices it was given, increased their reputation of successful entertainers.

The decorations were not elaborate but very pretty and were principally about the booths. The lemonade booth was a veritable bower of ferns, while ferns and bunting were artistically arranged about the flower table.

The attendance was not as large as it would have been had the evening been a clear one but those who did come felt amply repaid. A delicious supper was served early in the evening and then followed a musical feast furnished by the Schubert ladies orchestra. Ice-cream and strawberries were an enjoyable part of the evening's programme as was also the candy table.

When so much work is done, there is always somebody that deserve lots of credit and in this case the somebodies were numerous. The entire affair was under the supervision of Mrs. L. M. French as general chairman, Mrs. H. A. McGee, the president of the society, aided materially in making the affair the great success it was.

The flower booth was looked after by the following committee: Mrs. Samuel Clark, Mrs J. R. Joy, Miss Whitney, Miss Bertha Whiting, Miss Harriet French and Miss Tautum. The candy table was under the charge of Mrs. Charles L. Lyman, Miss Chandler, Miss Edna French, Miss Saydee Douglass, Miss Margeretta Barnes and Miss Elsie Horne. The committee to look after the cakes and their table consisted of Mrs. J. P. Homan, Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, Mrs. C. H. Rugg and Mrs. J. P. Humble. The chocolate room was presided over by Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. J. C. Peck and Mrs. G. H. Whitney. Miss Lucie Palmer Davis, Miss Ethel Simmonds, and the Misses Davies had charge of the lemonade booth. That very necessary committee, the supper committee, was composed of Mrs. Garret Q. Packer, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. J. N. McNaughton, Miss Terrill, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. Edward Winter, Mrs. D. E. Davis, Miss Susie Jackson, Miss Smalley, Miss Laura Mulford and Miss Roberts. The waitresses were the Misses Cory, Eva Jenkins, Alice Jenkins, Bessie Day, Bertha Jenkins, Maud French, Bertha Moore, Edna Harris and Nellie Chandler. Miss Minnie Sharp looked after the ice cream.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

THE ALUMNI RECEPTION

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES OF '95 AND '96 ARRANGE AN EVENT.

The Reception to the Graduating Class Will Be Held in the Casino—Invitations to Be Limited to 400 Guests.

The commencement reception of the High School given every year to the graduating class by the two preceding classes, is the only annual social event recognized by the Board of Education. Until last year the reception has been given in one of the public school buildings. Last year the reception to the class of '95 was held in the Casino and it proved a great success. Only a limited number of invitations were issued and the great crowds of the previous years were done away with. This year this new precedent will be followed, and the reception to the class of '96 will be held in the Casino on the evening of Thursday, June 25th. So it was decided at a joint meeting of the classes of '94 and '95, held last evening at the High School.

Miss Mary Howe Miller, president pro tem of the class of '94, presided at the meeting, and both classes were well represented. It was the opinion of all that the reception should be held at the Casino and then details were arranged. The number of guests was limited to 400. Each member of the two receiving classes will receive four invitations and each of the graduates four. The assessment was decided upon, and the money appropriated to the different uses. A financial committee, consisting of John V. Beekman, Jr., '95, chairman; Norman H. Probasco, '94, and Albert E. Woltmann, '94, was appointed to supervise the collection of the money and arrange other necessary matter. The other committees appointed were as follows: Casino, Edgar I. Serrell, '95; decoration, Miss Emma V. Fish, '94, chairman, the Misses Etta Raybert, '95, Alice Needham, '94, Helen A. Hazen, '95, Henry B. Drake, '96, Fred W. Goddard, '94, and Geo. A. Horne, '95; printing, Charles B. Morse, '95, chairman; Thomas D. Blair, '95, and Edward O. Clark, '95; music, Miss Mary Howe Miller, '94. The meeting then adjourned and a consultation followed. An opportunity will be given members of the alumni to secure invitations.

EVENTS FOR TOMORROW.

Attractions that Plainfielders Will Have an Opportunity to Attend.

"What are you going to do on Decoration Day?" is a question that is agitating many Plainfielders today. There are lots of thing to do and variety enough to suit everybody. In the morning the G. A. R. will hold its Memorial Day parade, starting at 9 o'clock, then there is the baseball game between the Y. M. C. A. team and the Woodbridge "Browns" on the Washington avenue grounds, beginning at 10 o'clock. The Irvington-Milburn race, beginning at 11 o'clock, will attract the cycling enthusiasts. A picnic will be an all-day attraction for the young people of Monroe Avenue chapel. The tennis tournament of the the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will last all day at the club courts. There will also be medal play on the golf links of the club.

In the afternoon the Crescent Wheelmen's race meet, beginning at 3 o'clock, will attract a large crowd to the Crescent Oval. Others will attend the Memorial day exercises of the G. A. R. at Music Hall, which will begin at 2 o'clock. A good time is promised to those who attend the picnic at the Catholic Club at Vail's Grove in the afternoon and evening. Society will be attracted to the Rose tea at the Seminary from 4 to 8 o'clock. The Dunellen Tennis Club will formally open their courts and hold a reception in the afternoon.

In the evening, a "May Feast" will be held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, and the American Volunteers are preparing for a special meeting and festival to be held at Reform Hall.

There are other attractions for morning, afternoon and evening, but they are mainly of a private nature.

The ladies of Garfield League will hold their usual "Memorial Day" services in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield at ten o'clock. Prayer will be offered by Captain George D. Morrison, who served in the U. S. Navy during the rebellion, an address will be delivered by Rev. G. K. Newell, of Hope Chapel, the children of Houghton Division, No. 1, of the Children's Loyal Legion will sing and decorate the graves of the veterans of Union army and navy. The graves of the Revolutionary soldiers buried in the cemetery will also be decorated.

—The Plainfield Club will meet on Tusday evening to arrange for an outing of the club to High Bridge.

—Thomas Doud, of Plainfield, is making contracts to put in the house connections to the sewer in Westfield.

ONE-ISSUE MEN WIN

Narrow-Guagers Capture the Prohibition Convention.

BOLTERS FORM A NEW PARTY

Free Silver Faction Leave the Hall and Hold a Meeting of Their Own—Two Prohibition Tickets in the Field as a Result.

Pittsburg, May 29.—As they had all along claimed the narrow-guage faction proved themselves in the majority and in the end had everything their own way at the National Prohibition convention. The real test was made when the resolutions were reported. When the minority report was submitted Mr. St. John moved that it be made a part of the majority report, and that the whole should be considered section by section. A motion to lay the minority report on the table was then made, but was defeated by a vote of 492 to 310. This was a test vote, and was regarded as a signal victory for the broad-gaugers, or silver men. A great commotion was created when vote the was announced. The motion to make the minority report a part of the majority report was carried. A motion to take up the report section by section was likewise carried with a cheer. The first seven planks, including the one favoring woman's suffrage, were then taken up, and as they did not differ materially in either report, were adopted.

Silver Plank Defeated.

The convention proceeded to the immediate consideration of the free silver plank and it was discussed with great warmth on each side. After three hours' hot debate the free silver plank was defeated by a vote of 387 ayes to 427 noes. Two of the Iowa delegation announced that they voted for the plank under instructions and against their convictions. Five of the Michigan delegates under the leadership of Prof. Dickie, ex-chairman of the national committee, disobeyed instructions of the convention and voted "no." The chair declared the free silver resolution lost, and after the cheering and excitement which this announcement caused had quieted down, the convention proceeded to the consideration of other parts of the platform.

Single Plank Men Renew the Fight.

Before much progress had been made, Mr. Patton of Illinois upset the whole course of proceedings and precipitated a lively debate by opposing the nonsectarian school resolution as being the work of the American Protective union, and he appealed to the convention not to adopt anything which would prevent their enlisting all good citizens to aid them in fighting against the rum power. He proposed a substitute platform which omitted mention of every subject, woman suffrage included, except prohibition. Gov. St. John, his voice showing great emotion, rose and said, as the single plank men had been successful and had induced the convention to dodge the greatest question of the day, the silver question, he was in favor of turning over the whole organization to them, and if they must have a single plank platform he was inclined to think this was as good a one as could be had. In the meantime Mrs. Helen Gougar and other prominent woman suffragists, manifesting great excitement, demanded recognition to denounce "those cowardly men."

Broad-Gaugers Knocked Completely Out.

In a scene of intense confusion the previous question was ordered by a rising vote and Mr. Patton's substitute was declared adopted, thus becoming the sole platform of the party. The result seemed to take the broad-guagers completely by surprise, and in the midst of great excitement Mr. St. John came forward and changing his recently expressed opinion that Mr. Patton's single plank platform was the best that could be had under the circumstances, moved to reconsider the vote by which it had been adopted. The narrow-gauge men at once moved to lay this motion on the table and by a rising vote, in which everybody seemed to be standing up for both sides of the question at the same time, the motion to table the reconsideration was declared adopted. A recess was then taken until 8 o'clock.

Nominations Speedily Made.

About 300 delegates attended a broad-guage caucus, including sixty women. Various bolting propositions were voted down, and the decision was reached to postpone all action until after adjournment of the regular convention. At the night session the nominations were speedily made. Joshua Levering of Maryland and ex-Gov. Hughes of Arizona were placed in nomination, but as the latter's nomination was not seconded his name was withdrawn, and Mr. Levering was nominated by acclamation. At this point about 200 free silverites and suffragists left the hall to hold a meeting elsewhere. Confusion again broke forth, and a motion was made to reinstate the suffrage plank in the platform. It was finally changed, making simply a declaration, and was adopted. Hale Johnson of Illinois was nominated for vice-president, and at 12:30 a. m. the convention adjourned sine die.

Bolters Organize a New Party.

The bolting delegates who withdrew from the Prohibition convention held a meeting and organized "the National party" with "home rule" their motto. A platform was adopted embodying the minority report which was submitted to the Prohibition convention. C. E. Bentley of Nebraska was nominated for president, and J. H. Southgate of North Carolina for vice-president. A national committee with L. B. Logan of Ohio, chairman, was organized.

$10,000 CHANGED HANDS.

Yesterday's Race Between Crews of the New York and Cincinnati an Exciting One.

New York, May 29.—It is said that nearly $10,000 changed hands on the result of the race between crews of the cruisers New York and Cincinnati, as the men on the latter vessel backedup their belief that their representatives would win in true sportsmen's fashion. The race was over a four-mile, straightaway course, and was rowed in a deep-rolling sea, the New York's crew winning by ten open lengths. The New York crew has rowed in half a dozen races and has never yet been beaten. Abel Davis, a West Indian, who has become thoroughly Americanized by thirty years' service in the navy, was coxswain of the New York boat, and "Bob" Winters attended to the same duty in the stern of the Cincinnati's cutter.

JASPER RE-ELECTED.

Gilman Withdrew His Name from the New York School Superintendency Contest.

New York, May 29.—At a meeting of the board of education last evening John Jasper was elected city superintendent of schools for the fourth successive term of six years. Daniel Coit Gilman of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, withdrew his name at the last hour and thus assured the election of Mr. Jasper. Charles B. Gilbert, superintendent of the public schools of St. Paul, Minnesota, and president of the National Educational association, was nominated for the position, but he received only six votes to Mr. Jasper's thirteen. Mr. Jasper's salary will be $7,000 a year.

Senate May Sit To-morrow.

Washington, May 29.—The question of adjourning over for Decoration day is still unsettled in the senate. A delay of one day means the loss of valuable time and it will be antagonized by Senator Hale, who is in charge of two of the important conference reports. If to-day can be occupied in the hearing of conference reports it may happen that adjournment over this holiday can be secured without opposition.

Bond Measure Likely To Pass.

Washington, May 29.—Those who have been clinging to the hope that the debate on the anti-bond bill, now before the senate, would cause a change in the opinions of certain senators, have abandoned hope and now say that the proposed measure will pass. A canvass has been made of the senate and it is believed that the anti-bond proposition will carry in the proportion of 48 to 41 on a total vote.

Willimantic Bank Frauds.

New Haven, Conn., May 29.—In the Dime Savings bank investigation at Willimantic it has been found that the signature of a depositor had been forged to a receipt for a large amount, although entered on the books of the bank as paid. The fraud was proved by the fact that it had not been entered on the depositor's pass book.

Bank Teller Convicted of Embezzlement.

Salem, Mass., May 29.—The jury in the case of Clarence Murphy, teller of the Salem National bank, charged with embezzlement, reported a verdict of guilty on sixty-six counts as alleged yesterday afternoon. District Attorney White gave notice that he would move for sentence to-day.

Flowers on Gresham's Grave.

Washington, May 29.—Yesterday was the first anniversary of the death of Secretary Walter Q. Gresham, and his grave in the Arlington National cemetery was profusely decorated with flowers contributed by friends in Washington and collected by a negro servant of the Gresham family.

French Academy Again Rejects Zola.

Paris, May 29.—M. Gaston Paris, the distinguished French philologist, son of the celebrated scholar, Pautin Paris, has been elected a member of the French academy. M. Emile Zola, the novelist, was again a candidate for the honor, but was rejected.

Match Factories To Be Closed.

Oswego, N. Y., May 29.—The Diamond Match company announces its intention of closing immediately the factories at Wilmington, Del., and Westville, Conn., and doubling the capacity of its big factory here.

MISSION HOUSE PLANS

Presbyterian Assembly Adopts Report of Joint Committee.

THE MODERATOR ELECTED CHAIRMAN

Gen. Harrison and Ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker Mentioned, Among Others, Who Are To Investigate the Question of Sale of Building.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 29.—The knowledge that the much discussed Fifth avenue mission house matter was to be the order of yesterday afternoon's session of the Presbyterian general assembly brought a great crowd into the church where the sessions are being held. The floor was packed with elders and ministers and the seats in the gallery were filled with the wives of the commissioners and other ladies of Saratoga. The plan was to swing the report with the indorsement of the forty-two members of the joint committee through the assembly without debate. Chairman Kane of Indiana arose at the opening of the assembly and read the report, as follows: "Resolved, that the said communication and the subject matter thereof be, and are hereby, referred to a special committee of eleven to be appointed by the moderator with instructions to said committee to confer with the boards of home and foreign missions and advise as to the most prudent course to be pursued in connection with the said property. This committee shall also publish at the earliest possible date such information as in their judgment will be of value to the church at large." The resolution of the committee was unanimously adopted with great applause. The moderator was proposed as chairman of the committee. Mr. McLeod objected on the ground that the committee had agreed that none but laymen outside the assembly should serve on this committee. By vote of the assembly the moderator was appointed chairman of the committee. The assembly then arose and sang the long meter Doxology.

The Report.

It was learned before the opening of the Presbyterian general assembly earlier in the day that the joint committee on the Presbyterian mission house had prepared a report endorsing the Hubbard proposition for the pre-occupancy of the Lenox mansion by the mission boards and the sale of the Presbyterian house on Fifth avenue and Twentieth street. The whole subject of the propositions to be referred to a committee of eleven men of national reputation, outside of New York, who shall meet and advise and confer with the two boards of home and foreign missions and decide what shall be done with both properties. A list of fifteen names was prepared by the committee. From this list the moderator is requested to select the committee of eleven. The names suggested include ex-President Harrison, ex-Postmaster-General Wanamaker, Marvin R. Hughitt, and Gen. Swing of Philadelphia.

MAHER-SLAVIN FIGHT.

Gov. Morton Calls the Sheriff of Queens County's Attention to His Duty.

Albany, May 29.—The Rev. Charles Park called at the executive chamber yesterday afternoon and presented a remonstrance signed by himself and other clergymen of Long Island City against the projected fist fight between Peter Maher and Frank P. Slavin, which is advertised to take place at the Eureka Athletic club in that city this evening. In pursuance of this request Gov. Morton addressed this communication to the sheriff of Queens county: "I am advised by citizens of Queens county that a violation of the law of this state in relation to prize-fighting is intended to take place in or near Long Island City. I therefore admonish you that it is your sworn duty to use every means at your command, or under your authority, to prevent any violation of the law in this regard, and to arrest all parties who participate in or aid and abet any such unlawful acts. Your duty is clearly defined by the law and you have the power to call upon all peace officers and the national guard, if necessary, for aid. LEVI P. MORTON,
"Governor."

Cramps Company Elect Officers.

Philadelphia, May 29.—The annual meeting of the William S. Cramps Sons Ship and Engine Building company was held last evening at which a new board of directors was chosen and the following officers elected: President, Charles H. Cramp; vice-president and treasurer, Henry W. Cramp; secretary and auditor, John Dougherty; assistant secretary and treasurer, Theodore W. Cramp.

THE HONEST SHAKERS AND THEIR CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

The shopkeeper who cheats us by lying with regard to the quality of his goods, and the grocer or the butcher who gives us short weights, is a thief. However, their knaving touches nothing but our pocketbook. There is another widespread form of misrepresentation of a far more dangerous and villainous character.

We refer to the false statements and worthless guarantees that frequently accompany medicines. To guarantee a medicine to cure is to brand it as a quack product. If we can guarantee to cure disease, then we can guarantee everlasting life, for in a large majority of cases people die of disease, the proportion of violent or accidental deaths being very small.

The Shakers have always been known as a most upright and honorable people, and their success in the manufacture of medicines has also been well-known. It is therefore not surprising to find them pursuing a very original and novel plan for the introduction of their remedy for dyspepsia.

These God-fearing people, whose motto has always been "Try all things and hold fast that which is good," have put upon the market ten cent sample bottles of their product, or sufficient to give it a trial.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that for the trivial sum of ten cents, a person can usually determine as to whether or not it meets the requirements of his case. There are forms of dyspepsia which it won't help, but these are very rare. In most cases the first dose relieves all distress and an increase of appetite at once follows.

All druggists have it and the next time you are troubled wtih indigestion send out and try this popular and successful product. It represents nearly a hundred years of patient investigation and study.

SIX HUNDRED DEAD

Latest Estimate of the Tornado's Victims About St. Louis.

1,000 INJURED NOW IN DISPENSARIES

Work of Rescue in the Devastated Districts — Hundreds of Buildings in Ruins and the Streets Littered with the Wreckage.

St Louis, May 29.—A conservative estimate made this morning places the number of dead in the storm stricken district of St. Louis and vicinity at 600. One thousand injured are now in the dispensaries and other are being brought in, The property loss in this city and East St. Louis will exceed $4,000,000. The Eads bridge is damaged $500,000. The damage to the auditorium, the republican convention hall, is slight, and the building can be put in good order within ten days. The number of identified dead in this city this morning was eighty-nine. In addition to those dead there are at the morgue and unidentified the bodies of twenty-four men and six women. The list of identified is being added to hourly. It is reported that twenty-nine employes of the Ligget & Meyers tobacco factory are in the ruins of the buildings. Twenty-five employes of the St. Louis Wooden Gutter company are missing and are thought to have been killed when the building fell and were buried.

The Dead at East St. Louis.

The identified dead in East St. Louis this morning number 134. The unidentifed are 42 men and 18 women. Most of these were workmen about the different freight depots. Twenty men, employes in the Vandalia depot, are missing, and are believed to have been killed when the building fell. A thorough investigation of the destruction is being made, and when it is known what the death rate has been it will exceed 200. Many are injured on both sides of the river beyond hope of recovery. The list of injured reported number over 1,500, and a great many were located at home and no report made. Two school houses in East St. Louis serve as temporary hospitals, while on the other side the armory does the same service. Every private hospital is crowded.

Vast District in Ruins.

A district in this city bounded north by Chicago avenue, west by Grand avenue, south to the city limits and east to the river, is virtually a mass of ruins. Not an electric light has burned nor a car run in that section comprising 720 city blocks since 5:20 p. m. Wednesday. Within this territory scercely a building has escaped injury and thousands of them are in ruins. On surveying the desolate scene one marvels that the deaths are not much greater. Beginning at the western boundary of the scene is the handsome and exclusive residence section known as Compton Hill, the home of the fourth generation of the early French settlers of St. Louis. This aristocratic home place is strewn with debris. Just east lies Lafayette park. There the trees, shrubbery, fountains and statuary that have been the pride of the city were caught by the wind and the place is shaven bare as with a giant scythe.

Thousands Homeless.

Further east and south to the city limits were the homes of thrifty German-Americans who have given a distinct character to the district. To-day thousands of them are homeless; many of them lying like nomads amid the ruins, or sharing the roofs of their hospitable and more fortunate neighbors. Interspersed in this latter section and on the east to the river are mills, breweries and numberless manufacturing concerns. These were fair targets for the storm and they suffered. It was this class of losses that add most to the wiping out of what is conservatively stated to be $4,000,000 invested capital. There are sixteen breweries within these boundaries, worth $4,000,000, and while none are destroyed, all are damaged.

House After House Demolished.

The storm was most destructive in force when it crossed Seventh street from the east. Eddying currents of wind again and again returned to make that street a wilderness. At least forty people were killed along this thoroughfare and the streets immediately adjacent. House after house was totally demolished, and the wonder grows with extended investigation that the number of deaths is not far in excess of what it now appears to be. Nally's saloon at South Seventh street was a total wreck. When it fell it was full of men who had taken refuge there, and from fifteen to twenty were killed. The force of the wind was so frightful along here that iron trolley supporting polls of the Southwestern Electric line are bent over the street. They did not break, but bent like copper wire. Of course, all the telegraph poles are down, many of them snapped in twain, with the topheavy heads hanging over the street, held aloft by the wires, which still cling to them. At the Vermont Marble works, 1125 South Seventh street, the wreck was complete. It was here that Henry Henz, a driver for the concern, was killed. He was buried beneath tons of the great blocks of stone, which were hurled about by the wind.

Eighty Persons in One Wrecked House.

The saddest place of this frightfully desolated street was on the southeast corner of Rutger street. Here had stood the three-story brick saloon and boarding house of Fred Mockenheimer. It was occupied by twenty families, the full number of souls reaching at least eighty. When the storm struck it it went up like a dry puff ball, burying the inmates. No one knows how many dead its ruined brick and mortar conceal. Eighteen persons have been taken out dead and more than a dozen more or less injured. The body of a gray-haired woman was discovered and removed, but her name could not be learned. A company of firemen was assigned to the work of rescue, and they are working at it manfully. They were assisted by relatives of those who are supposed to be beneath the debris.

River Disasters.

On the river the disasters were numerous. In all ten large passenger steamers, five ferryboats, two transfer boats, two tug boats and half a dozen small pleasure barges were driven to the opposite shore or sank outright. A great many lives were lost by the sinking of barges and smaller craft. In most every case there was at least ten men on board each of them and in many cases several of them are still missing. On the excursion boats and steamers were many women who are among those who perished.

REIGN OF TERROR.

The Scene of Destruction at East St. Louis Almost Beyond Description.

Almost a reign of terror prevails in East St. Louis. Save for a tug and a few row boats, placed at the service of newspaper men and others whose duties called them to the scene, the place was cut off from communication with this city since Wednesday night until this morning, a section of the upper or railroad portion of the Eads bridge having been carried away, while guards were stationed at either end to prevent pedestrians using the foot bridge. Words can scarcely describe the scene of ruin and horror and it will be days before the number of victims are known.

Searching for the Dead.

In the devastated district the search for the dead, buried in the ruins, was carried on all last night by the aid of torches and locomotive headlights. Details of police keep the crowds at a distance, while the air is filled with the shrieks and sobs and hysterical lamentations of bereaved. Ever and anon the clanging of a gong is heard in the distance and street cars and vehicles come to a stop while an ambulance dashes by to add one more victim to the record of the dead at one or another of the extemporized morgues. The streets in the centre of the city, usually active with pedestrians, are deserted save for those whose avocations keep them from their families or friends. Only a complete search of the acres of ruins can tell the true story, for the people in the stricken district are utterly unable to tell a coherent story. In the matter of age, the dead range from a male baby of three months to a great grandmother of 92. A tabulation made this morning by the St. Louis Chronicle gives these figures: Identified dead in St. Louis, 121; unidentified, 30; injured, 447. East St. Louis: Dead, 129; unidentified, 125, injured, 158. The total number of families who are without homes and whose every article of household effects was swept away by the storm is variously estimated at from 500 to 800. It will be several days before a complete and reliable roster can be made.

IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

Loss of Life and Destruction Over a Large Portion of the State.

Chicago, May 29.—The cyclone passed through southern Illinois and is believed to have spread destruction over a large extent of territory. New Baden, a village on the Air line west of Centralia, is reported to have been destroyed, except for six houses, and several lives were lost. Seven persons are reported killed and thirty injured at New Madrid, southeast of Centralia. The villages of Boies and Dix were partially destroyed and several persons killed. It is estimated that fifty lives have been lost in Clinton, Washington and Jefferson counties and a vast amount of farm property destroyed. Centralia was not touched.

Philadelphia's Generous Offer.

Philadelphia, May 29.—Mayor Warwick has sent the following telegram of sympathy and offering aid to the mayor of St. Louis: "We have learned with sincere regret of the calamity that has visited your city, and I, as mayor of the city of Philadelphia, extend to you the heartfelt sympathies of the citizens of our city in your hour of need. As president of the citizens' permanent relief committe we heartily offer to you our aid. Let us know at your earliest convenience if our assistance can be of any use to you.

Congress Offers Tents.

Washington, May 29.—A joint resolution has been passed by congress providing for the loan of tents to the sufferers by the appalling storm in and near St. Louis. This action was taken rather because it would appear an ungracious act not to pass it, than because it was regarded as necessary.

Harrisburg's Purse Is Open.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 29.—Mayor Patterson has sent the following telegram to the mayor of St. Louis: "The people of Harrisburg direct me to extend to you their sympathy in this hour of your great disaster and to tender you substantial aid if desired We await your wishes." The mayor will call a public meeting and request Gov. Hastings to preside if the reply from St. Louis warrants him in so doing.

Boston Offers Aid.

Boston, May 29.—Mayor Josiah Quincy has sent the following to Mayor Walbridge of St Louis: "The citizens of Boston have learned with deep regret and sympathy of the calamity which has befallen St. Louis. Please inform us if any outside assistance is required."

New York Anxious To Aid.

New York, May 29.—Mayor Strong has sent the following telegram to the mayor of St. Louis: "Can we do anything to aid you in taking care of the unfortunates in this terrible disaster?"

STORM IN THE EAST

Work of the Cyclone at Columbia Pa., Yesterday Afternoon.

SEVERAL PEOPLE FATALLY INJURED

Columbia Rolling Mill Completely Demolished and the Machinery Ruined and Many Houses Damaged—A Church at Washington, D. C., Unroofed.

Lancaster, Pa., May 29.—The tornado that came from York county and swept across the Susquehanna river yesterday afternoon did a vast amount of damage in Columbia, about ten miles from here, together with several fatalities. It first struck the planing mill of John Forrey, unroofing the structure, and doing a great deal of damage to houses in the vicinity of Front street. The black cloud then struck the Columbia Rolling mill, lifted the roof bodily, and buried fifteen men in the ruins. Following is a revised list of the casualties: Percy Zerger, buried under the roof; fatally injured. Isaac Haverstick, puddler, leg and head crushed and body scalded; fatally injured. Walter Brunner, head cut, arm broken and body bruised. William Schleeger, hand broken and injured about the body. Harry Duck, puddler, struck by timber and badly cut on the body. Joseph Dangert, driving a cart on the outside of the mill, was buried by the roof and had to be dug out; seriously hurt internally. Horse was killed. The rolling mill is completely demolished and the machinery ruined. Albert Hill, colored, and four other employes, names not known, who were working inside the mill, were blown forty feet into Shawnee creek and nearly drowned. The storm next struck the electric light station and badly injured the building. John Hughes, the engineer, was instantly killed in trying to close the window. He was blown into the flywheel of the engine and torn to fragments. Before striking Columbia the tornado did a large amount of damage on the river shore of Wrightsville. The gable end of the Lutheran church was blown in, the school house unroofed and a large amount of lumber in the lumber yard of Bilmyer & Small was blown into the river. After leaving Columbia the storm traveled east, doing considerable damage about Mountville and Rohrerstown by blowing down tobacco sheds and uprooting trees.

Two Killed at Jarrettown.

Lansdale, Pa., May 29.—A cyclonic wind and rain storm swept over this section of Montgomery county yesterday afternoon and did much damage to property. The greatest destruction was done in the little town of Jarrettown. Here a stone shed was blown down, and Alfred Moffett and Winfield Emly, hostlers, and five horses in the structure were killed. The school house and Methodist church and several other houses in the village were wrecked. At Ambler the handsome stone residence of Alexander Knight was blown almost to pieces.

Damage by Flood at Bethlehem.

Bethlehem, Pa., May 29.—For two hours yesterday afternoon rain poured down in torrents. In Bethlehem forty houses along Gauchy sewer were flooded, the water being three feet deep on the first floors. In South Bethlehem, Five Points, property was six feet under water. The damage will be many thousands of dollars.

Storm in New Jersey.

Long Branch, N. J., May 29.—The thunder storm here yesterday afternoon did much damage. Windows were broken and trees uprooted. Asbury Park suffered in like manner. At Bordentown a barn was blown down and one man fatally injured. Several houses were damaged and many trees destroyed at Rutherford. Ten or fifteen barns or dwellings were wrecked and two men fatally injured at Allentown, Pa., where the total loss is estimated at $100,000.

Church Unroofed in Washington.

Washington, May 29.—Late yesterday afternoon a violent thunder storm, accompanied by a wind averging sixty miles per hour, passed over this city. The storm came from the southwest and passed nearly due east. A large number of the beautiful old trees in the White House grounds suffered severely. The path of the wind can be traced through the grounds by the fallen trunks and branches. A space less than 100 hundred yards wide marked the progress of its fury. The wind took the roof off the Lutheran Memorial church at Vermont avenue and Fourteenth street. Trees were blown down in every part of the city and many small houses unroofed. A boy returning from school was killed by a falling chimney.

Elected United States Senator.

New Orleans, May 29.—The contest for United States senator, one of the hottest known in the history of Louisiana, resulted yesterday afternoon in the election of ex-Gov. Samuel D. McEnery of Baton Rouge, now associate justice of the supreme court.

Plundering an American Bark.

Hong Kong, May 29.—The American bark John Baizley, Capt. Shepherd, from Singapore on April 20 for this port, is ashore on Montanha island. The natives have begun to plunder the vessel.

Rhode Island Legislature Adjourns.

Newport, R. I., May 29.—The legislature has adjourned until the fifth Tuesday in September, to meet in Providence.

New Bank for Beaver, Pa.

Washington, May 29.—The Beaver National bank of Beaver, Pa., capital $100,000, has been authorized to begin business.

May 30—Baseball. Y. M. C. A. vs. Woodbridge A. C. 10 a. m.

Pennsylvania's Supreme Court has decided that water consumers are not liable for charges in case impure water is furnished.

The editor of the North avenue paper intimated last night that the story printed in these columns last Saturday, of the work done by the gamblers following the Hunting circus, was untrue. What a picnic those gamblers would have had with the deacon's kids?—News.

There is no fear that The News employes would provide a picnic for anyone looking for money. In the first place, Editor Runyon pays nothing but sweat shop wages, thus making sure that his employes only have sufficient to eke out an existence; and in the second place, the slave driving methods which he maintains allows the employes no time to attend circuses or the like.

These are words of wisdom from the paper read by Mrs. Frank Hall, of Montclair, on "Town Improvement Associations," at the National Federation of Woman's Clubs in Louisville:

As women are the keepers of the home, so let them have a watchful care over the surroundings of that home. All that is conducive to healthfulness, sanitation, order and beauty in the city, town or village in which they reside, and where those dear to them are being housed and fed, should be of the utmost importance. Can any work be of greater moment? One of the first benefits derived by women from public work is that they gradually lose sight of the narrow, personal views of life and advance to the far higher altruistic plane. In forming such an association one important fact must be kept firmly in view, that is to assist and suggest not direct, the local authorities. Lead, but do not so far outstray public opinion as to excite stubborn prejudice. The lines along which this work can be carried on, varying according to local necessities, include municipal reform, sanitary improvements, especially those of water supply, sewerage and disposal of household waste, improvements of roads and sidewalks, of parks and small plots of ground at the intersection of roads that may become beauty spots, with little expenditure; also improvement of school grounds, and those around railroad stations, where the corporation themselves lack public spirit to do so, and providing drinking fountains for the comfort of man and beast. All these and many more are ways in which women can work for the public welfare.

Blood Flowed at Westfield.

Blood flowed freely at an early hour in Westfield this morning when a party of men, somewhat intoxicated, became involved in a quarrel on the Broad street crossing. James Hannan, a track walker on the Central Railroad, William Donavan, a coachman, and Richard Burke, agreed to disagree at 2:30 o'clock on this spot. They came to blows and it is said that Donavan pulled out a knife and attacked the other two men. Hannan was cut quite badly about the face, and Dr. Harrison found it necessary to take eighteen stitches on his face. Burke was also cut over the eye. The trio were arrested and arraigned before Justice Hart, who held them for the Grand Jury.

—The German Beneficial Society will hold a meeting on Monday night.

The men in charge succeeded in getting the animal to Roberts' livery stable and Dr. Pocock was called at once. Acting on his advice the horse was taken to the vacant lot in the rear of fire headquarters where the proper treatment was given. The horse suffered intensely and for several hours it was thought he would not recover, but the medicine did the work and about 6 o'clock the horse recovered from the attack and was removed to the livery stable again where the men in charge looked after him.

STOLEN GOODS SENT TO DUNELLEN.

A Greenbrook Man Arrested on a Serious Charges.

Mr. Meserole, who has been employed by the American Grocery Company, of New York, and who lives on a farm at Greenbrook, was arrested yesterday morning by detectives who have been on the case and taken to New York to answer to the charge of robbery. It appears that the prisoner and a teamster were in league at robbing the house and shipping the goods to Newark and disposing of them as opportunity offered. It is known that Meserole received a large quantity of freight at the Dunellen depot, but report says that the headquarters were in Newark and that a number of employes are implicated in a systematic robbery which has been carried on to an enormous extent.—Call.

BOYS WORK ON EXHIBITION.

Evidence of What The Manual Training Class of the Boy's Club is Doing.

The second annual exhibition of the manual training department of the Boys' Club was held last evening in their rooms at the corner of Park and North avenues. Owing to the threatening weather, the attendance was not as large as it would have have been under more propitious circumstances. The work of nineteen boys was on exhibition, as follows: John Hanan and Elmer Hoffman, turning; J. Bulschn and George Apgar, carving; John Taylor, George Taylor, Harry Hoffman, Willie Kiss, James Conway, Charles Beiter, Harry Grahn, Dorcy Conover, Lewis Green P. Galbraith, John Berry, Willie Skinner, carpentering; Fred Frey, Willie Kreager and Michael Owens, mechanical drawing.

Five large tables were carved by the boys and are well executed. The walls were covered with mechanical drawings, which received much favorable comment for the ability evidenced thereon by the young workers.

During the year 213 class sessions have been held, 105 names have been enrolled, with an aggregate attendance of 2,207, nearly 500 more than last year. Since the first of the year the classes have been growing and it is gratifying to those interested to see the club so well appreciated by the boys.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

DOANE & EDSALL.

By MARTHA M'CULLOCH WILLIAMS.

[Copyright, 1896, by the Author.]

It was April weather. Softly the ruffling air,
With subtle and vital touch, set blossoms everywhere;
Daisies dappled the grass; all the apple trees
Stood brave in bridal bloom for their lover honeybees;
The matins of the fairies the chiming bluebells rang,
And the elf of the fronded fern uncurled, and the grass sprite upward sprang,
And through his coral clarion the trumpeter woodbine
Throughout the land reveille blew to laggard leaf and vine.

And the North, in the ferment of April,
Thrilled into leaping life.
A victor giant, at ease
After fateful deadly strife,
It heard in the blurring boom
Of each triumphal gun:
"Rejoice! Be glad!
Rejoice!
The long sore fight is won!
Rejoice in your iron fleets!
Rejoice in your men of might!
Rejoice! The dawn of gladness
Breaks on the weary night!
Deathless and dear, Old Glory
Floats still from sea to sea.
Ye have paid in coin of heroes
To make the whole land free.
Ring merrily, O joy bells,
When the living remnant comes
Adown the street, with tattered flags
And the stirring beat of drums!
Ring mournfully, O death bells,
Yet pridefully acclaim
Old Glory's holocaust shall keep
For aye a deathless name!"

THE LONG SORE FIGHT IS WON.

The Southland, waste and weary,
With all but honor lost,
Heard singing trumpets blare defeat
From mountain top to coast.
"Bewail! Bewail!" the trumpets sang,
"Bewail a nation dead!
Ashes and dust your swelling hope!
Your quick come glory fled!
Fold up, fold up the starry cross,
The meteor of fight
A world hath watched with bated breath
Through all its burning flight.
No more in shock of battle joined
Its light shall gleaming shine
To lead to victory or death
A steady thin gray line.
Weep, Southland! Weep your ravaged fields,
Your homes all desolate,
Your fat lands, scarred by war's red scathe—
Weep all your piteous fate!
But smile above your happy dead,
Your martyrs truly blest—
They fought and fell while hope was high—
Asleep in your soft breast,
Nor dreams may come, nor heartbreak touch.
And to your latest age
Your constant heart shall keep their names
Writ on its dearest page."

Through the April weather's heartbreak,
The April weather's peace,
Past mountains steep as black despair,
Through flowery vales of ease,
Mocked by the liquid sunshine,
The lilt of nesting birds,
The men in gray went straggling home
With grief beyond all words.
Still in each heart there echoed
The beat of the last tattoo,
And still they thrilled to the last wild charge
The Southland bugles blew.
Paroled! At large! It was all a dream
Whose marvel might not cease.
The good fight fought, the good fight lost,
How bear a vacant peace?

It was April weather, upon the turn to May,
As one marched home who had been four years away—
Lindsay, rifleman, private, Company L.
Of soldier stock, he had heard his father tell
A grandsire's tale of bullets straightly sped
When Sevier charged and redcoats broke and fled;
How the same rifle, passed from sire to son,
Had sung and stung when Horseshoe fight was won,
And barked its last in Alamo's wild strife,
When Fate with Courage played at dice for Life.

"'Twus right down pity, Jim," the old man said,
"Losin ole Speaker that away. Poor Ned!
He took the gun, spite all that I could do.
The wildest boy, not the least bit like you.
But ef he'd lived I'd give my ole state two
Ter fight untel they drapped, fer Tennessee
She's wuth it—yes, she is. 'Tween you an me
I'm mighty proud she's been 'The Volunteer'
Clean frum them times o' Blount an John Sevier.
Call when she chooses, Lindsay blood says, 'Here!'"

"I'M GOIN," JIM SAID.

"I'm goin," Jim said, holding out a hand
Where throbbed the fever of his pulsing land.
Then as the father wrung it hard:
"Take keer
O' Mary an the children. Keep 'em here.
Mary's clear grit. She bid me go an fight
With smilin lips, then sobbed the livelong night,
An ef she choked this mornin when you prayed
Fer me she's made each child a blue cockade
An taught 'em all to sing:
"'Hurrah! Hurrah!
Fer southern rights an the bonny blue flag
That bears a single star.'"

It was when April weather
Had turned to rosy May
That Jim had marched to the front
With a gun and a jacket gray.

The spring world thrilled in the joy
Of the valiant fight to come.
Each lusty wind blew "Charge!"
And like the rolling drum
In the "Rally and Stand Fast"
The sudden summer rain
Fell on the lancer corn in rank
Across the teeming plain.
How beat the hoarsely grumbling drums,
How brave the banners flew,
As down the dell and up the hill
The silver bugles blew!
"The Gir! I Left Behind" they played,
And swift the line along
Voice after voice came chorusing
The blithely merry song:
"If ever I get out o' the war
And Lincoln'e boys don't find me,
I'll come right back to Tennessee,
And the girl I left behind me."

The measure changes! Hark, the shout!
The lively lilting air!
The rebel yell breaks mostly out
To drown the trumpet's blare.
Nor lusty wind nor pelting rain
Can pale the emulous fire
That burns within each soldier heart,
Still rising high and higher
As silverly, now loud, now low,
Brings out the cadence tricksy,
"In Dixie land I'll take my stand
To live and die for Dixie."

As Jim tramped home it all came back
So clear his heart stood still.
Again he trod the long white road,
Again he climbed the hill
And looked, with eyes all strangely dim,
Down at his father's mill.
The creaking wheel; the glassy pond;
The swiftly foaming race;
The gable window, framing high
An old man's eager face,
And, just beyond, the low browed house,
With swallows in the eaves;
The grassy yard; the poplars tall,
Green miracles of leaves;
The ragged garden, sweet with bloom;
The straw thatched place of bees;
The spring lot, flecked with frolic calves;
The fruitful orchard trees;
The sprawling barn; the pasture, blotched
With cows knee deep in grass,
With foals at play, and, close beside,
His own mare, Saucy Lass—

A creature all of silk and fire,
With glancing hoofs that lightly spurned
The laggard earth, the wimpling air,
What time her heart for victory burned.
Unmatched for courage, breath and stay,
The best might follow where she led,
But gentle as a lamb at play
When Mary stroked her dainty head.
She knew and missed her master's hand,
She knew him there upon the hill,
And sharp across the rainy wold,
She sent a whinny, keen and shrill.

Her master heard, but heeded not.
Now the white turnpike dipped and fell
Down the long slope. His breath came short.
There, on the rise about the well,
Four little lads, the youngest two,
The eldest barely turning seven,
With flossy heads and sunny eyes
As blue and innocent as heaven,
Stood all a-row in Sunday best,
With caps that bore the blue cockade,
And softly clear from baby lips
He caught the strain the bugles played:
"Hurrah! Hurrah!
For southern rights, hurrah!
Hurrah for the bonny blue flag
That bears a single star!"

In gleeful triumph as they sang
They waved the banner Mary made,
Then flung their caps up, shouting loud:
"Daddy! Goodby! We ain't afraid!"
Mary! Jim knew she knelt within,
Her head upon his vacant chair,
Her young child close against her breast,
Her soul poured out in fervent prayer.
On past the gate the column swept,
Across the bridge that spanned the stream.
Through breaking clouds the vernal sun
Shot here and there a golden beam.
It haloed now a flossy head,
Now gilt the race's dancing foam.
Thus in the glowing of the rifts
Jim looked his last upon his home.

HER MASTER HEARD, BUT HEEDED NOT.

Yet, as with measured martial tread
The long line climbed the hither hill,
And swept the curve that shut away
The calm and comfort of the mill,
A mellow voice beside him spoke:
"Marse Jim, I ain' gwine say goodby.
I come fer ax you, fas' an sho',
Ter tell dem ginulmans ter try
An sen you home time coons is ripe.
I tell you, suh, dat puppy Bose
Gwine mek er dawg—barks lek er bell
An gut de ve'y fines' nose.
Den I'm gwine baig you don' git mad,
An let yo'se'f do nuffin rash
Dar in Verginny when you gits
Ter wrastlin wid dem Yankee trash.
'Tain' nobody kin shoot lek you.
Des you set back 'hine dat dar gun
An let her talk 'Bing! Bang! Bing! Bang!'
I bet she makes dem soljers run.
Unc' Ben, he say you'll wanter smoke.
He sont dis 'baccer, seben years ole.
Smell hit; hit's lek dem gyarden flowers,
An yaller, bright as yaller gole.
I took an made er corncob pipe;
Mammy, she cut de reed fer stem,
An all de black fokes sont deir love
An say you make haste home ter dem."

"I will if God wills, Sam," Jim said and sighed.
Sam was his foster brother. Side by side
The black boy and the white had fought and played,
Raced through the open, scrambled up the glade
Under white moons what time their dogs gave tongue
To fill the sky and make an old heart young;
Later, in manly skill and manly strength,
The friendliest comrade rivals. All the length
Of each life held the other's image clear.
"Promise me, Sam," Jim said, "that you'll stay here
Till I come back an keep things goin straight.
Father seems failin mighty fast of late.
And if—and if—I don't come back—why, then,
Treat my boys like your own an make 'em men."

With eyes that could not lift for tears
Sam pledged a husky word,
And still the column forward swept,
And still the banners stirred
In dimpling wafts of tricksy air
Or streamed and snapped behind
When cheer on cheer went ringing clear
To greet a lusty wind.
"Defile! To right! Stack arms! Break ranks!"
At last the bugles blew.

And no man faced his comrade then,
For well each soldier knew
The train in wait might bear him straight
To find a soldier's death.
They loved their cause, thrice loved their state,
Yet choked and gasped for breath.

Battles! Jim hardly thought of them!
Big smoky blurs of blood and flame!
But, ah, how clear in memory shone
The days when Mary's letters came—
Sweet letters, breathing love and cheer
And eloquent of homely joys!
Now it was baby May's first tooth,
Now the mad antics of the boys.
"Sam does his work and yours," they said.
"And father, when the papers come
With news of victory, is like
An old warhorse that hears the drum.

"Down at the mill he talks all day
Of 'Jim, my boy that's out with Lee
An goin ter stay thar ter the eend
An show the grit o' Tennessee.'"
They told how red the apples blushed,
How every fat field teemed with grain,
How mincingly the dear Lass stepped
With baby's hand upon her rein,
And said, too,
"Dear, I will be brave
And trust you, fighting for our land,
To him who marks the sparrow fall
And holds the tempest in his hand."

TO FIND A SOLDIER'S DEATH.

Dear letters, all too few and short!
Within a year they came no more,
For Tennessee in length and breadth
Was vocal with the cannon's roar.
Up every river, every plain,
The bluecoats came in flooding waves,
As winter waters rise amain
When wild the tempest o'er them raves.
On lowland, highland, plain and steep
Alike they set war's iron heel.
In stressful, ever broadening sweep
They fringed the land with fire and steel.

Jim knew it. March or battle done,
He lay in silence by the fire
Fighting a hero's stoutest fight—
'Twixt pledged faith and heart's desire.
And honor won. Desert his flag,
Break faith with Tennessee
And blur the spotless Lindsay name!
No! That might never be.
Not by his father's silver head,
Not by his baby's gold,
Not by his Mary's loving trust,
Not for a wealth untold!

"We 'listed fer the wah, we did,"
He whispered to his gun.
"Reckon we'll stay an do our part
Until the fightin's done."
Footsore and ragged, hungry, cold,
Through many a stirring fray
He saw war's besom, Jackson, dash,
To spare not and to slay.
The bloody Wilderness he shared,
And Richmond's hundred fights,
And swept in Pickett's deathless charge
Up Cemetery heights.
He starved through months of waning war
And then, when hope was past,
Laying his dear gun down, said low,
"We did stay to the last."
When the lengthened light of April
Brought waxing blowth of May,
The last miles stretched before him,
And all along the way
He strangely marked, or strangely missed,
Some dear familiar sign,
Or fence, or tree, or cottage hearth,
Or budded roadside vine.
A low sun filled the long white road
With dancing golden gleams.
From dusky woods beyond he caught
The singing of the streams.
Two rabbits, nibbling roadside grass,
Took sudden leaping flight,
A partridge tiptoed on the fence
And called, "Bob! Bob! Bob White!"
His breath came thick. With lagging feet
He climbed the hither hill
Then looked amazed. Where was the house?
And where the gray old mill?
The race was choked with blackened beams,
Unvexed the water flowed
In silver sheet athwart the dam,
On past the dipping road.
Sentinel chimneys, gaunt and gray,
Guarded the rooftree's place.
On half the poplar length, the fire
Had set its burning trace.
No well sweep crowned the grassy rise,
The orchard was a wild,
And ragged, vagrant cattle browsed
Where once a garden smiled.

One minute, hot with breathless hate,
Bereft of every hope,
Jim looked; then swifter than the wind
Dashed down the long white slope.
Afar and high, his eye had caught,
Fair in the golden gleam
A little ragged child at play
With flowers beside the stream.
Above her, at the mill pond's verge,
An old man cast his line,
But dropped it, turned and faced the road
As though he would divine
Who came there. Something told him true—
His eyes were blear and dim—
Yet straight he raised a quavering shout,
"Why! Praise the Lord! It's Jim!
My boy, my boy! Thank God!
Thank God!
We've been here every day
Waitin ter meet an take you home.
Yes! This is baby May,
She knows her daddy. Don't she, sweet?
The boys are plantin corn
With Sam, an Mary—bless her heart—
She's spinnin in the barn.
We live thar. When they burnt the house,
Had nowhere else ter go.
It's served us well in summer heat
An winter cold an snow.
They burnt the beehives, an the fence—
Soldiers, it wus—a whole brigade.
The first come gilpin down the pike
An said I'd give the rebels aid.

WHERE WAS THE HOUSE?

"'Well, gentlemen,' says I, 'I wish I could.
I'd do it in er wink—ef you but would
Gimme the chance.' And then they laughed an said
I better take the oath. I shook my head
An they went lopin on. 'Twus the advance—
Good fellers, too—but by the wust o' chance,
Gerrillers bushwhacked 'em on top the hill.
The rascals shot an run, but shot ter kill.
They hit the Yankee majer—young an slim—
'Peared like the rest thought all the world o' him.
As they come back, right at our gate he fell,
They brought him in, an laid him by the well,
In the thin shadder of the poplar trees.
'Twus spring, an all the yard alive with bees.
Mary brought cordial—but his face wus gray,
He jest could whisper 'tween the blood spurts, 'Pray.'
I tried ter pray—but couldn't say a word
Fer thought of you, exceptin, 'O dear Lord,
Receive an comfort thou this passin soul
An bear it up while death's black waters roll!'
Somebody caught my shoulder rough, an said,
'Stop cantin! Don't you see the majer's dead?
Ole rebel hypocrite, your time has come!
You fed an harbored this gerriller scum.
They've killed the bravest man that wore the blue,
You helped 'em, an, by God, your help you'll rue!'
With that he made ter hit me on the cheek,
But Mary caught his hand. I couldn't speak.
She run an snatched a chair frum off the porch,
An set me down ter see 'em ply the torch.

"They plied it well. They lit a fire ter fill
The whole clear space that lays frum hill ter hill,
It drove us back, an back, an when the flame
Wus roarin loudest up the gin'ul came.
He stopped an stared. I raised my hat an bowed,
Then looked him in the eye, an said out loud,
Jest as the orderly finished his report:
'You come too late, sir, fer the cream o' sport.
Retaliation can't bring back your dead.
It may make little children cry fer bread,
An leave no roof above er woman's head—
Of that I don't complain though. Understand
I know your man wus shot upon my land—
Land that a Lindsay earned in seventy-six—
An Lindsay blood sheers no assassin's tricks.
Guiltless are me an mine o' that man's blood
As babes unborn. I'm old an not much good
At fightin, but the man that come an said
I harbored gerrillers, spied fer 'em an fed,
Must take it back—er take er broken head.'

"My! Ef them soldiers didn't cheer—
The gin'ul loudest o' the gang!
He shook my hand an made his fifes
Play 'Dixie' tell the ole hills rang.
He took our baby in his arms
An kissed her little rosy cheek,
Then rode away without a word—
I ra'ally think he couldn't speak."
The old man's quavering treble hushed—
The path had brought them to the door.
How quickly Mary's fine ear caught
A loved step on the clattering floor!
With swallow motion swift and light,
She ran to greet her soldier true.
Beyond all speech, her sweet blue eyes
Brimmed over with love's happy dew.
In benison, the dipping sun,
Sent through the door a last bright ray,
And in its light the old man knelt
And softly murmured, "Let us pray."

Peace has its own dear battles.
Bravely, in sun and rain,
Through the quick April weather,
The plenteous harvest strain,
The goodly stress of the summer,
The nipping of the frost,
As he had fought for the starry flag,
And the cause forever lost,
With the same fine steady courage,
The same unfaltering hand,
From strength to strength, by an uphill way,
Jim won to the promised land.

Again a merry mill wheel danced
Above the foaming race;
Again a sheltering roof arose
Within the rooftree place.
The garden bloomed, and orchard trees
Blushed redly as of old,
And wide fields laughed in summer sun,
Breast high in summer gold,
Or caught and held the tricksy wind
In netted long green grass,
Or felt the sleek and speckled herds,
Lowing, across them pass.
Mary put by her wheel and loom,
Put by her homespun gown—
She had a silk for Sunday now,
A bonnet, too, from town.
The boys were lusty frolic lads,
And baby May, their queen,
As light of foot as any fairy
That ever danced the green.

There are wounds in battle always
And scars from peaceful strife,
By the fight he lost, the fight he won,
Jim knew he was scarred for life.
He had spent the stay and the spring of life
Ere life had come to its prime.
He was no more lithe as the bending ash.
His head wore silver rime;
Yet he made no moan, as he made no boast
Deep in his simple heart
Can say I done my part."
He said, "I'm glad I went—the boys

A LOVED STEP ON THE CLATTERING FLOOR.

* * * * * * *

One day in fall, when painted leaves
In frolic winds danced down
And ripe nuts fell in pattering hail,
Jim rode away to town.
A little town, each street beset
With houses low and gray—
Most times the sleepiest quiet place,
But in the square today
Men stood in knots about a lad
Who caught, hot from the wire,
The epic of a city's doom
Chicago's mighty fire.
Ten thousands roofless, naked, faint,
The bitter sport of fate,
In face of winds that rudely blew,
Of frosts that might not wait!
"Looks like that fire had took your case,
Jim," some one lightly spoke.
"The men that burnt you out may find
It's no sech pretty joke.
They're askin help"— "I heard," Jim said;
"It's whut they ought ter do.
I've got a hundred dollars here,
Somebody make it two—
Er whut you please—an send it quick—
When children cry fer bread
An women shiver in the cold,
An men have hearts like lead,
No man that's wuth a lick o' salt
That's fit ter die er live
Will hug his quarrel—but rise up
An give all he can give."

* * * * * * *

That was Jim's first speech and his last,
But still his neighbors tell
How after it a mighty shout
Across the startled fields rang out,
Till echoes rose and fell
Among the hills that heard again
The old familiar piercing strain,
The ringing rebel yell!

The Second United States Cavalry.

It is doubtful if any other one regiment furnished an equal number of distinguished officers during the civil war. Among the officers were Albert Sidney Johnston, colonel; Robert E. Lee, lieutenant colonel; William J. Hardee, brevet lieutenant colonel; George H. Thomas, major. Robert E. Lee and A. S. Johnston became generals in the Confederate army, and Hardee became lieutenant general. Thomas became a distinguished general in the Federal army. Among the captains were Earl Van Dorn, E. Kirby Smith and N. G. Evans, all of whom became generals in the Confederate army. I. N. Palmer, George Stoneman and R. W. Johnson held the same positions in the Union army. Among the subalterns John B. Hood, Charles W. Field, Chambliss and Phifer became southern generals, and R. Garrard and others attained the same place in the northern army. Captain Evans left the United States service before Colonel Robert E. Lee did, and when they parted at Fort Mason, Tex., Colonel Lee said: "I'm sorry to give you up, Evans. Don't know what may happen before we meet again. Perhaps they'll make you a general."

FOR HIS DEAD SON.

A MEMORIAL DAY STORY BY MAJOR ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

[Copyright, 1896.]

If this were pure fiction, there would be no excuse for my saying that Harold Dudley, though a part of my friend's name, is not the whole or most important part of it. I have his consent to use so much, however, and, with this understanding, to tell this story.

Captain Dudley and myself were comrade troopers. In the long ago we had fought side by side during the Chickamauga campaign, and when the Army of the Cumberland was besieged by Bragg in Chattanooga we wore ourselves and our horses down to skin and bone, and many a good man gave up life in the effort to keep the Confederate General Wheeler from capturing the trains we were taking over the mountains from McMinnville, that the men in the shadows of Mission Ridge and Lookout might not die of hunger.

Dudley was born in Ohio, and I in Kentucky. We were both captains, a month apart in our ages, and neither 20. Our commissions came not through ability so much as the fact that we had joined the loyal mountaineers of the Cumberland range, and we knew more about the "three r's" than the brave, sturdy fellows who rejoiced at our appointment and submitted to our command.

"YANKEES DON'T COME UP MUCH THIS WAY."

Two years ago this spring Colonel Dudley, now a successful lawyer in Baltimore, proposed to me to take an early vacation, and to spend it riding over the trails where, 30 years before, we had marched by night and fought by day and starved most of the time, while praying—as never done before or since—that help, more than our rugged divisions could give, might be sent to the naked, hungry heroes so resolutely holding the east shore of the Tennessee at Chattanooga.

I decided to give up newspaper work, more wearing than war in the long run, and to go with my friend. On the way down to Chattanooga he asked me if I remembered a story he told me the night before we assaulted the northern spur of Mission Ridge, sometimes called Missionary Ridge, under Sherman. I remembered the story very well—I knew of many cases of the same kind in the border states—but I was anxious to hear it again.

Dudley's story in brief was this: His father was a Tennesseean of good family. He fell in love with a beautiful girl, whose family were the founders of Portsmouth, O., on the southern rim of the state, across from Kentucky. The young man, after graduating in medicine, married and settled down in Portsmouth. His family disowned him because his wife's people were said to be abolitionists, but, happy in his love and his three boys, he pursued his profession successfully till South Carolina seceded and the first hoarse rumblings of the war came up from Charleston.

Up to this time Dr. Dudley had taken no great interest in politics, though he always voted, and jokingly made bets with the opposition. But with the first sound of war his life and his manner changed—changed so suddenly and radically that those who knew him best whispered that he had become insane, and those who did not know him so well threatened to hang him for what they called "his treason to the Union."

Mrs. Dudley and her youngest son were opposed to secession; the doctor and Frank and Edgar, the first and second sons, announced themselves as "rebels."

It was well known in Portsmouth that Dr. Dudley's was another case of "divided house," yet there was a great deal of surprise in the pretty river town, when one evening, in the fall of 1861, it became known that the doctor and two of his sons had disappeared.

Under the circumstances Harold became dearer, if that were possible, to his mother, and for the love of her he would have remained at home had he been less capable of love, less sensitive to the opinions of others. The schoolmates and playmates of his childhood and boyhood were going into the war, and although they never openly chided him with disloyalty to the Union, yet he felt that he was under a cloud, and that there was but one course left him, and fortunately that course was in the line of his inclinations.

Harold Dudley told his mother his purpose, and she, realizing the situation with a woman's quick intuition, consented to his going. He crossed the Ohio, met up with Union refugees in the mountains of southeastern Kentucky, and with them pressed north and joined the Union army.

This was the story Captain Dudley told me, as, with our horses to the rear, we hugged the freezing earth that Wednesday night—the morrow was to be Thanksgiving—and waited for daylight and the bugles to sound the "advance."

I am aware there is the voice, the detail and the setting wanting to give life to this crude outline, but in our hotel at Chattanooga that night my old friend added an interesting postscript to the story of a generation before.

After the war he returned to the north—to Cincinnati, whither his mother had gone—and studied law. She died of "heartache," her friends said, in 1869. In the meantime she and Harold had made every effort to learn the fate of the doctor and the two sons who had gone south with him.

Through a Confederate friend who had come to Cincinnati they learned that Edgar was killed with General Cheatham at Lookout Mountain, and that Frank went down to death with General Cleburn, on whose staff he served during that final series of desperate battles south of Nashville, when the power of the Confederates in the west was irretrievably broken.

Dr. Dudley had served as a surgeon at many points south during the war, but as soon as peace came all trace of him vanished, and those who knew him believed he had gone out with the boys and the cause that was so dear to his heart.

It was the 23d of April, the day when the Confederates decorate the graves of their dead, that Dudley and myself crossed the Tennessee at Moccasin Point, described as "hell's gallery" by the artillery men, who answered from that bend in 1863 the plunging shot and shell from Lookout.

"Yankees don't come up much this way no moah," said an old man at whose cabin we rested at noon. "I was hyar on t'other side in them days, though most of my kin was fo' the Union. Things hasn't changed right hyar very much, an thar ain't been a stranger in Dick's cove sence the prophet come, that was right arter the war. Who's the prophet? Waal, we-uns don't know, but hit's allowed that he is a scholard—at least he was till he got into this yar graveyard bizniss."

Being asked to explain about the prophet and the "graveyard bizniss," old Hen Colley stroked his long white beard, took a chew of tobacco, hitched up his single knit suspender and said:

"The prophet, he's got a place up at the head of the cove, whar he keeps some stock an raises stuff enough to live on, an they do say he gits money ev'ry quatah at Stevensville. He don't tell his name, ef he hes one, w'ich some doubts, but this hes leaked out. He had three sons. One went into the Yankee army an was kilt, two went into the Confederacy an was kilt, but no one don't know whar them three or any one of 'em was buried.

"'Twas just about the time they got to puttin flowahs on sojers' graves that the prophet come hyar, a-lookin fo' the graves of his boys, but of course he couldn't find 'em. But thar ain't a hill nor a cove nor a valley, nor a kirk, of all this land that didn't have no ind of unburied dead on 'em when the fuss inded. So the old man—he had two niggahs to help—sot to work to gather in the skeletons, with blue an gray rags on thar bones, from all over. In this way he has got a big graveyard of his own. Thar ain't no gray flowers, but thar's blue and w'ite and red, an up at the prophet's place you kin see dead waves of them flowers, an he tends them. Go up, as mos' like you'll do, an ax him why, an he'll say: 'My boys wore the blue an gray. Some of these may be Frank or Harold or Edgar. May the good Lor' help an pity us who was so cruel as to kill them!' Oh, hit makes a feller feel soft 'bout the eyes to heah him go on! I was thar jest a yeah ago today, an I came back so bad broke up that I had to drink more'n custom to git asleep. Waal, goodby! But if you-uns see him, don't forgit the prophet's a gent."

We bade goodby to our mountaineer host and rode up to the head of the cove, where the prophet had his home. Save for the spring and the charred wood about it, there was no sign of human life there when we ran into Wharton's Texas rangers on the morning of Nov. 3, 1863.

Two hounds barked us a welcome as we neared the double log cabin. There were signs of thrift about the place, but what most attracted our attention were the intermingled billows of white, red and blue flowers on the slopes above the house, and this day the hermit's home was invaded by young mountaineers of both sexes who had come down to help the old man in the work of decoration, though already every undulation was a pillow of natural flowers.

A tall old man, with white hair and beard and the expression of a saint in his gray eyes and regular features, greeted us and helped put away our horses.

"It is always Decoration day to me," he said, "even when the snow is on the hills and knee deep in the cove. It is to me the drapery of peace, covering the last resting place of dead Americans."

Colonel Dudley could not speak, but I indorsed the old man's sentiments.

"For years," he said in the same low, quiet voice. "I tried to find the bodies of my sons, but in vain. One night, when my heart was very heavy, I dreamt, or felt that a spirit came to me and whispered, 'All the dead are your brothers or your sons!' Then I gave up the search for the few and gathered in the many. Here they sleep, the blue and the gray, as if they had never fought. I gathered them in from the jungle and bleak hillside, from the marshy margin of the rivers where they sank to death, and from the shadows of the pines where they breathed out their young lives. Over there near the cabin is the place where I shall sleep when the death angel calls me over the dark river to the white tents of the silent. But I shall not be alone. The men about me, whether they wore blue or gray, are my boys, my countrymen."

We stood in the midst of the floral billows, Dudley white faced and silent, and the old man absorbed in telling us how he had gathered in the dead, in blue and gray, and how he had given his life for his boys' sake in caring for the graves.

"Harold," he said, "fought on the Union side. He was our baby—sweet, gentle and beautiful as his mother. Two years after the war, amid a tangle of vines and wild flowers, I came on the remains of a young man who had worn the blue. He was tall and lithe and had yellow hair. My Harold fought on these hills, and they told me he was killed here. His grave is under my window. The light of my lamp falls on it before I go to sleep, and the first rays of the sun kiss it in the morning. Come, let me show you the place."

He laid his hand on Dudley's arm and led him away. For the life of me I could not move, nor could I speak, for my lips were dry and my heart was in my throat.

The mountaineers singing among the graves of the blue and gray startled me from my reverie. Then I looked back toward the grave below the cabin window, and, through swimming eyes, I saw the old man's arms about my comrade's neck, and Dudley's strong face was half hidden in his father's white beard.

BILL WENTZEL, HERO.

BY ELISA ARMSTRONG.

The tramp leaned over the cemetery fence and nodded at the old soldier who, though the Memorial day exercises were over, was still busy over a grave.

"Ain't been buryin' no union in here, have ye?"

The old soldier laughed. "No, we ain't."

"I was one of 'em," the tramp remarked, "—th Illinois."

The old soldier straightened up. "Was ye? Know Bill Wentzel?"

The tramp caught his breath.

"Fellow as named th' colonel Old Undertaker, ye know."

"Yes—I knew him."

"This here's his grave."

"Bill Wentzel's—grave?"

"Yes; his widder had trouble findin' him after Manassas. Only recognized him by th' eagle tattooed on his arm. Bill used to say that eagle fairly screamed when he had th' rheumatism." the old soldier laughed; "Bill

"AIN'T BEEN BURYIN' NO UNION IN HERE?"

was grit, though; saved my life once and swore he'd have it if I told."

"Widder livin' yet?"

"Yep. Thinks Bill's a bigger hero 'n' old Grant—'most makes me ashamed o' comin' home sometimes."

The tramp drew his arm across his face. "Bill wa'n't no saint," he said, hoarsely.

"She's forgot all that now. Say, comrade, I live near her. Come over and talk a bit; she'll—"

The tramp hastily picked up his stick with the little red bundle on the end of it.

"Guess not, comrade; must move on now—been a movin' on sence Manassas."

He walked rapidly away, though with a slight limp.

"Pshaw!" said the old soldier, watching him. "Gassin' about Bill I forgot to ask his name. Too late now, though," he glanced at his crutch.

Clear of the town, the tramp halted and pulled up his ragged sleeve. On his dirty arm was a tattooed eagle.

"Bill Wentzel's grave—an' Bill was a hero," he muttered; "best let him rest."

Then he limped forward in the twilight.

HONOR THE SOLDIER DEAD.

Preparations are being everywhere made to celebrate Memorial day, which is nearing us with its sacred memories and tender influences. Time is carrying us steadily further away from the scenes of civil strife, and nature has covered the red-streaked battlefields of the nation with a carpet of verdure. The sound of the cannon and the clash of swords, the tread of mighty armies and the sobs of the brave boys on the tented field and of loved ones at home, grow more and more indistinct as the years go by and new generations come upon the scene of action. The bitter animosity which was engendered between sections has been mellowed, and the angel of peace, sweet, holy peace, spreads his white wings over the lakes and plains and mountains of the north and over the cotton fields and cotton beds of the south. Mighty changes have been wrought in thirty years. But a myriad of graves are among us, the same graves that were filled from '61 to '65. Chairs have been vacant in our homes during all this time; the empty uniform and the battered sword are still in our closets. We still remember and love the boys who went out from our loving embrace to face danger and death upon the battlefield. Year by year the graves become more numerous in the cemetery. Year by year the veterans grow grayer, and the strong man of '61 is marching with feebler step onward toward the great final reunion. Such are the only changes that the years have made in the features of Memorial day.

It is becoming in a people to remember the sacrifices of the soldier who gave or offered his life for them and their interests. Rome, proud, imperious Rome, forgot the men who had fought her battles, and reveled in luxury while some of them languished in prison cells. America is appreciative of her brave. Once a year she scatters flowers upon their graves, and all the time their memories are embalmed in her grateful heart. Any people who will pause to drop a tear upon the tombs of their dead soldiers, have reason to respect themselves and to claim the respect of others; and while we are remembering the dead our hearts will swell with thanksgiving that we are in the shadow of a flag of a united republic, whose different sections are animated by a common hope, a common inspiration and a common destiny.—Farmers' Voice.

The "Unknown" Dead.

The love of valor is as old as time itself and the soldier's truest monument is not chiseled of stone or marble; it is built of self-sacrifice, cemented with his blood. Say not "forgotten" if the humble headstone reads "unknown;" in the hearts of the people it will mean "hero."

THE BOYS IN GRAY.

BY COL. WILL L. VISSCHER.

'T WAS more than three decades ago—
A long, long time away—
That we were jolly
boys in blue,
Now we are boys
in gray.

A poet-friend has said of you:
"He's on the craft that sails
In glowing seas of constant youth,
Where boyhood never fails."

So at the end of many years
Along Life's rugged way,
The blue has mingled with the skies
And we are boys in gray.

The true and brave of all the hosts
That wore the Blue and Gray,
And fought for what they deemed the right,
Are done with war to-day.

The rosy, round-limbed Queen of Peace
Has broken War's array;
His hosts, disarmed, are silver-haired,
And all are boys in gray.

"And spring's fairest flowers
In gratitude strew
O'er those who have cherished
The red, white and blue."

The Boy.

The sun shone in at the east window. A mother's voice called up the attic stairs: "Silas, Silas, where's my little drummer boy? Time to march among them weeds in the posy field."

Swift came the answer, and there was sunshine on the woman's careworn face as she listened for the sound of that little drummer boy's feet and his childish voice calling:

"Yep. I've turned out, mother. Comin'. I'll make the enemy skedaddle—an' then I'll drum."

The neighbors said: "They never seen two folks set so much store by each other as Silas Blodgett and his wife, an' that now sence Silas was dead an' gone the little one an' the mother was jist wrapped up in each other, livin' there all alone."

"OUR FLAG."

Down into the kitchen clattered the boy's feet. Merry blue eyes were raised to true blue, thoughtful ones in a glance that meant much, and the boy ran into the garden, while the mother stepped quickly to and fro laying the breakfast table. This now old-fashioned mother, in her tidy "sprigged" calico gown and clean brown checked gingham apron, stepping briskly back and forth between stove and table in the one big "living room" made a pleasant picture. Breakfast started, she crossed the room quickly to a loom in one corner and began to weave; for the neighbors all agreed that "Widow Blodgett's rag carpets was wove better than any they had ever seen," and Neighbor Wagner said:

"I never did see nothin' so handsome as the hit-an'-miss pattern Wilder Blodgett wove for me—but I tell ye there wa'n't no hit-an'-miss about the weavin'."

So the busy hands worked on weaving a part of her daily "stint" before breakfast—weaving for bread.

Outside the birds and the boy whistled.

Soon the sound of a drum told the mother the enemy in her posy bed was routed by her brave little drummer boy.

The boy ran in to breakfast.

Down went his drum. Off came the soldier cap, and from it fell a flag—our flag.

The child ran around the room waving the flag above his head and watching its changing folds and colors.

"Let's have the flag with us for breakfast, mother."

The mother nodded and smiled. So the flag was fastened in the top of the old-fashioned castor.

They sat down to the table and the east sun just touched lightly the child's forehead and shone full on the mother's head as it was bowed reverently before eating the "daily bread."

The hungry child was full, always, of questions.

"Is God keeping father for us, mother?"

"Yes, deary," said the gentle voice.

"And will He keep him till—well, till we move out of our bodies and go up, up, up to the sky?"

"Yes, Silas."

"I should think, tho', He'd lend him to us, mother. Then father would take care uv us and you wouldn't hev ter work so hard; but I help take care, don't I, mother? But why don't God send father back? Yer pussies kum back, on risin' day in the spring, some uv 'em, but father don't never kum back. Why?"

"God knows best, my child," said the voice of the one who had loved and lost.

"Is father dead like them weeds?"

"No, child, yer father ain't dead like the weeds. Think always that he's like mother's plant yer love so much."

"O! I know—the livef'rever. Yep. I like that there posey. It's a brave 'un. It ain't afraid uv Jack Frost, and it lives f'rever and a day, don't it, mother?"

"Yes, dear," said the mother, slowly, as her thoughts flew back to the happy days when another Silas and she had planted that posy bed.

"What's the flag got three colors in it for, mother?"

"Because, my boy, every color means somethin'—somethin' fer you to be—somethin' that Washington was. That there flag uv ourn talks; listen, an' I'll tell you. The red says: 'Be brave.'"

The childish voice repeated: "Ther red says to 'be brave.'"

"Remember that ferever, my boy."

"What does the white say?"

"The white says: 'Be pure,' an' the blue says: 'Be true.'"

"The red,
The white,
The blue;
Be brave,
Be pure,
Be true.

"That's a nice rhyme, ain't it, mother?"

"Yes, my boy, an' it's more then that, too."

"Yep." The child looked up thoughtfully at the flag that had been draped around Washington's picture ever since he could remember, while his mother fastened the little flag in his soldier cap.

"Here we go, me an' the flag; no, the flag an' me, on the doublequick. Good-by, mother; guess I'll pick uh piece uv livef'rever fer teacher;" and off ran the child's feet toward the village school.

A HOG ORCHESTRA.

The Singular Exhibition Arranged for the Pleasure of a King.

During the reign of Louis XI. of France there was attached to his court one Abbot De Baigne, a man of considerable wit. The abbot was somewhat musically inclined, and delighted the court with inventions of odd musical instruments. One day the king, after having enjoyed a hearty laugh over one of these curious contrivances, and desiring to baffle this musical genius, commanded him to produce harmonious sounds from the cries of hogs. This seemed an impossibility to the king, and he prepared himself to enjoy the discomfiture of the abbot. Much to his surprise, however, the abbot readily agreed to produce them. All he required was a sum of money, upon the receipt of which he declared he would invent the most surprising thing ever heard in the way of musical atrocity.

He scoured the country and secured a large number of hogs, trying their voices as to pitch and quality, and finally, after having fully satisfied himself, he arranged the animals in a sort of pavilion richly decorated. The day of the trial arrived, and the king and his court entered the pavilion prepared for something, but greatly in doubt as to the success of the abbot with the hogs. However, there were the hogs, sure enough, and, much to the surprise and delight of the king, they began to cry harmoniously and in good tune, rendering an air that was fairly recognized. The abbot had arranged a series of stops that were connected with the hogs, and upon pulling one of them out caused a spike to prick the hog it connected with, making him squeal his note. The rest was easy, for by pulling out the different stops he produced the tune.—Philadelphia Press.

A Great Master Thief.

So long as Hind kept to the road his life was one long comedy. His wit and address were inexhaustible, and fortune never found him at a loss. He would avert suspicion with the tune of a psalm, as when, habited as a pious shepherd, he broke a traveler's head with his crook and deprived him of his horse. An early adventure was to force a pot-valiant parson, who had drunk a cup too much at a wedding, into a rarely farcical situation. Hind, having robbed two gentlemen's servants of a round sum, went ambling along the road until he encountered a parson. "Sir," said he, "I am closely pursued by robbers. You, I dare swear, will not stand by and see me plundered." Before the parson could protest, he thrust a pistol into his hand and bade him fire it at the first comer, while he rode off to raise the county. Meanwhile the rifled travelers came up with the parson, who strightway, mistaking them for thieves, fired without effect, and then, riding forward flung the pistol in the face of the nearest. Thus the parson of the parish was dragged before a magistrate, while Hind, before his dupe could furnish an explanation, had placed many a mile between himself and his adversaries.—Macmillan's Magazine.

How He Could Tell.

Some years ago, a man named Greenfield, living in New York state, killed his wife. He was convicted at the first trial, but the case was carried to the court of appeals, which reversed the findings of the lower court. Gov. Robinson then ordered a special rehearing to be held at Syracuse. Judge Daniels presided. When an examination of the jurors began, a curious circumstance occurred. One of the jurors declared that he had already prejudged the case. He was asked if he had read the printed accounts in the newspapers. He had not. Neither, he said, had he talked with anyone about it. He was accordingly excused. Judge Daniels, however, was not so easily satified. He sent the sheriff before the man left the courtroom to ascertain how he could reach a conclusion in a case when he had never read up on it or discussed it. "Why," he replied, "the lawyers made such darned fools of themselves examining the jurors that I knew the prisoner must be guilty."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A MORTAL COLUMBIA.

"HASN'T the pension come yet, grandpap?"

"Not yet, lovely; ye see, Uncle Sam's getting old and he's kind of forgetful."

An old man, with an empty sleeve pinned across his coat, and a tiny girl with a face, O, so much older than her wasted body.

"This is Memorial day, grandpap; I must go to town an' hear the band an' see Columbia an' the states an' hear the man talk about the eagle—he never talks about that eagle on other days, grandpap."

"You shall go, dearie—the money'll come to-day, sure, they said so; grandpap might a-had it long ago, but he wouldn't ask until the bank broke."

"And I'll wear my white dress."

"Yes, an' a new bonnet."

"Little girls don't wear bonnets, grandpap."

"Bless my lamb; she shall see the procession!"

"And next year maybe I can be a state, too."

The old man turns his head away. "So you shall. Lemme see. Rhode Island'll be about your size, won't it?"

"I'll be a great deal larger next year, grandpap."

"Of course, dearie—Pennsylvania, then."

A long silence; the scent of the syringa pouring in at the window and a nesting bird chirping in the eaves. At last the child stirs.

"I was dreaming, grandpap; I thought Columbia held me in her arms, she was so beautiful!"

"Yes, dearie, yes."

The child moans in her sleep now; he bends anxiously over her until she opens her eyes.

"Shall grandpap tell ye about Bull Run, dearie?"

"No; tell me about the band an'—" her voice sinks away

The old soldier, with despair in his heart, but none in his voice, tells once more the story of how they will go to town in the train and enjoy the Memorial day exercises.

Suddenly the child starts up, "Columbia!" she cries, "hear the band! Th' pension money has come, grandpap; see, here on the bed—all gold!" The morning sunshine has flecked the coverlid; she points to it.

There is a knock at the door, but the old man, listening to the child, does not heed it.

"Th' band, hear them 'Marching Through Georgia!' Oh! see, grandpap, I am—Columbia!" The voice is still.

The old man drops his head on the pillow. Some one touches his arm.

"There's yer pension papers, comrade, just come—Uncle Sam's remembered ye, at last."

He points to the quiet figure.

"Too late," he says.

A QUESTION OF DATE.

Miss Yellowleaf (sentimentally)—Ah, Mr. Sampson, it makes me proud to think that my father died fighting for his country.

They Did Not Die in Vain.

Drums and fifes and flags for Memorial day and roses white as honor and red as blood to cover the resting places of those who counted life not too dear to give it to their country. Calmly they answered to the roll call of the Great Sergeant, Death, and joined the vast encampment. To-day the world is better that such men have lived, and the children of the third generation treasure, as a priceless heritage, the memory of their deeds. The love of country shines more brightly for its baptism of blood—and so no brave man died in vain.

When the Past Is Present.

Memorial day, sweet with flowers and bright with sunshine; what a day for comrades to meet and fight their battles over! A day on which the past seems real and old songs are sung, old jests revived. How naturally the foot keeps step with the old refrains, how gloriously floats the old flag! That story of the charge of Seven Pines or Gettysburg—what hosts of memories it recalls! How the blood flies to the wrinkled cheek at thought of it and how the crutch keeps time to the rolling drums! The past is the present on Memorial day.

The Soldier.

The years passed on. Dark clouds arose. The drums and fifes werec alling in the village street.

That morning the sun shone on a brave deed—the Widow Blodgett was giving her all. Her hand trembled as she pointed silently up at the wall where the calm eyes of Washington looked down from under the red, white and blue. She wiped her eyes on her checked apron as she followed him to the door.

The mother and her soldier son paused in the doorway. One more kiss—a voiceless prayer on the mother's lips—a backward glance and wave of a soldier cap, and the man's feet marched bravely forth to meet what might come.

The tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet sounded drearily in that mother's ears, as she leaned over the gate and waved her apron and looked down the village street long after the tear-dimmed eyes saw nothing before them.

Brave Hearts and True.

How that mother worked on alone, weaving, hoping, praying—and watching for news from the front—sending tender, loyal, scrawling letters; and occasionally there came a brave word of cheer from Silas far, far away.

One morning a shadow fell on the floor as the widow's shuttle was bobbing to and fro with its busy clickity clickity click, weaving and hoping for news.

Then the village doctor's kind voice said: "Good morning."

"Yer carpet ain't quite done yet, doctor. Seems ez if I can't do my stent till after the mail train gits in, but I'll do my best. What? Yez didn't kum for the carpet? Then—O, doctor, what is it? Yer son ain't? Bad news? No, taint fer me, not my Silas, my brave boy."

The head dropped forward on the loom, and one hand tried vainly to push away the words.

The doctor brushed his hand across his eyes and tried again to read the words his son had written:

DEAR FATHER: Silas Blodgett fell at Shiloh. Break the news to his mother as best you can. Tell her Comrade W. sends these lines to her:

"Where the foremost flag was flying
Pierced by many a shot and shell
Where the bravest men were dying,
There your gallant Silas fell."

I found him, father, and gave him a drink of water from my canteen, but I saw he was going fast. He could just whisper: "Tell her—tell mother—her boy—died—on the field." I thought he was gone, but he said: "Tell her—the red—says be—brave—mother'll know, an' try ter be."

So they brought him home to his mother. May 30, 1894, the village doctor's grandson was leading some one who groped her way with unseeing eyes toward a grave in the churchyard.

"This feels like it."

"Yes, that's right, granny, an' they've put a flag on it to-day."

"Hev they? I can't see it any more, I'm glad it's there an' so would he be. Silas, he set great store by this here posy I've brought. It's liveforever—an' so I thought I'd plant a root fer him here to-day, an' then when I can't come no more it will be green an' fresh—an' brave-like."

So the loving, wrinkled hands, guided by the child, planted this Memorial day "posy"—the "posy" the dead soldier sleeping under the red, white and blue had thought long years ago was a "brave un."

THE BILL PASSED THE HOUSE.

The Soldier's First Battle.

His first battle! What soldier does not think of it to-day? The years have rolled backward; he feels again the exaltation of youth and the relentless determination to do or die. He remembers the grim irony of the man who had already "smelled powder" and had heard the song of the bullets about him.

He remembers, too, the thought of the dear ones at home, the prayer and then—the battle! His veins thrill as of old, he seems endowed with the strength of ten. He is not dreaming; no, he is living over the supreme moment of his life.

Remember the Living.

In strewing flowers on the graves of the illustrious dead, remember to cast a few upon the pathway of the living. The old soldier, perhaps crippled and poor, deserves gratitude as well as the comrade whose name is carven on a monument. He, too, offered his life to his country.

Again to the sound of fife and drum the gray-haired veterans of battles and campaigns keep time to the music that cheered them as they plodded through the mud or dust, under the glowing sun or drizzling rain, towards those fields where they fought so nobly for their country and the principles of liberty. Not now, as of old, do they march forth to fight, but they bear to the "bivouac of the dead" the tokens of love and memory, and lay them over the mounds beneath which lies the dust once sentient with patriotism and courage. Cornelia of old cast the dust of her murdered sons into the air, and in time there sprang from it, as from the fabled dragon's teeth, an avenger of their blood. Our newer, better republic needs no red-handed Marius to deal death to her enemies. She has laid the dust of her murdered sons on a thousand battle fields, and from it have sprung forbearance, mutual forgiveness and a patriotism bounded by no lines of politics or faction.

The veterans of her fields and camps sleep dreamlessly in numberless peaceful churchyards, and though their tombstones bore only the words: "He was a soldier of the republic," the epitaph would still be one more glorious in the eyes of his countrymen that any of the records of "storied urn" which tell not to the living the story of liberty imperiled and rescued. We honor the dead soldier as the living soldier, with our meed of praise. He stands to us not as the embodiment of a brute force of despotism, not as the stern henchman of war, but as the type of citizenship which in time of danger risks everything for his country's honor, dares and does all for her glory. Our standing army to-day would not cover one-fourth the shortest of our frontier lines; but in the hour of America's peril every artisan, clerk, farmer, every man able to raise a hand in her defense becomes a warrior for her honor. Ask the gray-haired veteran, laying so tenderly the emblems of immortality over the grass-grown grave of the dead: "What is the bulwark of our nation's might?" and hear him answer: "The strong arms and true hearts of her sons, the prayers and self-sacrifice of her daughters."

The red tide has ebbed from Shiloh, Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and the souls of brave men that it left dead behind it, the tears and groans that were the echo of its shot and shell, the heart-break and agony of widows and orphans, have risen to the throne of the Great All Father, and thence again human sorrow and suffering have descended to earth, robbed of pain and hideousness, and have fructified the seed of good lying hidden in the bosom of calamity and made it bear rich fruit to all the ages. Thus the nation's dead have become eternal. Every stride of the freed slave toward moral and intellectual liberty is the impulse given by their hands. Every sound of free and happy labor, where once the wailing of the oppressed was heard, is the Te Deum of their souls, every heart-throb of progress a pulsation from those silent breasts.

Let us then keep in memory their lives by this yearly pilgrimage to the shrine of glory and honor—the soldiers' graves. Let us lead our children by the hand to the cemetery, and, as Hamilcar caused his son Hannibal to be led to the altars of the gods, that he might swear there undying hatred to Rome, let us pledge our children to eternal love of freedom. Let us sit with them at the feet of the veterans, and, as they tell their stories of stricken fields and dreary marches, listen to the pean of patriotism that swells through even the humblest of those tales, and refresh our souls as from living fountains.

We thank God for Peace, with all her blessings, her happy homes, her hum of commerce—but let us be grateful also for a war which revealed to this nation the greatness of her sons. No longer does the proud south stand aloof, seeing in the sons of the north the progeny of puritan and peasant; no longer does the north view the sons of the southland as partakers of worn-out theories of the aristocracy of blood. The scales have fallen from the eyes, and we are brothers where once we were foemen, sons of the same divine Liberty who stands on the highest mountain top and in the lowest valley of our land, challenging the world to love her by the calm dignity of her mien and the noble ideals she creates. Let the strains of Dixie be mingled with our anthem, for there is no longer any south or north, but one union, girt by seas and lakes, one country, reigning in the hearts of the people, one hope for us and for our children.

When the last veteran shall be gathered to the breast of earth and shall speak only with the dumb eloquence of these myriad mounds, the lesson of his patriotism shall still be repeated, and with each recurring season the gathered sweetness of the first fruits of the springtime shall be brought to these sacred shrines as emblems that as long as the sun shines to call forth the hidden life from the soil, as long as the rain falls and the dews bedew the verdure in the hills and meadows and the sky arches above us, so long shall the liberty the soldier loved be cherished by the nation as its dearest possession.

Once a Year.

SPRING FEVER.

A "State of Mind" Which Comes with the Birds and Flowers.

It Is Easily Cured if One Only Has the Means to Follow His Inclinations—A Sort of Migratory Malady.

As the sun grows stronger and the last lingering snowdrifts become gray, dirty streaks, as the earliest spring birds return and the brown earth steams and swells beneath the midday warmth, there comes to us a restless longing for something different from the ordinary life, which is perhaps the survival of a migratory instinct transmitted from a long-forgotten ancestor who changed his skies with the changing seasons. Call it by whatever name we may, "spring fever" or "bad blood," this state of mind exists and needs a cure.

There is no better remedy for it than to yield to the feeling, just as the birds and beasts do, to burst our bonds for a little while and to spend a day, a week or a month, if we can, "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife." It matters little what the excuse may be that we make to ourselves and our business associates, whether it is to go fishing on the opening day or to collect birds or wild flowers or to take a long bicycle ride; any excuse is a good one which for a time frees man or woman from the restraints of everyday life and gives opportunity for communion with nature, now just stretching her arms after her long sleep.

Although this restlessness comes to everyone except the most hardened business man, it does not come to all at the same time nor by reason of the same causes. One man may recognize its first symptoms as he walks through the crowded streets and feels a warm, soft air of spring blow upon his face; another may be stricken as he walks through a city park and sees the swelling buds of the soft maple or elm; a third may sit at his desk dreaming for an hour over a letter containing some chance remark which sends his thoughts a thousand miles afield, or yet another may find the sweet poison in some spring odor or in the voice of a newly-come bird. Whatever its cause, all know the symptoms of the disease and all know the remedy.

Let him who dreams of brown, foam-flecked streams, whose waters are kissed by the swollen catkins of bending willows and boarded by sprangling alders, make ready his rod and start for the trout stream. There he will perhaps catch some fish, but whether he does or not, he will find what is of more worth to him than trout, though he may not know it. He will see the newly-come sandpiper wading along the shallows of the stream, and the water thrush and the red-poll warbler sedately marching by the water's edge; the little tortoises scrambling along the bottom, and the muskrats diving in the quiet places. He will hear the merry gurgle of the blackbirds, the clink of the jay, the tumultuous cawing of the mating crows and the far-off screams of the soaring hawk. He will stretch his legs in a long day's tramp and will come to his resting place at night honestly tired out, and with an appetite such as he has not had for months.

Or, if his dreams be of Florida; what more easy than to take a train and find himself in a day at the long white beaches where the surf thunders unceasingly, where the sun is ever bright and warm, where the waters are bluer than the sky above them, where light-winged seabirds sail and dip and where the man may turn back the pages of 20 years and at once become a boy again, running barelegged over the sand or wading in the surf to capture shells or fish, winning at the same time the rest and the new strength which mean for him, in the months to come, better work and more of it than he could have done without this interval of transformation from man to boy.

The mountain climber or the big game hunter has his attack of the spring fever as other men do, but it does not send him away, for he knows that his time is not yet. But he plans, oh, he plans! He orders new guns or new ice axes and new climbing shoes; he studies maps, he corresponds with guides, and, above all, he talks over the contemplated trip with his chosen companion. They discuss elk countries and sheep countries and the best way to get a bear; or they figure on unclimbed mountain peaks and talk of glaciers and crevasses and bergschrunds and couloirs and cornices. And it may be that out of all this talk and planning and anticipation they get more pleasure than they do at last out of the trip.

There are many to whom these outings are their sole recreation, pleasures anticipated for one-half the year and looked back on for the other half, and the number of such is constantly increasing. It ought to increase, for they who really delight in such things do better work and make more useful citizens than those who pin themselves down to the unending round of narrow business life.

The laying aside for a time of the daily routine, the mental rest, the delight of again seeing beautiful things, long known yet ever fresh, and of seeing other things which are wholly new—all these combine to pour into a man's system a new vigor which will enable him when he returns to his work to do that work with an increased interest, intelligence and earnestness. From the point of view of mere dollars and cents, it is worth every man's while to take two vacations each year, one in the spring and one in the fall. Such play spells pay for themselves in the better work a man by reason of them can do through the long months of cold and heat.—Forest and Stream.

THE CELLAR CAMPAIGN.

The Season Has Arrived for Its Vigorous Accomplishment.

As the spring draws on and "that tired feeling" so graphically portrayed by the vendors of various patent medicines takes possession of us, our thoughts, which fain would revel in swelling bud and freshening green, must, if we are housekeepers, be brought to the depths of our habitations, and the needs of the cellar—the very source and inspiration of many of our corporeal woes—receive our first attention.

In the large cities, where supplies are bought in limited quantities, the cellar debris is of a different character from that which litters the ground apartment of farm or village residence. Here repose in "mute inglorious ease" dismantled packing boxes, incapacitated coal scuttles, punctured wash-boilers and dislocated boards, and all too frequently a collection of "bones and paylins that the cat has dragged down unbeknownst to me, mum," and which from all appearances should long ago should have been relegated to oblivion. How, then, can the interests of health be better conserved than by devoting the first bright sunshiny spring morning to a vigorous onslaught upon this subterranean catch-all of our dwellings?

We can all realize the danger that lies in wait for those who neglect this important stronghold of disease. From an ill-kept cellar rise poisonous exhalations that permeate the house. Malaria here lies in wait for victims, and from here diphtheria and typhoid fever and rheumatism send out their impalpable but deadly miasma. For, although disease germs may originate in the cellar, they are no stay-at-homes, and soon make their way from cellar to attic, leaving destruction and even death in their wake.

Arming ourselves, therefore, for the conflict in cap and jacket and old gloves, let us head our light brigade and proceed to fall upon the enemy right valiantly.

The first attack should be in the nature of a rout, and no quarter should be shown.

If a few potatoes are left, sprout them, and lay in a clean basket or box; then fall upon all other valetudinarian vegetables that skulk in corners and behind boxes and barrels, and give them decent sepulture in the ash receptacle. Then sweep down the cobwebs; send the most agile member of the corps with dustpan and brush into the bins, with instructions to "spare not" empty barrels and boxes. Sweep up the dirt, and let no tender sentiment withhold the avenging hand from veteran and rusty foot tubs, teakettles and coffee mills.

Boxes and barrels that are not needed can be chopped up and added to the kindling pile; pork barrels can be emptied and scalded; butter tubs scraped and washed. Brush off the swing shelves; wash out the cupboards where the canned fruit is kept, and scrub the cellar stairs. Then, with a bucket of lime and an old broom, if you have no brush, give walls and ceiling a thorough coat of whitewash. That will sweeten the air and bring cleansing and healing in its wake.

This being satisfactorily accomplished and a half peck of unslaked lime placed in an open box to absorb the moisture from the atmosphere, the troops may be withdrawn for rest and refreshment, assured that their first victory in the spring campaign is comfortably perched upon their banners.—N. Y. Times.

REYNARD IS VERY CUNNING.

Tricks by Which the Fox Catches His Prey and Escapes His Enemies.

No other still hunter can travel so quietly as a fox, and mighty few men are as crafty as the four-legged hunter when it comes to a matter of getting meat. Foxes have been seen in England, slipping from bush to bush, crawling and creeping after a feeding hare, for all the world like a man stalking a deer. The fox cannot catch a rabbit in a fair chase, but its food is mostly rabbits, in spite of their fleetness. But at no time does it display its skill so well as when running for life, with a pack of hounds on its trail.

Lord Willoughby De Broke writes to the Badminton Magazine to tell how a tired fox made straight for a flock of sheep in a pen, ran through them, and in the end escaped. Olaus Magnus, archbishop of Upsala, wrote a book called "Historia de Gentibus Septentrionalibus," of which an English translation exists. This book tells of a fox that leaped from back to back of a herd of goats. As the dogs could not follow, the fox escaped.

A curious trick of English foxes is to leap as high as possible, grasping a tree branch with their teeth, hold on till the hounds have gone on, and then, dropping to the ground, escape. This is similar to the trick of the American fox, which jumps into a tree and rests on a branch, but American dogs are not such fools as English dogs. They gather around the tree and howl until the hunter comes.—N. Y. Sun.

WIVES WANTED.

Inducements Offered Women in Northwestern Canada.

A Scheme for Encouraging Female Emigration to a Region Where There Is a Superfluity of Bachelors.

A great deal of money has been spent by the Dominion government in the last ten years to encourage immigration to Canada, and most of the schemes, to judge by the last census, have been more or less futile. Now the chief government organ here comes forward with another project to people the great northwest. This paper, referring to a statement by the land commissioner of the Canadian Pacific railway to the effect that the great want of the northwest is more women, says that the bachelor life of the farmers in Manitoba and the northwest makes them dissatisfied; that they soon get discouraged and write to their friends in Great Britain about the cheerless, unattractive lives they are leading; and that it is well known that these letters have been widely circulated in the English provincial press, and have had the effect of turning off the tide of emigrants to other shores—to the United States, Australia and South Africa.

"If these men," the paper adds, "had been mated with plucky wives, the stories of their failure would not have been written home. They would have found life in the northwest tolerable and would have taken a pride in overcoming their difficulties. A few thousand women of the right kind would probably do more to make that country than any other influence that could be brought to bear upon it just now. Suitable immigrants of that kind can find employment, and are not likely to have to go long without husbands."

This led to a new scheme for peopling the northwest. It was started here a few days ago, and a committee is now hard at work on the details of the plan. A preliminary meeting was held to discuss the matter, and a committee was appointed to report on the feasibility of sending girls to the northwest from the overcrowded centers of population of the older provinces of Canada. "Girls wanted" was the motto of the meeting; but, when one of the gentlemen present unwarily declared that part of the plan was to send girls out west to make wives of them for the prairie farmers, the ladies present took up arms against the matrimonial part of the scheme. They said that this was too delicate a matter to deal with, and strongly objected to associating any marriage scheme with the proposed female emigration to the west. No society, it was contended, could successfully arrange marriages between people whose modes of living had been so different, and no such plan was likely to succeed. While the ladies were willing to take part in any movement to encourage the emigration of girls to the northwest, and find employment as domestic servants for them there, they absolutely refused to have anything to do with any scheme having for its object the shipping of a train load of girls to the northwest to be married to the farmers of that part of the country. There was also the possibility of ill-mating couples, and the ladies apparently did not care to undertake the responsibility of so delicate a matter as the promotion of matrimony among the farmers. It was soon made apparent that the matter would have to be handled very cautiously, and that if the movement succeeded the question of matrimony would have to be kept in the background and the idea of marriage left to the emigrants themselves to work out in the good old-fashioned way. Lady Aberdeen, the wife of the governor general of Canada, wrote to Dr. W. E. Bessey, the organizer of the meeting, that this was one of the questions to come up for discussion at the meeting of the women's council to be held in Montreal.

S. M. Jones, secretary of the meeting, deplored the flow of girls to the cities from the country, and thought they should go to the northwest and make homes for themselves and be independent, rather than come to the centers of population and work for a pittance. But one of the ladies thought that the girls in the cities were not fit to make farmers' wives. Mr. Jones ventured the remark, rather unfortunately, that they might as well emigrate to the northwest, for the men in the cities would not marry them, anyhow, and the lady snappishly retorted that "the girls would not marry them."

A good deal of cold water has been thrown on the scheme, but the committee is hard at work, and believes that it will accomplish something. There is certainly a great lack of the softer sex in the Canadian northwest. It is estimated that there are in that part of the dominion between 40,000 and 50,000 more males than females. The organizer of the movement, who is confident of the practicability of the scheme, recalls the days in the early history of French Canada when the French king regularly shipped boat loads of girls to become the wives of the pioneer settlers in Canada. The railways would, it is thought, furnish free transportation for any number of girls who would be induced to go to the northwest, and it is hoped that government aid will be given to the scheme. Some who are unfavorable to the movement contend that the bachelor tillers of the soil in the northwest have no need for women, and that they prefer to do their own work. But there are very few who share in this opinion, and it is generally believed that the men up there know how to appreciate the companionship, sympathy and support of women.—Toronto Cor. N. Y Sun.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THINGS TO BATHE WITH.

We have them all—everything but the tub and the water. A perfect bath is one of the luxuries even poor people can enjoy. Only a few things are necessary to make the bath a "perfumed pleasure." Brushes, of course, and sponges. The right sort of soap toilet water of the proper odor. A little sea salt, maybe, to soften the water. A little borax isn't bad. These things and many others we have in profusion.

Impoverished * Blood

whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms—the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

Bovinine

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. ABSOLUTELY PURE

TO INTEREST YOUNG PEOPLE.

A Series of Sociables Arranged by the Hope Chapel Members.

It was an appreciative audience that gathered in Hope chapel last evening, when the first of a series of social gatherings was held. The object of these events is to try and bring people to the chapel who have no connection with any other church or Sunday-school. The gathering was given under the auspices of the adult classes of the Sunday-school.

The programme opened with a few well chosen remarks by the pastor, Rev. G. K. Newell. He then introduced Prof. Krieger, premier necromancer, of New York city. This gentleman, with the assistance of one or two from the audience, kept those present in roars of laughter during the entire evening with his sleight-of-hand performances and many other tricks. He was followed by the Misses Mabel Benner and Lillian Epner, who gave a pleasing vocal duet, with piano accompaniment

At the conclusion of the first part of Prof. Krieger's programme, ice cream and cake was served. Then came another vocal duet by the Misses Mabel Benner and Lillian Epner, and then the balance of the evening was taken up by Prof. Krieger in his mind reading act.

Impoverished * Blood

whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms—the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

Bovinine

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

—"Having used Hood's Pills for a considerable time and having found them very beneficial to the system for disorders of the stomach, I am pleased to recommend them to all my friends. Mrs. T. Berk, 139 4th st., Elizabeth, N. J. Hood's Pills cure indigestion.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

TO INTEREST YOUNG PEOPLE.

A Series of Sociables Arranged by the Hope Chapel Members.

It was an appreciative audience that gathered in Hope chapel last evening, when the first of a series of social gatherings was held. The object of these events is to try and bring people to the chapel who have no connection with any other church or Sunday-school. The gathering was given under the auspices of the adult classes of the Sunday-school.

The programme opened with a few well chosen remarks by the pastor, Rev. G. K. Newell. He then introduced Prof. Krieger, premier necromancer, of New York city. This gentleman, with the assistance of one or two from the audience, kept those present in roars of laughter during the entire evening with his sleight-of-hand performances and many other tricks. He was followed by the Misses Mabel Benner and Lillian Epner, who gave a pleasing vocal duet, with piano accompaniment

At the conclusion of the first part of Prof. Krieger's programme, ice cream and cake was served. Then came another vocal duet by the Misses Mabel Benner and Lillian Epner, and then the balance of the evening was taken up by Prof. Krieger in his mind reading act.

FAITHFULNESS OF A DOG.

Saved the Life of a Seriously-Wounded Officer.

Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, in her story of "The Guard," a body of young men who followed "The Pathfinder" into the civil war and made a brilliant record for their courage and gallantry, tells a pathetic story of a dumb beast who also was loyal and courageous:

While the guard—a body of cavalry—was drilling one day near St. Louis, a little fox-terrier followed one of the men, Herr Wisa, a Hungarian officer, going with him to camp. He could not be driven away.

The men all made a pet of him, and named him "the corporal;" but though he was affable to them all, he made the Hungarian soldier his companion and friend, sleeping at his feet at night, and following him by day.

When the guard made their memorable charge at Springfield, Mo., the Corporal charged with them, keeping beside his master's horse throughout the battle. Herr Wisa was wounded, and fell, apparently dead, in a thicket. The corps swept past, his horse fled, wild with terror, but the little Corporal nestled close beside him, licking his face and trying to rouse him.

There the dog remained through the bitter cold night. When morning came he ran to the distant road, and by his frantic barks and cries induced a passer-by to enter the thicket.

The man, seeing only a cold, stiff body, supposed the soldier to be dead, and would have hurried on; but the Corporal furiously drove him back, and would not be silenced until he saw his master move and speak, when he crouched, dumb and contented, at his feet.

TREES AND MORALITY.

The Park System as Related to the Higher City Life.

The city of the future will not be treeless and shadeless. When a city has practically all outdoors to lay its new streets on, these should be wide enough to allow a row or more of trees in the middle, with green grass and comfortable seats, with open spaces where roots can find air and receive water, says Dr. Rothrock, the forestry commissioner. When we come to city trees as related to city morals, we open a wide subject. We have denounced the saloon none too hard, but just here let us halt a moment. Are all those who frequent the saloon so inherently bad and besotted that they go there because they prefer it to anything else it is possible to offer them? I do not believe it. If a man has no other resting place when weary than a crowded, overheated, untidy home on the one hand, or an open, more comfortable saloon on the other hand, is it strange he takes the latter? I do not justify the tendency. But I do suggest that more open air parks in your cities would save many a man and woman who is not already depraved. Those who bring about betterment of tenement-houses and those who secure small parks within a desert of brick walls deserve and will receive the gratitude of their fellow men. Don't put a premium on vice and intemperance by any lack of public comfort. A distinguished philosopher once said that "a nature which had lost its fondness for the woods has lost its manhood."

BAD FOR THE NERVES.

Life in Sky Scrapers Responsible for a Peculiar Disease.

A nervous condition, bordering on prostration, to which the doctors have not as yet given a name, has lately been observed to affect persons who work many hours a day high up in the modern sky scrapers. The ailment, says the New York Journal, resembles nervous prostration, except in the principal symptom, which is a condition of intense restlessness, and, as one of the victims to the new complaint expressed it, "a singular desire to scream or to get down to the earth quickly."

A sensation of relief is noticeable when the patient is taken to grass, so to speak, which leads some physicians to the belief that the change in the rarity of the air, slight as it is, has a peculiar effect upon certain very sensitive organizations. Others think that the constant trips in the elevators cause a slight disarrangement of the nerve centers, which brings on the condition referred to. In any case there is no doubt that a new ailment has come among us with the advent of the sky scraper.

Second-Hand Sermons.

A brisk trade, so it is stated by a church contemporary, is driven in the supply of second-hand sermons to young clerics. Should these clerics decline to deal further with the venders, the latter threaten to bring the matter before their superiors. Because of these threats, it is alleged that many clergymen prefer to pay any sum that may be demanded from them in a manner which practically amounts to blackmailing. It seems that the usual clerical name for these purchased discourses is "cat's-meat sermons;" they are sent in carefully concealed envelopes, and they are suited to all tastes and occasions. "First" sermons and "farewell" ones are equally kept in stock. The writer, who warns the clergy against these cat's-meat productions, says that congregations "find you out in a month."—Pearson's Weekly.

A King at Golf.

Khama, the South African monarch, who has been visiting his friends at the British court, attempted a little game of golf. It was near London, and when the "driver" was handed to the dusky chief he remarked that it would make a nicish knobkerrie. Suiting his action to his words he seized the "driver" and whirled it round his head, just failing to brain a caddie, who was fool enough to stand near. After knocking up a lot of turf Khama drove the golf ball at least 17 yards into a bunker. He did the 18 holes in 257.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—Photographic plates are not affected by light at a depth of 553 feet in the ocean.

—It is asserted by local surveyors that the government survey located about 4,500 acres of "good farming land" inside the limits of Klamat lake, Oregon.

—Two men intoxicated and driving a large gray horse hitched to a wagon loaded with dynamite were arrested in Willimantic, Conn., the other day while driving at a gallop.

—Wooden trestle structures in the United States aggregate 2,000 miles in length and represent an expenditure of $60,000,000. As they must be replaced about once in nine years the annual outlay is about $7,000,000.

—A cow has been known to recognize the picture of a calf; and the tiger is said to be drawn to a trap by a picture of a companion. The timid horse, however, takes no notice of a picture, and the cat will not spring at a painted bird.

—Mrs. Hugh Allen Spencer, a young woman of Jackson, Ky., was busily engaged in her household duties, when some children rushed in and announced that a fire had broken out in the kitchen. The excitement was too great for the woman and she passed into insensibility, dying in a short time.

—The shark, which is the most voracious of all fishes, will, if opportunity offers, readily snap up a bird. But as sea birds are far too wary to be often caught napping, the shark's diet in this form is practically confined to birds that have been wounded, or which have fallen into the sea from exhaustion, such as migratory and other land birds.

—An old liquor bill against Ethan Allen is in the possession of a resident of Fairhaven, Vt. It is dated April 15, 1789, and goes to show that, like some other sturdy heroes of revolutionary fame, Ethan Allen had a fair capacity and liking for liquor. The bill contains a number of items of "three pence for flip," and "two shillings" for bottles of rum.

—A cat belonging to a resident of Cameron, Mo., is nursing a litter of wild rabbits and caring for them with motherly solicitude. Several kittens were born to the cat a week or so ago, but they all died. A neighbor found a nest of very young wild rabbits about the same time and they were put in charge of the cat, with the happy result told.

SOME OF THE NEW HATS.

Tulle Is Used for Trimming and, of Course, Flowers Are Plentiful.

There are plenty of picture hats among the new styles, and the tulle ties and loops come in nicely as artistic additions to the costume. You can have tulle ties on any kind of a hat. It is not necessary to have a bonnet to put them on. Green and violet tulle are the prettiest colors. An exquisite little hat is made of yellow straw—straws, I was going to say, for the hat is a peculiar arrangement of little straws, set side by side, with a violet at the end, forming an edge of violets all around the brim. Tulle loops almost conceal the crown. Another dream (dream seems an especially appropriate term for a tulle hat) has a combination of two shades of green tulle. There is absolutely nothing on the hat—a round, black straw—but some standup frills of light and dark green tulle around the crown. Almost anybody can have a hat like this. All that is necessary to do is to buy an untrimmed hat and cover it over with tulle. A flower or two to stand up at the back or at the left side of the front is a great addition. The tulle ties are knotted in a large bow under the chin. Flowers underneath the brim are set at the back, where most of the hats turn up. In the case of "nose hats" that tip down over the face, the brim is not always bent up at the back, but instead the whole hat is propped up, as it were, with a bank of flowers and ribbon. Small button roses are very pretty for the bandeaux under the brim.

Flower hats are fashionable for women of all ages. A violet bonnet is suitable for an elderly lady with white hair, but made in another shape it befits a golden-haired lassie quite as well. —N. Y. Mercury.

A Warning to the Gents.

The annual ball of the Occidental Lyceum and Sporting society was at its height when the master of ceremonies, a gentleman in full dress vest and trousers and sacque coat, and four breastpins in his shirt front, vaulted airily into the middle of the ballroom floor and said, with an ominous glitter in his eye:

"I am informed by some of the ladies present that some of the gents from over Dead Man's Gulch way air just a little bit too exuberant in carrying out the figgers of the dances and when I sing out: 'Swing yer ducksy-daddies!' these gents swing their ladies clear off'n their feet. Now we want things to go off happy and harmonious here tonight, but if any more complaints of this sort are made some o' the Dead Man's Gulch gents 'll be likely to go home on a shutter; ye hear me! Choose yer pardners fer the next kadrille an' all set a-standin'!" and they all "set" to the tune of "Granny, Will Yer Dog Bite?"—Detroit Free Press.

An Apology.

A man who has a reputation for being very careless as to his toilet was elected town clerk in one of the small towns in this state some time ago, and the local paper thought it would be a good joke to announce that: "Mr. Makeup will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." On reading the notice Mr. Makeup was furious, and demanded a retraction, which the paper accordingly made the following day, in this fashion: "Mr. Makeup requests us to deny that he will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." And still Mr. Makeup was not pleased. How hard it is to satisfy some people!—Our Boys and Girls.

CHEAP PAINT.

The Kind That Soon Fades and Rubs Off.

Good Paint That Should Be Put On from the Inside, Instead of from the Outside.

You can make a very cheap paint by using an ordinary whitewash. It will cling to the house and barns just as well as it does to the upper walls of your rooms. To be sure it does not last very long and it rubs off. Perhaps you have seen young girls, and some not quite so young, try the trick of putting the color of health on their cheeks by using some red powder or paste. But it does not last long and it rubs off. Yet we can hardly blame them, for who does not like to see the rosy color of robust health, and who is not pained at the sight of the white lips and colorless cheeks? We advise all girls, whether old or young, to paint their cheeks if they are pale. But be sure to paint them with something which will last and will not rub off. Put the paint on from the inside, not from the outside.

The elements which give color to the blood are minute bodies, called the red blood corpuscles. If there is not enough of these in your blood, then you are pale, weak, without appetite, probably thin in flesh and quite nervous. In fact, everything seems to go wrong in the body when there is a deficiency in these life-giving red blood corpuscles. An abundance of these little bodies make rich blood, red blood. The circulation is improved and the bright tinge of color comes again to the lips and cheeks.

You have only to consult medical works to learn that cod-liver oil is one of the best remedies known to increase the number of these red corpuscles of the blood. Eminent medical writers declare that this is one of the most marked features of cod-liver oil. We prefer to recommend to you the oil after it has been broken up into minute particles, as in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites. The stomach bears it better in this form, and it makes the oil very palatable also. The hypophosphites are added because the nervous system needs a tonic, something to build it up on a permanent basis. If you are pale, do not get much benefit from your food, mentally and physically unable to work, simply dragging along day after day, take Scott's Emulsion. It puts color on the cheeks. It is a color that comes to stay, and you cannot rub it off.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trademark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

MY STRANGE PATIENT.

By William T. Nichols

[Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Co.]

"I am going to drive to Bassettville this afternoon at two o'clock to have a prescription filled," I hastened to say. "I should be delighted to have you come with me. You couldn't have had an opportunity to enjoy the scenery when you went over the road yesterday. Please come, do; the views are very pretty."

"But my aunt?" said she, doubtfully.

"It will do her good The fact that I advise you to leave her for a few hours will prove to her that she is already beginning to pick up in this splendid, vitalizing atmosphere. Besides, as we ride along, I can post you on the treatment mapped out for her."

There was quiet amusement in her eyes as she listened to this ingenuous plea, but she permitted it to end her hesitancy—which was all it was designed to accomplish.

"The day is too alluringly charming," she said. "I can't resist the temptation. I shall be ready at two."

As I turned from the porch I had a glimpse of Mrs. Weston's face disappearing through her doorway, and from its cheery smile I conjectured that the good soul heartily approved of the little scene which had taken place across the way.

XI.

Hiram Jones, the new farmhand, certainly had one merit—he obeyed orders. Precisely at two o'clock my horse and buggy stood before the office door. The fact that he was on time made me study the fellow's looks, as one gazes with interest at some prodigy developed in an altogether unexpected place. He was stout and well built, with little of the slouching clumsiness of the typical plowboy. His face, though far from stolid, was not attractive, and several days' growth of beard helped to lessen such slight claims to comeliness as it might have possessed. His garments were coarse and stained, and his boots were old and worn.

"You're prompt," I observed, as he relinquished the reins. "It's a good plan."

"It's easy 'nough," he answered, gruffly, and, turning on his heel, walked away.

At another time his manner might have annoyed me, but just then I had other interests in life than speculations as to the crudities of farm-laborers' civilization. Miss Gray was ready for the start, and in a moment or two the bay was leisurely beginning his afternoon's work, to all appearances the sleepiest old roadster in the state. I had thought the vehicle well enough in its way, but now I noticed the dust on its body and the cakes of dried mud on the tires and spokes, and a suspicion crossed my mind that horse, carriage, and very possibly driver contrasted oddly, and not to their advantage, with the trim, well-dressed young person beside me.

"I believe I can guess your thoughts," I said, not too amiably. "You're marveling at my fiery steed. Am I right?"

"In part yes," she answered; "but only in part."

"And what do you think of him?"

"That he is very quiet and gentle, and very well suited to a physician's uses."

"So far so good; but is that all?"

"About the horse, yes."

"May I risk asking if your thoughts turned from him to his master?"

There was a little pause before she spoke, and, looking at her out of the corner of my eye, I thought her cheek flushed a bit.

"It was merely a question which suggested itself," she said "I was wondering whether the evident fitness of the horse for his work meant that his master looked upon this village as his permanent field."

It was now my turn to hesitate.

"Really," I said, at last, "it is a hard question to answer. I can say neither yes nor no. I can't get beyond the present. May I not be content with that?"

"Do you think it is enough for you—for any young professional man?"

"But if it satisfies me?"

"Does it?"

"At this particular instant, yes; at other times, when I can't get away from myself, no."

There was another pause, and when she spoke again it was to ask me the routine to be followed by her aunt. While I described it she listened as soberly as if she had no room to doubt that the invalid was close to death's door. Before the recital was finished we had begun to traverse one of the level stretches. I tightened the reins, and the bay lengthened his strides; a chirrup or two and his lazy air was shaken off and his hoof-beats rang quick and sharp upon the hard road Away we went at a pace far below his best, but one which would have left most of the local trotters hopelessly in the rear. Pulling him up when we reached a rise in the grade, I turned to the girl a little triumphantly. The swift motion had brought a new light into her eyes, and the rush of the wind had heightened her delicate color.

"That was delightful," she cried. "Let me confess at once, I misjudged your horse cruelly. He has wonderfully exceeded expectations."

"The brute has redeemed himself easily," said I. "Would it were as light a task for the man."

"Perhaps the man has not been misjudged, after all. But come, Dr. Morris, you've told me almost nothing of your adventures for the last two or three years. Surely, you must have had some before coming here?"

"'The short and simple annals,'—you know the line. The city was not generous; there is nothing more to tell. Believe me, you are fortunate, indeed, to escape any risk of the monotony of a humdrum existence. I envy you the variety of scene and surroundings which has fallen to your lot."

"As if there could be no monotony in variety; as if one could not grow weary of it!" she cried. "Why, Dr. Morris, it is the superlative of monotony. Many a time I've been tempted to recall approvingly the growls of an irascible old Englishman we met in Spain. 'Madam,' said he to my aunt, 'take my word for it, all hotels are bad, but some are worse than others; all strangers are obnoxious, but some are pestilential; all sight-seeing is a weariness of the flesh, and the more one has of it the greater the burden becomes.'"

"And Mrs. Loring?"

"His vehemence startled her, and she fled at the first opportunity."

"Yet she could not have heeded the tirade to advantage. In all sincerity, let me say that until she consents to settle down quietly for a considerable time there is not much hope of effecting her cure. You must have observed that on a journey she seems to be at her best, but that when the trip is ended there is a reaction, and after a few weeks she is off again, finding in the renewed excitement relief which, in turn, has to be paid for at a high rate. When her greatest need is rest she applies the spur. If ever there was a victim of the travel habit, she is one. Can she not be persuaded to give her recuperative powers a fair chance to assert themselves? One can't do better than to let nature alone sometimes. This is plain talk, plainer than I should like to address directly to your aunt; but it is due to you, for in many ways you can help to put it into practice."

"And I will help only too gladly," said the girl, earnestly. "Please be assured of that."

"Is it a bargain, then?"

"Indeed it is."

"May it be a successful one," said I. "And now, Miss Gray, you may be pleased to know that from this turn in the road can be had the only view of Bassettville which warrants a claim of beauty for the place."

We drove into the town and turned into its principal street, halting in front of the shop of its solitary druggist. While I stood before the counter, waiting for the prescription to be made up, Sam Carpenter sauntered in.

"I kinder wanted to see ye," he remarked, after the weather, the state of trade and town politics had been discussed. "Tain't much, but maybe yer'd like to know about it."

"What's the trouble?" said I.

"Wall, a couple o' days ago a chap come ter my stable an' hung round till we got ter talkin'. He didn't seem ter have no special bizness agitatin' him, but he did seem all-fired cur'ous. Pretty soon he got round ter that old brewer from Charleston, South Car'liny, you're doctorin'. Seemed mighty interested in him—too mighty interested, I reckoned. When a neighbor's boy asks me how my apples is gettin' on I put it down ter friendliness, but when I catch him up the tree I call him too blamed affectionate. So as this chap was tryin' ter pump me, I tried ter pump him, but I guess neither of us got any more satisfaction than the schoolmaster did when he tackled the parson's Hebrew book, thinkin' it was Greek. Struck me you might as well know about him, though."

"What was his name?" I asked.

"He didn't say."

"Can you describe him?"

"Hefty fer his inches; old clothes, trousers tucked in his boots; kinder springy in his walk; more dirt than tan on his face. I kept an eye on him, an' saw him, after hangin' round a spell, steer fer the Rodneytown road."

"Thanks for the information," said I. "Probably he is some tramp who has heard yarns about my patient, and, having nothing better to do, asks questions to keep talk going. Nevertheless, I'm much obliged for the tip."

"That's all right," Carpenter responded, with the air of a man who feels that he has done his duty. "Say, how's the hoss suitin' yer?"

"Excellently. It's a pity, though, there's so little style about him."

"If he had style, ye'd never got him fer the price ye paid. He ain't the kind of a hoss a pretty girl likes ter hev hitched in front of her house on a Sunday afternoon—that's a fact—but fer plain week-day use he's O. K."

"He's hard-mouthed. That's a drawback. Quiet as he is, you wouldn't call him a lady's horse, would you?"

"No, I wouldn't," said Sam, oracularly. "A lady's hoss—that's any good—is as sceerce as an angel hoss; and angel hosses as scarce as angel men."

The ride back to Rodneytown was hardly as pleasant as the first half of the trip had been, for both of us were inclined to taciturnity. Miss Gray doubtless was busy with thoughts of her aunt, while for me the afternoon was spoiled by Carpenter's tidings. It had been a luxury to forget the house on the knoll, if only for an hour or two, and here was this news, very probably of no moment, yet enough to remind me of my thralldom, to drag me back to a realization of the fact that Lamar had the first claim upon me. Of course, he would have to be told of the incident of the suspicious stranger, and told at once, with the possibility quite within reason that he would decide to seek a new asylum without delay. In that case I might find myself bidding Mrs. Loring and her niece an unceremonious adieu, or I might be left behind with my chief source of revenue cut off In either event I should be a heavy loser. And, worst of all, I could devise no way in which to shake off my helplessness. A hint as to the identity of the stranger had suggested itself as soon as Carpenter attempted to portray the man. So far as it went, his description fitted the new farmhand—just as it probably fitted half the tramps in that region. While the story threw suspicion upon the fellow's motives, and might prove most useful as a warning, it was not, of course, in itself sufficient to warrant a demand for his discharge. The outcome of all of these unsatisfactory reflections was a determination to lay the matter before the person most interested, and to abide wholly by his judgment.

Early in the evening, anxious to be done with a bad business as speedily as possible, I visited Lamar and told him all I had heard or surmised. He listened to the story with the closest attention, asked a few questions as to the appearance of the man under suspicion, and then, puffing calmly on his eternal cigar, sat in silence for several moments, seemingly undisturbed by the possibility of a new complication in his affairs.

"Well," said I, at last, no longer able to restrain the question, "what are we to do?"

"For the present—nothing. As it is said: 'Forewarned is forearmed.'"

"But this uncertainty must be cleared up. You know better than I can why this man may have come here, provided, of course, that he has any designs upon you. It's all theory, you understand, but it is strange that he should be working for Mrs. Weston at very low wages, unless he has some particular reason for desiring to be in this neighborhood. Were employment his only object, he could do far better in the village. The more I think it over, the plainer it seems he wants to be where he can keep an eye on this house."

"It is probable."

"Then," said I, puzzled by his indifference, "can't something be done to checkmate him?"

"It is not necessary. He is of this country?"

"At least, I'll warrant English is his native tongue."

"The case, then, is simple. He labors under a mistake."

"But even that mistake may cause trouble," I protested.

"For the present, not at all. In the end, it is possible," he answered, as coolly as if the matter was of slight concern.

"What are your directions?" I asked, still by no means satisfied with his philosophical view of the case.

"Observe him well, study him as you choose, but do not attempt to disturb him. These things will suffice. Even if he intrudes here, there is no cause for alarm; he shall be suitably received."

And with one of his grim smiles, Lamar bade me good night.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

W. Gordon Williams, of East Front street, has a new Eclipse wheel.

Miss Clara Buckle, of Sandford avenue, has purchased a new wheel.

Clarence Thorn, of East Second street, has accepted a position with the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

Miss Lizzie Dunn, of West Fourth street, now rides a Waverly wheel which she purchased recently.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company will close at 10 o'clock Saturday morning and open after the races at the Crescent Oval.

The Jersey Wheel Company has taken the agency for the Victor wheel. They received three Victors yesterday.

The West End Cycling Club, a new organization of bicycle riders living in the vicinity of Hope chapel, will go in a body to Milburn tomorrow.

The diamond prizes for the Crescent Wheelmen's big Decoration Day meet are now on exhibition in J. Hervey Doane's window on Park avenue.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company will open their store tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock and close about noon. It will then be opened in the afternoon.

The following sales of Richmond wheels are reported at the Jersey Wheel Company's salesrooms: Maynard Evans, H. E. Ryder and Carl Brown.

Harvey Thorn, of the City National Bank, has a new Crescent purchased from J. Hervey Doane, down-town agent for the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

While training on the Crescent Oval yesterday morning A. P. Simmonds had a heavy fall, badly cutting his knee. He expects to be able to ride tomorrow, however.

The New York police authorities think that a wheel that was stolen there a short time ago has been brought to this city. It was a Columbia, model 44, No. 2,895.

Meredith Dryden, Albert E. Woltmann and Fred. H. Freeman make a great trio on their wheels. They now all wear gray bicycle suits exactly alike, and have a little private club all of their own.

A. H. Barnett, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, attempted to break E. H. Hand's record for the Crescent Oval of 2:09 2-5 on Wednesday afternoon. The pacemaking was very poor, owing to a misunderstanding, and his time was only 2:20.

Another little training trial was ridden at the Crescent Oval Wednesday afternoon and A. H. Barnett, riding from scratch, managed to finish second. J. Kay won from the 100-yard mark. The other starters were Louis Darling, 70 yards; J. H. Lake, 40 yards; G. W. Scribner, 125 yards; and Charles Carpenter, 70 yards. Lake fell.

Captain George R. Bilyeu, John H. George and H. J. Keeler, of the Century Wheelmen, of Philadelphia, stopped in Plainfield Wednesday on their way over the route for their century run which is to take place on June 16th. F. L. C. Martin will act as pacemaker in the run from Plainfield to Trenton.

F. L. C. Martin will be unable to act as pacemaker in the century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey tomorrow for the entire distance on account of the rush of business, but will pace the run between Westfield and New Brunswick. The run passes through this city at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Aaron Neuman, of Clinton avenue, bought a new Hunter wheel Wednesday of which, of course, he was very proud. He went to Perth Amboy yesterday and was caught in the rain. He came home in the mud and water after the storm and when he reached here his own family hardly knew him or the wheel. He was forced, in some places, to ride through water in which his feet and pedals went at every turn. He was completely covered with mud.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I noticed in your columns last night a challenge issued by Kissam and Mulford to ride a quarter-mile race with any rider in New Jersey. I suppose this fast tandem team feel safe in issuing such a challenge, as two men against one have the advantage. Nevertheless, to make things interesting for them and to satisfy their wants, I will accept their challenge. The understanding is that the race shall take place on the Crescent Oval, May 30th, Decoration Day, the race to be a quarter-mile flying start. Hoping Messrs. Mulford and Kissam will not get rid of their fever for riding before May 30th. I remain, yours very truly, Ernest T. Hand.

Fred J. Pope will ride in the club race at the Crescent Wheelmen's race meet tomorrow afternoon.

C. N. Rydell, of the Crescent Wheelmen, expects to ride in the Irvington-Milburn road race tomorrow morning and in the Crescent Wheelmen's meet in the afternoon.

H. H. Maddox, "Gentleman Harry" as he is called, the well-known Asbury Park crack-a-jack, arrived in Plainfield yesterday to take a preliminary look at the Crescent Oval, on which he will make his debut as a professional tomorrow at the Crescent Wheelmen's races. The New York papers have been telling how "Gentleman Harry" was going to ride in the Irvington-Milburn race, but it is Plainfield and not Milburn that is to see that fast rider compete. Maddox is in excellent condition and is looking very healthy and will make a lively time for the other competitors.

INS AND OUTS.

The new uniforms for the Plainfield Athletic Club have arrived. They are very handsome. The date which the club had with the Dunellen Baseball club has been broken by the latter club.

On the morning of Decoration Day at ten o'clock, the Watchung Park baseball team will play with the Dunellen team here. The home team is made up as follows: Wm Jeffray, 1b; Chas Woolston, catcher; Walt. Conover, pitcher; Arthur Smith, 2b; Mort. Slater, 3b; Al DeCamp, s.s.; Frank Dentz, l. f.; James Decamp, r.f.; Robt Jeffrey, c.f.

The Plainfield Athletic Club intended playing the Dunellens two games of baseball tomorrow, but Manager Swalm received word from Manager Palmer of the Dunellens a few days ago saying the games would have to be cancelled on account of their not being able to get the players together. Instead the Plainfield A. C. will play the Y. M. C. A. team of Westfield at 3:30 p. m., at Westfield. The batting order of the P. A. C. will be: Carman Sutphen, l.f.; W. Swalm, 2b.; Lederer, c.f.; Sprowl, ss.; C. Sutphen, p.; M. Sutphen, 1b.; Firstbrook, 3b.; Muir, r.f.; Mumford, c. The uniforms arrived last night from H. H. Kiffe & Co., and are satisfactory in every respect.

LAWN TENNIS.

A special meeting of the Board of Governors of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club was held yesterday evening at the residence of A. H. Atterbury, of West Seventh street. Several new members were elected and the affairs of the club talked over. The erection of a house near the golf links was also considered.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will hold a tennis tournament on their courts to morrow. There will be no social entertainment on the courts or at the golf links in the afternoon, on account of the rose tea at the seminary. Chairs will be provided at both places, however, and all will be cordially welcome. A formal opening afternoon tea will be held later in the season.

FOR THE HELP OF A MISSIONARY.

Warren Chapel Endeavorers Contribute to a Good Cause.

The Junior Y. P. S. C. E., of Warren chapel, held an entertainment last night in the chapel which was attended by an audience that completely filled the large room. The entertainment was given for the benefit of Miss Rachael Mair, who is laboring in Africa as a missionary.

The programme was a very pleasing one and consisted of scripture reading and prayer by Rev. J. O. McKelvey; song by the young people, "Brightest and Best;" dialogue, "The House that May Built," by a number of members of the society; recitation, "The Foot That Gets Tired," Frankie Whitely; song, "I will tell Jesus," by the Juniors; recitation, "Nellie's Gift," Clara King; talk, Rev. J. O. McKelvey; song, "Bless Our Mission Band," by the society; recitation, "Little Boy Blue," Frankie Whitely; drill and recitations, "Spring Cleaning," by girls from the Junior society. The programme closed with the singing of a hymn.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Joseph A. Blatz, of Somerset street, has recovered from his recent illness.

Edward F. Randolph, of West Eighth street, will spend Saturday at Nyack, N. Y.

Isaac C. Harris and family, formerly of this city, have returned to take up their residence here. Mr. Harris has been in business in Philadelphia but has just sold out there.

—The display of fine white hats, parasols, gloves and fans that White's is displaying is most attractive. Miss Daly, of the millinery department, is showing a very handsome assortment of summer hats that will interest the ladies. The show windows are very prettily draped with white mull and are well worth seeing.

MUSIC OF A HIGH ORDER.

Prof. Conde's Pupils Acquit Themselves Favorably at Their Recital.

A very successful recital was held last night at the Y. M. C. A. Hall by P. Ludwig Conde and pupils, assisted by Messrs. Alfred E. Holmes, baritone; W. Paulding DeNike, 'cellist; Clarence L. Eick, pianist and organist; and R. DeRago, harpist. The soloists of the pupils, Miss Blossom F. Randolph, Clarence Mills and Willie McKillop, gave evidence of being well advanced and reflected credit on their teacher. Mr. Holmes sang in his usual excellent manner and responded to several encores, his selection from Faust being especially fine. Mr. DeNike's playing was very sympathetic, pure and with fine expression.

Clarence L. Eick, well-known as one of the finest organists in Brooklyn, assisted with unsurpassing skill in the different numbers. His piano solos were a marvel of artistic expression.

Miss Clyde Burnett proved herself a fine accompanist. The best number was, undoubtedly the Intermezzo Cavaliera Rusticana for violin, 'cello, organ, with harp accompaniment. Sweeter and more expressive music could not be heard. The concert finished with a selection by the pupils string orchestra. Prof. Conde can be justly proud of his pupils.

Enthusing High School Students.

A special Decoration Day exercise was given in the chapel of the High School this morning; several musical selections were rendered by the school, besides two declamations entitled, "The Invisible Heroes," by F. Wilbur Cornwell, and "Through Gettysburg to a Higher Freedom," by Charles A. Squires. Commander Jos. T. Dunham, of the G. A. R., was present and told the school of his own experience in the army and gave some statistics relating to the cost of the war, both in money and in human life. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell was also present and made a patriotic address. His words were so well chosen and delivered in such an enthusiastic manner that they stirred the heart of every young American, and filled all present with a patriotic spirit.

Happily Mated.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Brimbley to Warren A. Davis, of 513 East Sixth street, was performed last evening at the home of the bride by Rev. W. L. Johnson, of Westfield. Miss Ida Brimbley, sister of the bride, was bridemaid and William Burden acted as best man. The bride wore a silk dress neatly trimmed and carried a bouquet of white roses. She also wore a wreath of apple blossoms. The bridemaid was also gowned in white and carried pink roses. About forty guests were present to enjoy the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were kindly remembered in the way of presents. They will reside at 513 East Sixth street.

A Fairy Queen Concert.

A fairy queen concert was given last evening in the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church on West Fourth street, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the repairing of the church. The attendance was all that could be desired and the sum of $40 was realized. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Peters, Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. A. White, Mrs. M. Cannon and A. Henry.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Bicycling at the Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon.

—A festival will be given at the Washingtonville chapel this evening.

—A load of hay slid off a wagon on West Front street this morning, in front of the Babcock building, blocking the street for sometime.

—Master Blanchard Moore Fosgate was presented with a handsome American flag at the Memorial Day exercises at the Bryant school this afternoon.

—Van Emburgh & Son will close tomorrow, Saturday, Decoration Day, at 12 o'clok noon. They will be open this evening for the accommodation of their customers.

—A pleasant way for you to spend your afternoon and evening tomorrow will be to attend the picnic to be held under the auspices of the Catholic Club at Vail's grove. A good time is promised all who attend.

—Decoration Day being a legal holiday there will be no distribution of books at the Public Library. Reading room hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 6, and 7:30 to 10 p. m. Art Gallery hours, 10 to 12 a. m. and 3 to 5 p. m.

—The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Frisbie, wife of Mail-messenger Frisbie, occurred last night at her home on Sycamore street, after an illness of three weeks. She was thirty-three years of age and beside her husband she leaves a child. The funeral services will take place Sunday afternoon from the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church at three o'clock.

Mrs. Robert Rushton, who was taken to the Flower Hospital some time ago for treatment for cancer, is reported to be a little better. It is doubtful if an operation will be performed. A number of friends will visit her on Sunday.

COUNTY ENDEAVORERS.

Officers Chosen for the Year at Elizabeth Yesterday.

About sixteen Junior Christian Endeavor Superintendents of Union county met in the Greystone Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon and listened to two papers delivered by Miss Mabel Pruden, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Langstroth, of Rahway. An informal discussion followed, after which it was decided to hold the next meeting at Roselle, Thursday, July 30th, when papers will be read by Miss Wolfrez, Mrs. Altman and Mrs. Clard, of Elizabeth.

In the evening at the same place the County Christian Endeavor Union met and listened to an address by Rev. Mr. Francis, of Westfield. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mr. Humphreys, Elizabeth; first vice-president, Fred Williams, Rahway; second vice-president, Fred Smith, Plainfield; secretary, A. B. Wilson, Rahway; treasurer, J. M. Hawkins, Plainfield.

The county banner was awarded to the German Moravian Society, of Elizabeth. They have twelve members and all were present. The meeting closed with a consecration service, led by Rev. Mr. Kerr, of Elizabeth. The retiring president, E. E. Anthony, of this city, introduced the new president during the evening.

Mrs. C. C. Burke and family, of Ravine road, have taken up their residence here for the summer after spending the winter in New York.

Carman Sutphen, of West Second street, who cut an artery in his right hand a few days ago, is able to use that member now, but is still suffering much pain.

—Beginning next Monday and continuing till Thursday there will be an exhibit of new books as the Free Public Library.

—Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of Monroe Avenue chapel, will preach at Grace M. E. church Sunday morning in exchange with Rev. H. J. Johnston.

IS THE THING TO SUIT YOU.

The old gentleman with decaying sight often sighs:

"Oh for one hour of youthful joy.
Give back my twentieth spring,
I'd rather laugh a bright haired boy
Than reign a gray haired King."

But if he had his vision restored to enjoy the beauties of nature and read his favorite newspaper as of yore, by going to Collier's and having his glasses fitted to suit his sight, he needn't repine, for he is a magician in restoring and mending sight. Defective vision is only neglect when Collier is ready to relieve you. 103 Park avenue. Established 1869.
